Little Rift of Light Shines Through the Street Railway Storm Clouds.

DIRECTORS CONSULTING WITH CITIZENS

Evidence of an Intention to Get at the Bottom of the Trouble-What the Peo. ple Want-May Offer a Compromise.

The first indication that the directors of the Omaha & Council Bluffs Bridge company have any intention of acceding to the wishes of the people of Council Bluffs came to light yesterday, when three of the directors, J. H. Millard, Guy C. Barton and N. W. Wells, paid a visit to the city in the afternoon for the purpose of having interviews with representative citizens. The meeting was held behind closed doors in the parlors of the Grand hotel, and, as stated by the three gentlemen, was held for the purpose of as certaining "what is the matter with Council Bluffs!"

The citizens who were called upon to assist the directors in solving this problem were called in separately, or by twos and threes, and were asked to state the causes of their grievances. It is learned that the directors seemed to be auxious to arrive at some agreement by which the rocks and sandburrs might be taken out of the road they have been compelled to travel for the

What the People Want.

In most cases a plain, unvarnished statement of the causes for complaint was made, and in every instance the representatives and in every instance the representatives listened attentively.

The grievances were principally over the action of the company in refusing to pay the city and the property owners for the paving of intersections and streets, and their refusal to accede to the popular demand for a reduction of fare between the two cities. In but few instances was a demand for a straight 5-cent rate made, and almost without exception the citizens seemed to be of the opinion that a commutation rate of 5 cents for the benefit of people whose business calls them across the river almost every day would be benefit of people whose business calls them across the river almost every day would be satisfactory, without any wholesale reduction. The dissatisfaction with the management of Superintendent A. K. Stone was also brought up by the directors themselves. It seems that Stone has made some very warm enemies during the three years that he has been at the head of the affairs of the company in Council Bluffs, and the hailstones have been dropping about the heads of the directors until they have been irresistibly impelled to look and see where the sistibly impelled to look and see where the storm is coming from. May Offer a Compromise.

What the result of the meeting will be cannot be told yet, although the people of the city are considerably encouraged over the outlook. From remarks that were let fall by the directors yesterday there is reason to believe that "a compromise will be arranged in the course of a few days which well be satisfactory to all parties concerned and do away with the present strained rela-tions that have rendered dealings between the citizens and the company so unpleasant for months past. The regular meeting of the board of directors takes place next Friday and it is extremely likely that some definite action will be taken at that time.

DR. POULSON VINDICATED.

He Will Make His Some Hereafter in

Dr. P. Wilhelm Poulson has returned to Council Bluffs. His letter from Chicago, explaining the mystery of the zinc box contaming the remains of a bake, has preceded him and has been already given to THE BEE readers. He shows several letters from an attorney named McJunkin, who formerly lived here, and who naturally got the doctor's legal business when the latter first moved to the Pacific coast. According to the doctor's story he became dissatisfied with McJunkin and discarded him for another attorney. This seems to have started McJunkin on the warnath and he has taken advantage of the doctor's domestic troubles to start numerous sensational stories against him.
The most serious charges are those which cluster about the little zinc box. Dr. Poul-son says it was a sore disappointment to him when the babe was born dead. By a mutual when the babe was born dead. By a mutual understanding between himself and wife the remains were placed in the box, as he intended to bring them to Council Bluffs and here place them permanently in a vault. Physicians who examined these remains testified before the coroner's jury that the babe was dead when it was born, and that it had never drawn a breath. The coroner's lury has breath in breath. The coroner's jury has brought in a verdic to the same effect, and thus the loctor is freed from many unjust suspicions Now that the coroner's jury is through with the little box the doctor has instructed his attorney to send it to him at Council Bluffs, and he will wait here until it arrives. Then he will proceed to place it in a vault on his farm at Crescent. The doctor has owned this farm for many years. He long since decided to have his own mortal frame laid away in a vault on this farm, when the time came to join his spirit friends. He had long ago built a large vault for this purpose, but the tenants on his farm had been using it to keep their milk, butter and other perishables in. Now that he wants to place the little zinc box in this yault there is a wholesome kick on the part vault there is a wholesome kick on the part of the tenant and the doctor is in a quandary whether to decide by contest the question of milk against corpse or to yield quietly and let the yault be used for a creamery, while he builds a new one a little ways from it.

doctor says his book, "The Light of the Messiah," is a closely logical, mystically philosophical dissertation in favor of free-dom of thought and of religious belief. In this book he urges men to have belief without creed. The orders he has started arg like the Masonic, secret so far as the ritualistic work is concerned, but the purposes are public and are along the same line as the book. It will take twenty years to get them under way. There is a good deal of secret ritualistic work to be prepared. In one of these orders alone are required eleven volumes like the "Light of the Messiah" of 480 pages. There is a good deal of work to be done. The doctor says when he receives the box from California he will attend to putting it in the vault here, and will then go to California to defend himself in the divorce suit, after which he will return to Council Bluffs and will probably remain here permanently.

He is something of a wrestier, and told one of his comrades in jail that he meant to try the "strangle-hold" on the jailer sometime when he got a good chance, when he would succeed in getting away before the jailer could recover himself. He then proceeded to show his comrade just how he intended to do, but the treatment worked with such a vengeance that the other prisoner was laid out limp as a rag. Simply a Breach of Trust. BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Aug. 29.-Judge Myers of the county court in this city has rendered a decision affecting the interest of farmers and grain dealers. Pyle, a farmer, sold 1,500 bushels of corn to a dealer and drew $400 on the contract. Pyle failed to deliver the grain, but sold to another dealer. He was indicted for obtaining money under false pretenses. Judge Mycrs decided that since Pyle had the grain when he contracted to sell, he committed only a breach of trust, which is not a crime.

[CONTINUED FROM FIRST PAGE.] to tell the American people that the people had brought about the panic behad brought about the panic be-cause they were afraid of their money. If he did he would be under obligation to cite some instance where the people had exhibited fear of their money.

There had been taken from the banks since early last spring about $150,000,000 men who were dissatisfied with present condition of things. They aken out their money and put it taken away; but they had not demanded gold. They took whatever currency they could get. He chailenged the banks to show where any depositor had demanded to be paid in any particular kind of money. The representatives from the Treasury department would show these pecules who was the contraction. ment would show these people who drew out greenbacks and treasury notes did not rush to the treasury for gold.

Wanted Their Money. He had been in Denver when four national anks [(all solvent) I had closed. He had gone on the street where the crowd was gathered and asked the people what the trouble was and was told with almost universal voice: "We do not know what the trouble is. We have been told there is to be a great financial disturbance in the country." a great financial disturbance in the country We don't know if the banks will be able to pay us our money when we want it, and we think it safest to get it now." Those prognostications, Mr. Teller said had emanated from New York banks and newspapers. The cry of metropolitan presidents had been followed by all the small presidents of the country. None of them was able to tell what was going to These misrepresentations brought about a state of things which could be brought about at any time and in any country by such means.

Mr. Teller went on at great length to discuss the course taken by the New York banks in refusing to pay their depositors in currency and in trying to work up public opinion in favor of the repeal of the Sherman act. He noted reported interviews with the president and Secretary Carlisle and criticised the views attributed to the president (and which, he said, had never been denica), that the people of the country needed an object lesson and were going to get it. Without concluding his remarks Mr. Teller yielded for a motion to proceed to executive business, and afterwards the senate adjourned.

TALKED ON MANY SUBJECTS.

Citizen Train Tells His Experiences and

Makes Predictions. Citizen George Francis Train drew a rather ight house at Boyd's last night. Mayor Bemis opened the program with an hour's talk on the history of Omana. Then the Citizen talked for fifteen minutes, after which the city council entered and took seats upon the stage. Following this the Citizen talked some more arraigning the Pinkertons, militia officers and others who had a hand in suppressing the Homestead riots, acusing the principal political parties and accusing them of being responsible for present conditions in obedi-ence to the demands of the Rothschilds and other financial kings.

A demand for the abolition of coin and the substitution of "wildcat" money, and a pre-diction that President Cleveland will diwithin ninety dars, were two of the features of Mr. Train's speech. He also suggested, as a feasible plan for easing the local money marget, that the city issue the local money market, that the city issue bonds for public works in small sums, say $1, $2, $3, $4 and $5, $9, that city bonds would be within the reach of all.

The Citizen recalled his predictions, the day before it occurred, of the great Chicago fire, and reviewed half a dozen other occurrences in which he has figured, besides telling the audience about his services in swelling the audience about his services in swelling the attendance at the World's fair.

The city council attended in a body, the members sitting on the stage within easy reach of the Citizen, who kept them stirred up at a lively rate with interrogations and personal allusions, much to the obvious amusement of the paters. amusement of the paters.
