Reformatory or Hospital? Nephi North is to have an examination at the hands of the commissioners for the insane at 3 o'clock this afternoon, which will probably go a long ways toward deciding whether he shall spend a term in the state penitentiary or the insane asylum. He was arrested several days ago, when some shocking disclosures were made. He had been wandering about the streets with his little girl, aged about 9 or 10 years, and at night they would sleep in the weeds in some of the vacant lots on Oak-land avenue. His brother made the complaint of insanity against him, and his little daughter confided in a lady with whom she was taken to board until her father's case been decided, that her father had ruined her. A physician who was called in to decide whether her story was true stated that the girl had certainly been inhumanly treated. North was brought before the commissioners yesterday and his story was heard. He protests his innocence of the charge, and claims to be as sane as any one Several persons who are familiar with the circumstances of the case are to be called in to testify this afternoon.

tent appearances might indicate. It is con ceded by nearly everybody, excepting Ware and Aylesworth, that there is a political motive back of it all, which may come to light before long. As stated in THE BEE some time ago, City Clerk Zurmuchlen is making a quiet rustle for the chairmanship of the democratic county cen-tral committee. Ware and Aylesworth are said to be plotting against him, and the springing of this charge of fooling with the public money is intended as a stem-winder for him. Besides, they think they see a way of throwing Mayor Lawrence's republican administration into disrepute at the same time, and these two motives are the ones which are said to have actuated them in this case. association for life. At 2 sp. m. Comrade Tucker introduced Vice Commander Church Howe, who thrilled the old soldiers' hearts with words that burned. He said that if there were any here who did not like to hear the old soldier eulogized this was no place for them. He said that the country was in a peculiar situ-ation. The mines were closing, the fac-tories shutting down, and laboring men were set adrift to beg or starve. He cited a picture from Judge that pictured Uncle Sam as wrestling with a jackass and he thought the illustration apt. Congress had been called together to wrestle with existing conditions. We might hope and pray that success would crown their efforts. He endeavored to impress upon all the old sol diers that their place was in the Grand Army of the Republic. There were from 30,000 to 40,000 old soldiers in the state and only about one-fifth were enrolled in the or ganization. The Grand Army button was a patient of nobility, but kings could not wear it, neither could the president of this great republic. He appealed to the Sons of Veterans to be true to the institutions and principles established by their fathers. He culogized the Woman's Relief corps and as-serted that they were the very life and soul of the Grand Army. He reviewed the pension situation in a manner to make the old soldier howl with He declared that if the approval. soldiers of the country would stand together they could defy all the machinations of their enemics and establish their claims in such a manner that Hoke Smith and all Georgia could not prevail against them. He reviewed the committees of congress and showed how helichairmanships of the committees were distributed. The committee on pensions is made up largely of southern men, with a

Georgia man as chairman. "You captured Atlanta," said he, "in the largest that ever reached the United States in one vessel. On the steamship 60's, but Atlanta has captured you in 1893 it was secreted in a little room to which with Moses as chairman of your pension com-mittee." The soldier is to blame for existing the light of day never peeped, and so circumstances. Too many of them were voting wrong. Standing together they hold the key to the situation. Congress makes pension laws and the soldiers makes congress-men. Let the soldiers stand together on sion of the captain and purser. the question of pensions and on all other questions and they are invincible. He closed with this beautiful peroration: "To closed with this beautiful peroration: "To you, the veterans who are here, let me say, life has nothing, no wealth, no office, so title, no fame like the memories which are yours today. The roll of American noblemen and those who defended the flag from "du to "do All defended the flag from '61 to '65. All Americans who love this country cherish you with increased affection as your numbers lessen and as the period of your great service recedes. It was for many years a dispute as to what was the high water mark of human character or what was most de-sired. But now it isn't so. Whenever preacher or moralist or logician desires to make an ideal of mankind he places the character of the brave soldier on the highest pinnacle. The soldier who goes into battle, for whatever cause, is ready for that su-preme sacrifice, the loss of his life. It is a great thing to have an honorable ancestry and maintain it, handing it down to your children: so it is great to be a soldier, a co rade of the Grand Army of the Republic. is also great to be a son or a daughter of a veteran. If it had not been for you, veterans, ourglorious country might have perished from the face of the earth. This country is noole and free from blemish, preserved by you. May your remaining days be pleasant and may your pillow at death be made more smooth. Nothing that man can conceive is like that which it has been yours to give. All honor and glory which this world has to give is cheap and poor compared with that Must Pay in Advance. Strangers who come" to Washington with their families and locate are often vexed because they are required to pay their rent in advance no matter how good their credit may be at home. Men worth hundreds of thousands of dellars, who could have individual checks cashed to buy residences in Washington for twice their value are required to hand their rent to the agen in advance at the opening of every month This universal custom is explained by the law governing landlords and tenants in Washington. When once a tenant is located in a house he can beat his landlord out of two months and a half rent in spite of any precaution which the owner may take, if it were not for the custom to require tenants to pay in advance. Under the law the landlord must give a tenant thirty days notice to vacate the property. If it were not for the pay-indvance system the tenant would have the advantage of one month's rent before he was given notice to vacate. He could the occupy the property for thirty days more At the enl of that time he would have sever days to answer the complaint before a jus-tice. When once he had answered and there was a trial and judgment he would have three days before his goods would be set out in the street. Thus, it will be seen, the pay-in-advance system is necessary in order to beat the deadbeats. There are other liberal laws here in favor of the tenant when it con executing a judgment. A householder has an offset of $500, besides his tools and "necessary family appliances." Under this clause he may have a horse and cart set aside, and where there are chil dren in the family the plano is taken out of the $500 appraisement In short, there is hardly anything here like a distrain of household property in suing for rental indebtedness, and when a suit is brought for rent and the tenant has no real property, the landlord is almost helpless. There is such a large proportion of real es-tate in Washington held as permanent investments by retired and wealthy citizens and those from other cities who have large means, that the severest sort of panic would result in the least possible suffering. It is very seldom that mortgages are foreclosed here or real estate sold under execution. The large number of empty residences, how-ever, suggests that rent is likely to experience a sharp decline during these dull time
