WHY THEY PROTEST.

Property Owners Object to Having Their

The renewal of agitation in the matter of grading Dorcas street from Second to Sixth street has brought the buzzing of a hornets' nest about the ears of the city officials, as interested property owners are decidedly up in arms about it. A continuous stream of excited people poured into the office of the city clerk yesterday forenoon, each insisting that he had signed the petition for the grading under a misapprehension of the actual facts.

and demanding that he be allowed to withdraw his name from the paper. It was set forth by one and all that the grading would result in the confiscation of the prop-erty, and a startling array of facts and figures were presented to back up that assertion. The profile prepared by the city engineer showed a fill in some places of seventy-two feet, and in others a cut of nearly sixty feet. It was argued that it would cost some of the property owners $1,000 a lot for grading the street in front of their places, and that it would cost them another $2,000 to raise their lots to grade at the rate of 1414 cents per cubic yard, which is the price to be paid under the bids submitted.

It was freely charged that the whole thing was the result of the scheming of one indi vidual, and that he was the one who would receive the greatest benefit if the work was done. The statement was made that if the street was graded and owners of abutting lots were unable to grade up their lots to the same grade heavy rains would cut down the high embankment thrown up by the city and the taxpayers at large would be put to a continual expense in the way of repairs in filling in the washouts.

One strong argument used was that the mayor, although a property owner there and an interested party, had refused to sign the petition, although he had not protested against it, as he was not disposed to kick if the majority of the property owners on the

SOME POINTERS FOR THE POLICE BOARD

Vaughn's Peculiar Ideas of the Pass System -Chief Haze May Yet Tread the Carpet-Attempt to Down Vizzard.

For some time past things have not been running smoothly in the detective branch of the Omaha police department, and the dissatisfaction has spread to a certain extent among the patrolmen. The trouble seems to have been precipitated by religious and political matters. Much of the agitation evidently comes from several members of the force who are trying to push themselves in to positions which they desire.

The Board of Fire and Police commissioners has had its attention called to the matter through charges preferred by J. M. Vaughn of the detective force against John Vizzard, a fellow officer.

Detective Vizzard is accused of making an excessive charge for bringing back a fugitive from justice from lowa. When confronted with the charge Vizzard did not deny the facts, but said such things were customary and that he did so on the recommendation of his chief, H. P. Haze, a man who now aspires to have a new office created for his special benefit, namely: That of assistant chief of police, with the pay and rank of a captain.

The charges against Detective Vizzard were read at the last meeting of the police board. The following day J. M. Vaughn came out in an open challenge denying that he had ever charged the state for mileage when he rode on a railway pass. He offered to give any one $100 who would prove the contrary.

In investigating some of the workings of the detective force The Bee has uncarthed a good deal of rottenness, and the attention of the police commissioners is called to the ex-isting state of affairs. In reply to Vaughn's "defi," here are some interesting facts and figures. figures:

acquaintanceship in this city. In the year of 1890 I was arrested in Baltimore, Md., on Mulberry street between Pearl and Pine by Police Sergeant Selbold of the Baltimore police force on the charge of assault with intent to do great bodily injury. This charge was preferred against me by C. C. Paul of Elk City, Neb., and the police officers of Omaha, Neb. I was held until an officer could arrive in Baltimore from Omaha with requisition papers. The officer who came after me was J. M. Vaughn, a member of the city detective force of Omaha. He got the extradition papers for me at Annapolis, Md., and started westward with me. When the conductor came to take up our tickets Vaughn gave him passes for both of us on the Baltimore & Ohio road. He stopped with me in Pittsburg, Pa., for forty-eight hours to visit relatives. He left me in Diamond Alley, in that city. We then came on to Chicago, where he put me in the jail under the city ball and kept me there for forty-eight hours, which was unnecessary. We came to Omaha from Chicago over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, and he gave the conductor passes for our fares. I am positive of this because I saw them as he handed them to the conductor. Vaughn tried to bluff me on the way here, but I told him I didn't believe there was an honest hair in his whisters. The passes he gave the conductor were small printed slips, and were unlike coupon or other tickets, and he told me he had free transportation for both of us, and was going to send me up for three years. He told the conductor this when we were on our way to Chicago.

Charges Against Vizzard.

The case made out against Vizzard dates back somewhat, but was not filed until he took his annual leave of absence, and then instead of making the charges through his superior officer to Chief Seavey, whose duty it is to investigate and with the report of his investigation turn the matter over to the commissioners for their consideration, Vaughn hired an attorney, who mailed the charges to the chief. Some people say that anxiety to expose the wrong doing of a comrade did not urge him to do so until the ac-

To go back of this affair it is alleged that Vaughn does not like Vizzard and at the last meeting of the board of trustees of the police relief fund he laft the meeting in a very angry frame of mind, and was with that Liverpool — — yet." More recently Yaughn and Vizzard were working to solve the mystery surrounding the death of Carl Stellmacher, found dead not long ago under mysterious circumstances in the Cunningham block. Vizzard was questioning Mr. Yearger, a friend of the deceased, when Vaughn came in and asked to see Veryer. Howas informed in the case Veryer. see Yearger. He was informed that he was engaged with Vizzard, and left the place swearing he would have nothing to do the case, nor would be work with his fellow officer. Pass for Pearl Mackey.

But speaking about passes. It is hinted that Vaughn remembers who got Pearl Mackey a pass to a distant eastern city some time ago, and it is furthermore stated that he knows the methods employed in getting that pass. The public might be inland free, and are disappointed when they learn that they must pay from $1.50 to $2.50 per acre, in addition to living Vaughu is openly accused of getting a pass for this woman upon false representations. Pearl Mackey, who seems to have become acquainted with Vaugnn, found him and dan, an aeronaut, was seriously injured last evening while descending with a parachute from a balloon ascension. He had gone up from Central park in the presence of a large crowd, and when he drove to Judge Helsey's house to get an order for her prother's release. Judge Helsey gave the ofder, when Vaughn told him that the boy was all right, was of relropped with the parachute he was seen to be having considerable trouble on acspectable fan if and was only held on a nominal charge. The officer in charge at headquarters was out at lunch when Pearl count of the strong wind. Just as he neared the earth a sudden gust drove him up against the street car barns and Mackey rame into the station with the order for release, and the jailer, sceing that the order was all right, released the young fei-low. been misrepresented to him by this officer. Vaughu did not satisfactorily ex-plain this. Some time after this little episode Vaughn went to the police matron and asked her to assist him in cetting a pass to an eastern city for a young girl, who had strayed away from the path of virtue. He said that he had asked so many favors of the railway companies that they might not assist him in this "good work." Accordingly the matron interested herself and secured the desired transportation. She saw the girl and knew who it was. V mumbled something about being busy he saw that the matron knew who "this young girl" was, and made himself conspicuous by his absence. Pulls Uncte Sam's Log.

Vaughn is said not to take his turn at corking nights as the otter officers are compelled to do, saying that he is growing too old and that he is averse to working at nights. He says that if he has to work nights he will have to quit the force. He is also alleged to be drawing a peasion from the government for disabilities received during the late war and a good salary from the city as a detective. Most people presume that policemen are able-bodied, rugged men, able to stand hardships of all kinds.

It was about two years ago that a number of good officers were dropped from the pay rolls for physical defects. There are other things which will come to light before this police muddle is settled and the commissioners will find plenty to do. These matters have come up from time to time and the endeavor to force the police into politics or politics into the police has brought out many scandals.

A gentleman, representing Detective Vizzard, said yesterday: "These charges were made by Vaughn and I shouldn't be surprised if Chief Detective Haze was mixed up in the deal. They hoped to get the charges before the commissioners while vizzard was out of the city and have the papers roast him. They only exposed their own rottenness, and now that they have stirred up a hornet's nest and are likely to have themselves investigated, they would be glad to drop the matter right where it stands if they could." Haze Has Tourist Tendercies.

Now this is what they say about Haze. He is the head of the city detective department and has six detectives under his direction. But if there is a fugitive outside of the city to go after, Haze goes in most instances. He likes to ride in varnished cars. These trips necessitate several days absence. sence, and in the meantime the detective department is without a chief. He has made a great many trips where his

He took the credit of landing the Larsen burglars in jail and also of another imrtant case not long ago, when in fact the location of the crooks, the "tips" and pre-liminary work was done by his officers without his aid, advice or knowledge. The chief is said to take such a great in-terest in his political duties that he tries to coerce new recruits on the force to join his organization, and it is alleged that he even went so far as to intimate to the matron that her position would be much more tenable if she listened to him and followed his advice. While speaking of Haze, it might not be out of place to inquire what became of a search warrant which he had issued to recover some diamonds in the possession of a colored woman named Graham, who claimed to have found the valuable goms, and afterwards, what became of the gems! He is also alleged to "have it in" for certain officers, and only recently tried to get Jimmy Lindsey, the pugilist to go with him to the station and make a complaint against Officer Sullivan for not arresting Jimmy Sullivan has the reputation of being one of the best men ever put on the beat he is now traveling, and one night Jimmy was down there enjoying himself. DANGEROUS FREAK OF A YOUNG MAN

Carl Anderson, a Discharged Farm Hand, Arms Himself and Tries to Depopulate the Town of Florence-Sheriff's Posse on His Trait.

The quiet of the little town of Florence, ust north of the Omaha city limits, was in a terrible commotion yesterday and a condition of affairs that comes close to being a riot provailed.

For a month or more Carl Auderson, a stout and hearty young man, has been working for Hans Nelson, a presperous farmer, residing near Forest Lawn cemetery, and during all of this time and until yesterday has been an ideal farm hand, but now he is like a wild beast, roaming the woods, seek-someone whom he may devour.

Sunday the Nelsons went to church, leaving Anderson to do the evening chores and work about the stables. When they returned they found him in a drunken condi-tion and with his work undone. Having pity on the fellow he was put to bed, that he might sober up and be ready for the work of yesterday, but as the hours of the night rolled away Nelson concluded that he had no place in his house for a lusher and yester-day morning so informed Mr. Anderson, at the same time paying him the amount of wages due. Without saying a word Anderson went out into the yard and sat down upon a log, bury-ing his face in his hands. This position he occupied for a few minutes, and until after Nelson and his sons had gone to the barn. Getting up from his seat and teaving his meditations behind, Anderson went to the house and up to his room, where he secured a couple of revolvers which he had stored away in his trunk. These weapons of war-fare he stuck into his boot legs, and loaded down with cartridges, to reap a harvest of barn was the spot where he de-cided to first begin his reaping operations, and thither he went, with blood in his eye and murder in his heart. Reaching the door of the building Anderson discovered Nelson and his son harnessing the horses and at once drew a bead on them both, commanding them to throw up their hands. For a minute they looked into the muzzles of the two pistols and then sent their hands to the very ridge pole, at the same time dodging behind a horse, conclud-ing that it was better in the end to lose a chunk of horse flesh than to give up the ghost themselves.

Fled for Their Lives.

Anderson saw the play and commanded them to get from behind their barricale of horse, saving that if they did not he would let daylight through the whole business. All three of the men, the sieger and the be-sieged, held their positions for fully an nour, until finally the two men saw an opportunity when Anderson was not watching, and tak-ing advantage of this, they slapped through a window and fled for the tall timber. During the early stage of the engagement in the barn Mrs. Anderson had learned of the critical position occupied by her husband and her son, and had sent out for reinforcements in the shape of a dozen or more of the neighbors, who arrived just as the two am-bushed men made their escape. Anderson was not to be caught napping and as the additional forces filed onto the field he ran from the barn and into the woods, where for some time he kept up a perfect bombard-ment, defying the combined forces to come out and capture him. Every now and then he would laugh in flendish glee and say that he would shoot the whole county and spread devastation over the en-tire land if he was disturbed in his fort, which consisted of a hollow tree. Several plans were matured for dislodging the hired man, but none of them were carried out, simply for the reason that the leader of the attacking party had no desire to have his body or the bodies of his men filled with cold lead.

Once or twice the Netsons and their followers flung out a flag of truce, but when it was seen by Anderson he simply laughed and remarked that he would be blanked if he would recognize any such rag, and that they might just as well put it back into the pocket from whence it was taken. There being no prospect of a cessation of the hostilities, Nelson drew off his forces and held a council of war. At that council it was decided that the forces were not suf-ficiently large to dislodge the enemy and that the sheriff and his posse would have to be called in to take a hand. Thereupon young Nelson was put upon the back of a horse and sent to this city, reaching here shortly after noon, his animal showing the effects of the hard ride, which trip the rider alleges was made in twenty minutes. Reaching the court house, he went up the stone flight of stairs at a rate of speed never yet equaled and presented his case to Sheriff Bennett, who at once advised him to go before a justice of the peace and swear out a warrant. This the boy did and a few minutes later the sheriff and his posse, armed to the teeth, rode out of town for the purpose of capturing the man who is supposed to be a dangerous lunarie

They captured him yesterday afternoon, without loss of life. Plies of people have plies, but De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve will are than a.
