BEE NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS

Inspector Bennett Arranging for an Inspection of Insurance Risks.

WHERE THE RATES WILL BE INCREASED

Conditions Under Which an Advance Will Be Made-The Latest Order Issued by the Inspector-Of Importance to Business Men.

H. Bennett, inspector of the western Iowa nsurance companies, issued a proclamation about ten days ago ordering a raise of 20 per cent in rates of fire insurance throughout the district of which he has charge. Considerable talk was caused among the business men, as it was a topic in which they were all vitally interested. Mr. Bennett accompanied his communication with a list of figures which went to show that all the fire insurance companies in the country ·had been doing business at an average loss of 2 per cent a year, the premiums being entirely used up by the losses and expenses of running the business. The companies were only enabled to pay dividends to the stockholders from the interest on the investments which the assets were put.

Yesterday he issued another order sus pending the previous order making the horizontal advance of 20 per cent, but the order states explicitly that this action is not to be onstrued as an abandonment of the inten tion to change the rates so as to make the underwriting branch of the insurance busi-ness self-sustaining. The following is the substance of the new order:

Text of the New Order.

All mercantile and manufacturing risks in his district will be reinspected as fast as tracticable and each risk rated on its merits or demerits in accordance with approved and discriminating schedules; the extra charges or area, height, condition, hazards and ex-posures may, in some cases, increase the rates to per cent.

by per cent.

It is a fact that a majority of the mercantile and mannfacturing risks in the United States have defects which create or tend to the rapid spread of fire, which can be prevented by a very little care or the investment of a merely mominal sum of money in improvements.

All agents are, therefore, earnestly requested to co-operate with the commanies and ino co-operate with the companies and in-spector, by making a critical examination of isks, to see that the prunises are kept clean, to co-operate with the companies and inspector, by making a critical examination of risks, to see that the premises are kept clean, free from greasy rags and paper, oily waste, sweepings, straw, hay, litter, boxes, oily sawdust and "sinek" coal thiuminous, the storage of cartridges, firecrackers, torpedoes, fireworks, gasoline, benzine, naphtha or similar explosives prevented; stove pipes which pass through roofs or sides of buildings removed; unsafe stoves, furnaces, stove pipes, iron smoke flues, unused pipe holes in chimneys, steam pipes against wood and jointed gas burners to be safely arranged; to ascertain whether or not electric light wires and other electric appliances are properly insulated, connected and protected, and periodically examined and tested by a duly qualified electrician, and encourage the piacing of barrels of salted water and buckets, or other good extinguishers, and ladders in or near every building.

Many conditions do not admit of classification or rating, such as the character and circumstances of the owner, value of the property, experimental and uncertain business, strangers who have previously been burned out, disreputable or unlawful business, property, experimental and uncertain of property, experimental including and sagging of floors, causing friction in machinery, frame ranges, presenting incalculable combinations of personal and physical huzard, other physical conditions before enumerated, and others in numerable, in avoidance of which the insurance companies have an immediate interest in their current business, and property owners a greater and a more permanent one in the reduction of the cost of insurance, and in regard to which the inspector invites information from agents and property owners and remove and circumstancess.

The interests and efforts of companies, property owners and general confidential under all circumstances.

The interests and efforts of companies, property owners and agents should "be united to reduce losses by fire and cost of insurance.

CHANCE FOR A QUIBBLE.

Serious Defect Alleged to Have Been Discovered in the 3-cent Fare Ord nance. A question has been raised in connection with the recently passed 3-cent fare ordinance which is of some interest to the general public. The ordinance was drawn up in the law office of Messrs, Harl & McCabe, and without being submitted to the city attorney for his opinion was hustled through the council on the evening of its presenta tion under a suspension of rules. Since its passage it has been discovered that there was no clause at the end, as in most ordinances, specifying that "all ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict with this ordinance are hereby repealed." questions that are now agitating the minds of some are: Is not this ordinance in conflict with the old ordinance which granted the company the right to charge 5-cents in the city! And if so, is the ordinance just passed worth the paper it is written on? Mayor Lawrence, when the matter was called to his attention yesterday morning by a BEE reporter, was considerably surprised. He had not noticed the defect, but as he had attached his official signature to the or dinance but a few minutes before and the or linance was then on its way to the printing office to be published according to law, there was nothing for him to do.

was nothing for him to do.

Mr. McCabe, the lawyer who drew up the rdinance, was very naturally loth to admit that he had made any break in the matter and spent a good share of the morning in deering softly to himself about the "statesnan" who had made the discovery. City Attorney Hazelton was asked for his opinion of the validity of the ordinance, but was unwilling to be quoted, on the ground that courtesy forbade his criticising the work of another lawyer, who had done the things which were supposed to have been The feeling is quite general that whether the omission of the repealing clause invalidates the ordinance or not, no harm can be done by remedying the defect before the matter is brought into the courts. The motor company has repeatedly shown its readiness to use every technicality, no mat-ter how trivial, as a means of eluding the provisions of its charter and the ordinances which have been passed for its government, and there is but little doubt that this point will be raised as an objection to the legality of the ordinance. The ordinance making a 3-cent fare the limit had its first publication yesterday, and is now consequently as much of a law as it ever will be. It is customary, however, to wait before enforcing any law until it has been published three times. By custom, therefore, the law will not go into effect until Monday evening. It is stated that there are several persons in the city prepar ing to jump over one another's necks in the endeavor to be the victim of the case which will no doubt be brought to test the new

Just received, fine imported Swiss cheese. Mrs. Beck's, 600 Main street. Clear Case Against Baxter.

Baxter, alias Webb, had his preliminary examination yesterday before Justice Field on the charge of being connected with the diamond robbery at John Metcalf's house on the Crescent City road a little less than three years ago. Bayter has had a checkered career ever since the crime was committed, having spent at least a year of the time in the Iowa penitariary and no one but himself knows how much of the remainder has been en-joyed behind prison bars. When he was arrested in Lincoln several weeks ago he had a complete set of safeblowers' tools in his possession, and there was some reason for believing that he had been implicated in the robbery of a large number of postoffices in Iowa. Yesterday's hearing seemed to have pretty definitely settled the fact that he will have another chance to get ac quainted with the officials at the Fort Madi on penitentiary.

The most interesting testimony of the day was that of John Steilen, who used to live on the shore of the river near a road which leads airectly across the country from Met-calf's house. On the night of the robbery he had a visit from three men, who asked him to take them across the river in his boat. He rowed them across and identified one of them as Baxter, whom he had seen before. The other two were drunk and somewhat indiscreet as to their remarks. On their y across they joked Baxter about experience that he had had earlier in the evening and Stellen remembers that ey referred to some woman pulling a veil off his face. This story dovetails with that of Mrs. Metcalf, who testified that she pulled the mask off the face of one of the obbers, whom she identified as Baxter, and nakes out a very strong case against Bax ter, whose previous record will not help him There is considerable doubt as to the diamonds being worth $700, as Mrs Metcalf claimed, or any considerable fraction of that sum, but for the purposes of the trial that amount is both convenient and interesting. The arguments of the attorneys are not yet complete, and a continuance was taken at the hour of evening adjournment until this morning. Pile of people have pues, out Dewitt's WitchHazel Salve will cure them.

The Union Pacific Railway company settled its right to be considered a taxpayer Thursday night by settling in full the taxes for 1891, which were under dispute. The fifteen locomotives which were seized about two weeks ago were to have been sold yesterday morning, but the promptness with which the company executed its deaths-bed repentance rendered further proceedings un-necessary, and the delivery bond given by the company at the time the engines were temporarily released was surrendered. The amount that changed hands was $8,646.11. this including about $500 of costs, which th ompany would not have had to pay if it had been willing to settle its taxes without the making of a seizure.

BLAND WARNS DEMOCRATS

of it, I say you shall not do it. [Renewed "And anybody or any party that under-takes to do it, will in good time be trampled —as it ought to be—in the dust of condemna-tion, now and in the future. [Continued ap-plause on the floor and in the galleries.] I speak as a democrat, but yet as an American above democracy. [Cheers.] Warning to the Democratic Party.

"We do not intend that any party shall survive, if we can help it, that will lay the hand of confiscation on America in the in-terest of England or of Europe. That may be strong language, but in speaking to you hand of confiscation of the eastern democracy we will bid you farewell when you do it. [Applause.] Now you can take your choice of sustaining America against England, of sustaining American industries and American laborers against English industries and laborers, o of our going apart. We have come to the parting way. I do not pretend to speak for parting way. I do not pretend to speak for anybody but myself and my constituents, but I believe that I can speak for the masses of the great Mississippi valley when I say that we will not submit to the domination of any political party (however much we love democracy) if it lays its sacrificial hands upon silver and wounds it in this country. For myself I will not support such a party here or elsewhere, but will denound it and the democrats engaged in it as democratic and un-American, and I will ask the people of the country to condemn as the agents and tools-(no, I will withdraw that epithet)—as the representatives of the money power and moneyed interests of the American people. You cannot hold the American people. You cannot hold the democratic party together on that line.

In closing his argument, Mr. Bland de clared that the time had come to decide whether or not the country was to go to bimetallism. He thought it the duty of the house (especially of his democratic associates) to settle the money question and to settle it at once on democratic lines. It would not do to demonetize silver and then to under-take to restore it afterward. There was time enough now to arrange it according to the principles of bimetallism, and in a manner conformable to the promises of the dem-ocratic party. "If," he said in conclusion, addressing his words particularly to eastern democrats, "you do not do it, yours is the re-sponsibility, not ours." [Applause.] Colorado's Defender of Silver,

Mr. Pence, populist of Colorado, was the next speaker, and with his opening s tences he attracted the close attention and with his opening senthe house and retained it to the end. No other man had succeeded in so impressing himself upon the favorable consideration of his associates on the floor at such an early period of his membership. He was sorry, he said, to note by the tone and words of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Rayner), who opened the discussion, that he was influenced by the columns of the metropolitan press and was disposed to treat representatives of the western districts, and particu larly of those states where silver is mined, as foreigners and aliens. He did not exactly comprehend the reason why that gentleman should speak of the Treasury department as acting the part of a pawn broker for the silver miners of Colorado and Nevada. It might be the gentleman knew nore of pawnbroking than he did, or it might on account of the practice of the Treasury department to jew down the men who brought the silver there to sell; because it was now beyond question that such was the policy of the department. It was because the people of Colorado had come to understand that the platforms of the two great, political parties platforms of the two great political parties were but glittering catchwords that they had within the last twelve months asserted their political independence.

It was not (as the New York Sun said) be-cause Mr. Reed of Maine was a czar that the democratic party had come into power. It was because it had declared unequivocally for the remonetization of silver. The scene or the remonetization of silver. The scene in the house today was enough to attract the attention of any thoughtful observer. Was it possible that the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Rayner), uttering the sentiments he did, and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bland), uttering the sentences he did, were elected last fall on the identical platform. [Laughter on all sides.] Fromise that Had Been Broken.

When the democratic party met in convention in 1884, Mr. Pence continued, it declared its belief in honest money, that gold and silver is the coinage of the constitution and is a circulating medium convertible into such money without loss. That meant, he said, the remonetization of silver at its old ratio; and it was so accepted by the silver ratio; and it was so accepted by the silver producers. But even before Mr. Cleveland's first inauguration that platform had been deliberately slapped in the face and spat upon. [Appiause.] For four years of the Cieveland administration there had not been (so far as the administration was con-cerned) one sincere effort to remonetize sil ver. The republican administration which followed was no better in that respect, still it was not his purpose to follow up the evolutions of political parties or to take part in a partisan discussion. Elected last fall by a people, prave, buoyant and hopeful he knew that their industries had been pros-trated by the course of the past two administrations, by the base surrender of those who had been elected on a silver platform and on silver pledges. In this connection he quoted from a speech made by Mr. Carlisle in the house in 1878, to the effect that the striking down of from three-sevenths to one-half of the metallic money of the coun-try was the most gigantic crime of this or any other generation, and he contrasted that declaration with the present position of the secretary on the silver question. The speech was made, he said, when that gentleman was a leader, not a follower, when he sender of messages, not a bearer of them

Mr. Wheeler of Alabama closed the discussion for the day with a plea for a larger volume of currency, and the house adfourned.

A WORLD-BEATER.

The American Girl as She Appears Amid the Breakers of Narragausett.

It is at 11 o'clock in the morning when the beauty of Narragansett pier is out in its bravest array, for the long stretch of beach and the line of foaming breakers is alive with bathers, says a writer in the Boston Globe. And the bathing suits! Dear me, was there ever such a sight! All sorts and conditions of them appear, from the dainty French creation of the piquant actress on advertising bent to the longpantalooned affair of the Boston girl. All of the colors of the rainbow are worn, and all sorts of fabrics are seen in the makeup of these fascinating sea

Some of silk are elegant affairs, and there are some of satin and brocade that are fine enough to grace a ballroom if only lengthened a good bit. The most popular material of all, how-ever, is alpaca or brilliantine. It sheds the water readily, does not cling im-modestly, and, better still, does not fade. Miss Winnie Davis' suit is of alpaca, and is most becoming to its very pretty young wearer. It is of navy blue trimmed simply with white braid.

One of the most beautiful women in the surf is Miss Marie Sterling of Baltimore, whose far-famed red-gold hair shines out magnificently in the sunshine. She dresses in whits-pearl white-and her flesh gleams out beautifully in contrast with its creamy tints. The suit is made of alpaca and has knee breeches and a short plaited skirt. The sleeves are mere pouffs in baby fashion and the throat is cut a way in a point and has a sailor collar and white silk tie.

Another naiad who is much admired both in and out of the breakers is Miss Sterrett of Paterson, N. J. She always has a swarm of gallants about her, for she is really a beauty and deserves her belieship. She is said to be the most faultlessly formed girl at the pier, and she swims like a duck. She wears a perfectly fitting bathing suit of dark blue, which is the essence of modesty.

There is one slender, stylish girl, who has worn several different saits during my stay here. They are all of silk and are tremendously smart. Today she was in a startlingly handsome affair of electric blue moire trimmed with fine light jet garniture. The trousers were perfectly plain, and didn't quite reach the knee. The skirt was also plain, and stuck out rich and full from the walst.

The bodiec was beautiful, being close fitting in the back with a full vest in front between the bretelles of jet that extended over the shoulders and down the back. The full vest was cut low and finished across the top with a band of jet. The sleeves were large pulls with bands of jet about the arm, and the corselet was also of jet.

Electric blue stockings were worn and on one leg, just below the knee, was a jet garter. The girl had black hair and wonderfully blue eyes, set deep under long black lashes. There was a remarkable expression about them, a little trick of looking out at one side at you with a sweeping glance from under the splendid lashes. Her skin was white and fine and there was a sweet tinge of rose in her cheeks. The electric blue of her suit, set off by the sparkling jet, was a revelation, I assure you, and there was a good deal of staring at her as she sprang out of the water in a state of wet love liness.

It is not every woman who realizes th effective possibilities of motherhood The French elegante has in bonne and baby a smypathetic background for her own loveliness, and improves every opportunity for making her offspring or namentally useful.

But there is here just now a distractingly pretty young woman who has distanced all competitors in this line, it seems to me, and she makes the loveliest pictures in the surf with her baby boy, whom she fondles and tosses about in the waves in the most picturesque fashion.

The small scrap of humanity is a bit afraid and it is a pretty sight to see her coax him in with her and then to have him cling to her with his baby bands. She dresses effectively, and is very attractive both in form and feature. She is slim and graceful, and her arms are white and beautiful; they show off well, too, when they are next to her baby's pink flesh, and he has a way of grasping hold of their soft, rounded loveliness that is simply delicious to see. All the men here are wild over her, but she seems only to think of the small son who de mands so much of her attention.

Her suit is a pale sea green, spotted with black and trimmed with rows of narrow black braid. It is cut low and has short puffed sleeves, and the skirt is plaited in full plaits that set out jauntily from the hips.

Her hair is a fair gold, and she does it up into a dear little knot on the crown of her beautiful head, and there are a lot of sweet little curls at the nape of her soft neck. Tartan seems to have a very good showing in bathing suits this season, and when the colors do not run is par ticularly effective. One handsome suit in black had fashionable revers and belt of the most brilliant plaids. The skirt and trousers were plain, and both very short. The bodice fitted at the back and had a full vest cut rather low and finished by a plaid band at the top. The revers spread away in deep points, tapering to the belt, and a sailorlike collar crossed the back. The sleeves were pouffs, and the belt was straight and formed of plaid. It was a gay costume and the stockings worn were an effective feature, being black and scarlet stripes.

There is a lovely young widow who is turning men's heads here with her winning ways and sweet face. She goes into the surf every day without fail, and wears one of the most fetching suits of all. Of course it is black, every inch of it. It is of silk, in a heavy cord, and has soft folded sleeves, crushed up about the shoulders and made of the thinnest kind of black China silk. There is also a gathered neck of this silk that shows the flesh through it when wet, in a lovely, fleeting way that is very taking. The suit has two skirts, both very short, and there are no trousers, long black silk tights being worn after the latest imported mode. When this pretty creature comes out of the water she shakes out her long, fair hair over her shoulders and sweeps it up two or three times through her hands in glorious masses as she stands a few minutes in the candor of the Narragansett sunshine for all to look and admire before she goes running up across the white sand.

InfantMortality Credifed to improper Food.

Lactated Food the Purest and Best Diet.

Happy Cmsha Mothers Whose Children Live on It.

The extraordinary mortality from various forms of infantile indigestion this summer has led to careful inbuiry, and the best authorities on the subject in this city have freely expressed their opinions.

Several of the best known physicians in Omaha we:e interviewed yesterday, and the following questions asked: "In view of the large death rate this summer of infants in Omaha, what do you recommend?"

The general sentiment of the profession was voiced in the following state-ment from one of the most successful practitioners among children. He said: "There is nothing equal to lactated food and its use is fast becoming general, among the professon. We find that it is retained on the stomach, where other things are not retained. "For cholera infantum I find it most valuable, and I generally give small portions often repeated when called to attend such cases. In almost every case where mothers are unable to nurse their infants, I find that lactated food answers well. "Many happy mothers in Omaha have used lactated food successfully whereeverything else failed. They say that this food has kept their children strong and well during the dangerous summer season and many of them have recommended it to friends, who have had the same happy experience. The principal element of mother's milk is sugar of milk. This is the basis of inctated food, With it is combined the nutritious elements of the great cereals, wheat and barley, and the necessary bone-forming salts. This makes lactated food a perfect and natural substitute for mother's milk. It must be borne in mind that lactated food is so inexpensive, that it is within the reach of every family. 150 meals can be made from a dollar package of the food, and when prepared for theu use of infants, it costs less than five cents a quart. Mothers should remember that cholera infantum can be more early prevented than cured. Simply feed the baby with pure lactated food, and the child will keep well and strong.
