A VALOROUS FOLUNTEER.

Translated from the Filish for Romance. "You are sober, general; you seem preoccupied, sad, quet when with me. Can it be from lack of interest?"

Taus spake the profity Countess Alvis Zelinska, in a soft tone of reproach, accompanied by the most gracious of smiles, to a French officer sitting by her

This young officer whis the brave Cal-viniac, an Auvergness Highlander, who, before his 30th year, thad won already upon the battlefield this epaulettes as a general of cavairy. They happened to be alone in a vast salon at one of the old palaces in Warsaw, the home of the countess, who had been left a widow at 22. A large fire burned in the enormous fireplace of rose marble, upon the pediment of which the arms of Zelinska were finely sculptured.

The month of January, 1807, the time of this story, was remarkable on account of its severity. It is well known that Napoleon, after the battle of Jena and the overthrow of Prussia, conceived the gigantic idea of a continental block-ade and, instead of enjoying in peace ade and, instead of enjoying in peace his triumphs and his glory, wished to impose by force on all Europe the effec-tive execution of his projects against England. For that purpose he resolved to pursue the remnant of the Prussian troops to their last intrenchment, and to go to meet the Russian army, which was still intact, and under the command of General Benningsen.

"You are still mute, general," con-tinued the countess. "Have I lost your confidence?"

"Pardon me," replied Calviniac. "You must excuse me for being dreamy and preoccupied. You know the emperor has withdrawn from me the command of my brigade for a month, be-cause I expressed too frankly my opinion of his indifference to the sad condition of your unhappy country. The emperor has punished me severely-and here I am, far from my brave soldiers. I was quite happy in my disgrace, since it gave me the pleasure of being received by you, in the midst of the most glorious epresentatives of Polish nobility, as an ally, as a friend. You, the energetic and enthusiastic patriot, have kept up my spirits, have permitted me the pleasure of seeing you, of confiding in you my cares and dreams, of admiring you, of lov-"Ah! general!"

"Yes, I am going to say of loving you. But am I worthy of expressing such a sentiment, when I ought to make a strange confession? You see me sad and preoccupied, because there is in me a violent combat. I am happy, intensely happy; yet at the same time, in spite of the charm which chains me by your side, I would like to be elsewhere. The inaction to which I am condemned crushes me. I curse the severity of my sovereign. I would like this instant to mount a horse, cross Warsaw, and rejoin the army—which means to leave you, to flee from your heautiful eyes, in order to see, face to face, the horrible mustaches of the Cossacks of Benningsen.'

You cannot advise me to remain mactive, in the midst of luxury and comfort, in a rich palace, when the dragoons whom I commanded yesterday, camping now in the snow, now marching in the mud or crossing the Vistula by the bridge of boats, are going once more to brave the dangers of war for the glory of France and perhaps for the liberty of Poland!" The countess remained standing beore the general, listening eagerly to his words, and expressing by her passionate looks the admiration which this martial ardor inspired in her. "I love you thus!" said she. "No matter how much I may miss you, feel, alas! that you ought to go. thank you for having given me a day. A day is much in these troubled times. A day is much in these troubled times. Yes, general, go-go where duty calls you; resume the command of your troops, and return victorious." "Thanks, countess. You understand me. After leaving you I wish to ren-der myself worthy of your noble friend-ship; but see to what an extreme an implementation of the sector. implacable will has reduced me. I have no right to resume my arms and rank. To go to the emperor, to implore his pardon, to seek to reinstate myself in his favor, would be a bold and useless The emperor has no time for audiences, and then, ought I to deny my sentiment for Poland; to retract the words which I spoke so freely? Oh, no! Today less than ever. Therefore, I am forced to seek a way of resuming the service without being recognized by my superiors. I have reflected for some time, and when you reproached me for my silence, I was just making a definite resolution. I will present myself to the outposts as a Poland countryman, desirous of fighting for his country." "Why! general, do you wish to en-list as a simple soldier? You will have to obey, instead of command, to march in the first ranks, to struggle hand-tohand with the enemy! It is to certain hand with the enemy! It is to certain death you voluntarily run. Oh! What have I done? I, who have rather en-couraged you in your resolution! I, who admire you only to lose you! I was wrong. I was misled by blind patriot-ism. Remounce your projects! It is your duty to execute scrupulously the orders of the emperor."

"No, countess, my duty is to be where the French are exposing their lives-to brave the dangers that they run."

"Even breaking your word?"

"I do not violate my oath since I enlist as a volunteer." You are immovable. Do therefore as you wish. My best wishes accompany you, and I will pray for you. God grant that your temerity may not be punished! Think of me sometimes."

She extended her hand, which he kissed passionately, while she turned aside her head to conceal the great tears which glistened like diamonds in her

February 8, 1807, at daybreak, the French and Russian armies met. The troops of Benningsen covered the mountain tops in front of the little town of Eylau. The emperor relied upon this village, the cometery of which he occu-pied with the guard. The vast plain which separated the two camps was gloomy and desolate. A white shroud of snow, recently fallen, entirely covered the hard ground. The sky was gray and gloomy. The rays of the sun could not penetrate the thick, frosty atmosphere. Upon the left, a little back of Eylau, was massed the cavalry of Murat. In the first rank, among the dragoons of General Grouchy, was a simple cavalier, sword in hand, without a distinctive mark, without a decoration, but superb in his martial and determined bearing.

Calviniac's heart beat fast; at last he was going to fight as a simple soldier: to devote himself obscurely, lost in numbers; to sacrifice his life, without ported him to the salon of the palace at Warsaw where he had said adieu to the that he could hear her voice, could see her smile. template, in all its horror, this immense plain covered with the dead, the dying and the wounded, the blood making horrible spots on the white uniforms of the French soldiers.

Murat. The Countess Zelinska, for it was she, had a presentiment of the re-sult of the battle, and following her feminine instincts, she sought among the wounded for her lover. After a day of vain search, worn out and anxious, almost desperate, she conceived the idea of seeking shelter in the convent of the Benedictines. Seeing that it was oc-cupied by the wounded French, she still had strength enough to search the large halls. Asking explanations, giving details are seen to be a series of the second seco details, she finally discovered the little room where, upon a camp-bed, was ex-tended, not her brother, as she said, but he whom she loved more dearly than a brother, since she had witnessed his chivalry and patriotism. The countess was not recognized by Calviniac. Delirium had robbed him of his reason. This condition lasted for several days, during which his devoted nurse watched over him constantly. Finally, the fever abated, and the surgeons declared that, if he avoided all imprudence, recovery was certain. One morning Calviniac, while taking some nourishment, regarded with at-tention the young woman who served him with so much devotion. He thought that he recognized her features, but her dress puzzled him. He feared that it was a dream or an hallucination. However, hearing her speak, he trembled, and remembered the sweet interviews at the fireside in the palace of Warsaw. He made an effort to collect his confused ideas, and raising himself upon his couch, called feebly:

"Alvis!"

The countess, unable to repress an instinctive movement, turned toward the sick man. She approached him; their eyes met. They regarded each other a long time, without speaking, but this mute language told the story and joy radiated from their faces.

"How came you here?" asked Calviniac. "It is you who have cared for me like an angel from heaven! It is you who have saved me! Let me repeat to you that word which you stopped on my lips the day of my departure. Let me tell you that I love you." He extended his thin, pale hand, which Alvis took in hers. "General," responded she, "my con-duct is a confession that my words do not try to deny. My life belongs to you. Your name shall be mine and your country shall be my country."

TAMMANY HALL TO LOSE A BIG TIGER

He is Becoming Altogether Too Solid with the Administration - Predictions Regarding the Message-A Vigorous Chinese Lobby.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.-A morning paper has the following: Bourke Cockran is the first of the Tammany hall tigers to make the leap. A story not to be doubted comes over from New York today that Cockran has put off from Tammany hall and will soon be on the deck of the administration. Tammany men express great indignation at what they describe as Cockran's descrtion. Cockran has not formally severed his relations with Tammany hall and there are those here from New York who say that if he does not expulsion by order of the hall will be the program. It is said that Cockran has been consulted by President Cleveland about the New York appointments, especially as to the appointment of the postmaster of New York city. Prominent Tammany men have suspected that Cockran would withdraw from the organization or be forced out of it ever since the Fourth of July, when he was not invited to speak, while Congressman J. R. Fellows was shoved to the front.

Predictions About the Message.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.-The chief inwashington, Aug. 3.—The chief in-terest in the coming congress centers in the president's message, and as to that no one whose opinion is of value claims to have any definite information. It is true that a New York newspaper recently published in double leaded col-umns what is claimed was a summary of the president's views, but that newspaper has a reputation for fakes, and the publication attracted no attention and was not even commented upon by its colleagues in the city of publication. except in terms of derision. There are two general views among the leading democrats as to the character of the president's recommendation. Mr. Carlisle is said to be of the opinion that the president will restrict the recommendations of his message to the special session, to the financial and silver ques-tions only, and that he will make his suggestions as strong as it is possible to make them. Mr. Crisp, on the other hand, says frankly that in his judgment the president will not confine his message to silver, but that he would hardly fail to call attention in it to the subject of the tariff.

Chinese Lobby Will Be on Hand.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 .- It is alleged that the Chinese are coming to time with a live and vigorous lobby, and will raid the capitol buildings early Monday morning. There is to be war to the knife, and report has it that it is to be pushed in up to the hilt. The Six Companies, it is said, are backing this, and every means possible will be taken to effect the repeal of the Geary law which passed the last congress. If reports that come from the Pacific slope can be relied upon a lobby of gigantic proportions, equalling that of the famous Credit Mobilier in 1871, when Oakes Ames said he placed a great deal of money "where it would do the most good," is to infest the coming congress with the sole purnew butes. Them's my rights, and I pose of getting quick action for its money and wiping from the face of the congres-"Prisoner, hain't you jest a leetle too sional record everything offensive in inese legislation the Chinese legation elicited the fact that all seemed confident that a repeal of the Geary law will be one of the great humane acts of the Fifty-third congress.

an impetuosity and an assurance which astonished his comrades, struck most formidable blows, overthrowing all obstacles. The Cossacks were soon dispersed or rendered unfit for battle. Then the Russians, in order to delay the victorious cavaliers, hurled again their bullets and shot into the melee, without caring for their own. Grouchy fell, his horse having been pierced by a ball. Calviniac dashed in, released his general, who happily was not wounded, and gave him his own horse, then, bestriding a horse without a master, he rushed again into the fight. At this moment Murat and his eighty squadrons, horsemen, dragoons, cuirassiers, charged at full gallop into the Russian infantry. After a long resistance and several assaults they yielded, fleeing from all sides terrified, bloody and seeking a refuge in the neighboring woods. Calviniac, in the midst of this frightful confusion, fought with an audacity which nothing could stop. Each blow struck, over-threw and killed. His right arm was injured by a ball, but he seized his sabre in his left hand and continued his course until the sound of the clarion forbade his further action. The work of this cavalry, perhaps the most astonishing in the history of the empire, decided the victory.

The next day the emperor, in order to honor in some special manner the heroic squadrons of Murat, wished to survey the front of this admirable company of horse-Grave and sombre, after a victory so hotly disputed, he passed, at a slow gallop, before the soldiers, saluting the ag lowered before him. Arriving opposite the Eighth regiment of dragoons, he slackened his pace and said to Grouchy, who followed him: "Who is that cavalier in the first rank,

He strangely resembles Calviniac." "He is a Polish volunteer," responded Grouchy. "He was engaged several days ago, and has fought like a hon. saw him at work, and I do not know of one more worthy a reward."

The emperor approached the tended Polander. "Well, my brave fellow, said he, "I have the pleasure of congratulating you upon your courage. One of my generals, Calviniae, recently took the liberty of criticising my actions. I have deposed him. You may replace him. I shall have then at the ead of my dragoons an officer worthy of them, whom I consider a compatriot and a friend."

He resumed his course, followed by his escort of superbly uniformed genorals.

The days which followed this battle were employed in removing the dead to the shore of the Vistala near Warsaw. 16 8,000 They were transported on sledges across the vast plains, followed by flocks of crows. Some, whom the guard would not permit to be moved, remained in the 5,500 1,825 convent of Eylau, now transformed into a hospital. Among them was General 300 Calviniac, who was very ill with a fever. He had abused his strength. After having fought all day, his arm in a sling, he was still at his post of honor; 1,900 but at night, when the excitement of the struggle and the emotion of triumph were somewhat calmed, his wound, which had reopened, caused him violent pain. Fever set in. The surgeons thought amputation would necessary, but knowing that the had not remained in the h and that the bone was not injured, they decided to wait a few days.

Happily, a woman watched near him. young and beautiful Polish girl, wearing the graceful costume of the peasants of Ukraine, had presented herself to the outposts, saying that she sought her brother, a volunteer in the cavalry of inquired the judge. "Hain" it puttin' this 'ere camp to a good deal of extra trouble for no real benefit? Whar are we goin' to get a biled shirt, for instance?"

"I dunno, but we got to hev enc. Do you s'pose I'm goin' to bring up in the other world with this old red shirt on?

They won't allow me to stake a claim or set up a shanty." "How are you goin' to be shaved when we hain't got no razor in camp? We kin furnish you some grease and a comb, but thar can't be no shavin.' "

"Got to be," replied Hank. "I hain't goin' over the divide lookin' like a wolf with his winter fur on. And as fur grease, I want reg'lar bar's ile. I bound to look jest as purty as I kin." "Zeke, will you lend him yer butes?"

asked the judge. "Naw! I could never feel easy in 'em ag'in!

"Then I don't hang!" retorted the prisoner. "Mind you, boys, I hain't denyin' that I killed Steve, whom everybody knows was a provokin', cantankerous cuss and orter been killed long ago, and I hain't kickin' as to what will follow. I'm jest stickin' out fur my rights. S'posin' any one o' you was goin' to ar-rive in the other world as a tenderfoot, wouldn't you wan't to look fairly decent?

"That's so, that's so," mused the judge. "In course it'll be known that you cum from Strawberry Hill, and in course we'll hev a pride in fittin' you out in decent shape. The prisoner will be removed while we hev a talk."

We had a talk. We couldn't get a white shirt, a new rope and a razor anywhere within 100 miles. And, as Hank had observed, Steve Brown was always saying mean things and provoking quar rels and wasn't of much account. After discussing the pros and cons it was de-cided to overlook the offense and let up on Hank, but after telling him our decision the judge said: "But don't do it again, Hank. It are the opinyun of some of the boys that you were too darned particklar about the biled shirt, and others that you were right about wantin' to make a decent appearance on the other shore, and so we decided to call it squar. Next time, however, we'll hang you with a mule rope and in yer old duds and let ye run all the chances." "Waal, boys, fix it to suit yerselves and it'll suit me," carelessly replied the prisoner, and court was adjourned and

A Great Public Work.

Nothing is more remarkable than the vast contrast that exists between the noise, the froth and the foam of politics in France, and the quiet, silent, determined way in which every enterprise connected with the defense of the republic or the prosperity of its colonies is undertaken and carried out. One of the most noteworthy of these, says the New York Tribune, is the construction of the harbor and fort of Tunis, which have just been completed by the French government. The capital of Tunis is separated from the sea by a lagoon twelve miles long, which was not even naviga-ble for small steamers, while the port itself, La Goulette, was so shallow that passenger boats had to remain at a dis-tance of about three-quarters of a mile out at sea. Within the short space of five years France has entirely metamorphosed this state of affairs, and the largest steamers can now advance be-tween two superb jettics, lighted by electricity, and moor alongside the newly constructed quays, which at pres-ent constitute the finest ornament of the city city.

Christians Executed by Turks. LONDON, Aug. 3 .- The question . Turkish outrages upon Armenian Chris tians was again brought up in the House of Commons yesterday. Sir Edward Grey said that what little information the foreign office had on the subject was very painful. Fifty-six people have been arrested, and of this number seventeen had been condemned to death and many of the others sentenced to long terms of imprisonment. Subsequently the sultan of Turkey commuted the death sentence of all but five of the prisoners. These five men have been executed with'n the past two or three days. From the evi-dence that had been given at the trials, it was clear that two of the men exccuted, and probably more, were innocent of the charges made against them. The British representative in Constantinople had used his influence to convince the Ottoman authorities that the trials were unfair, but his efforts to have the wrong righted were in vain.

Thought He Was Hypnotized. PITTSBURG, Aug. 3.-"The Dutch and Irish out in Colorado have hypnotized me and tried to rob me of my silver mines," said J. E. Gorman, a resident of Chicago, to Police Inspector McKelvy last night. Gorman is insane and was arrested while making a speech to a street crowd. He said he had just come from the west, where he was compelled to abandon his mines and seek work in the east. He looked like a man of re-finement. The police telegraphed his relatives and he was provided with a railroad ticket and sent back home. Ho said he had visited every city between Denver and New York trying to get away from the people who hypnotized him, but could not break them off. The inspector thinks his mind has become unbalanced through excitement over the silver flurry in the west.

Mosquitoes in War Times. "Speaking of mosquitoes," said the man on the veranda. "there were issued some of the troops in the castern part of the south in the course of the civil war in this country, from 1861 to 1865, mos-guito nets, which might be called indiquito nets, which might be called indi-vidual nets, for they were one to a per-son. These nets, when set in position, were about six feet long, three feet high, and three feet wide. Tapes ran along the top edge and extended in loose ends at the four corners. When the net was set up for use these corner tapes were tied around four sticks, little corner posts, driven into the ground. It might posts, driven into the ground. It might to some seem amusing, the idea of issuing mosquito nets to troops engaged in actual service; they might think that men in constant danger of being bitten by cannon balls and bullets would have little fear of mosquitoes, but this would be merely the superficial view of persons not fully acquainted with the mosquito.
