A visit to this spot, which is now a national cemetery, is extremerly interesting. Here seventeen years ago General Custer and five companies of the Seventh United States cavatry, numbering over 200 officers and men, were cut to pieces by the Sioux Indians and allied tribes under Sitting Bull. The battlefield, the valley of the Little Big Horn, located some forty odd miles south of Custer, Mont., a stition on the Northern Pacific railroad, can be easily reached by stage. If you will write Charles S. Fee, St Paul, Minn., inclosing 4 cents in postage, he will send you a handsomely illustrated 100 page book, free of charge, in which you will find a graphic account of the sad catastrophe which overtook the brave Custer and his ollowers in the valley of the Little Big Horn in June, '76.
