of Expositions.

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 25 .- [Special Correspondence.]-Yesterday was a banner day in the great city over the bay, and Golden Gate park was thronged with the mightiest host of lusty, enthusiastic citizens that has ever been assembled in this Pacific coast. Estlmates place the number variously at between 50,000 and 100,000 strong.

It was the inauguration of the California Midwinter International exposition, the breaking of the ground over which this colossal projected enterprise is to be displayed, and if the amount of enthusiasm it has stirred up is any criterion of its future success it will in many respects be the greatest exhibition the world has ever witnessed.

Of course, it will not rival the Columbian, but in some of its features it will excel that enterprise. Some of its plumage will be borrowed, some of its glory will be only a reflection, but it will have the advantage of later experience wherewith to show these gems to better advantage than they have hitherto been displayed, and it will add to all a spark of the original genius of the west -the extreme west, where human capacity is most freed from the chains of repressive old-time institutions.

Will it Pay?

"We have met many good people who have doubted the policy of this enterprise," said Director General M. H. De Young, in his ad-dress today. "We have been asked, 'Will it pay?" That is a question that lies in the womb of the future and can be answered only by the experience of the past. man who has had some experience in other expositions, has been elsewhere and seen and felt the benefit of those expositions, I

"The direct receipt of money at the gate is not the direct benefit. The Chicago ex-position was located in a section of the town that the people had not got out to. This section, called South Chicago, where the exposition was located, was a swamp and people had not begun to build houses there. The great corporation of the city of Chicago gave it $5,000,000 in bonds. Will it pay? Why, last year the assessment roll of Chicago was increased $176,000,000 from that district alone. Another prominent lady interviewed, said there can be only one opinion in regard to this matter. The railroad company must be taught its place. As to the free riding, the people pay and pay dearly for all they get. There is no hoodlum-making about it. I can remember, when I was a little girl hearing my father say "the time will come when that railroad company will become a

The records in the office of the clerk of the district court have become encumbered with the files in a suit which, before the end is reached, promises to bring about some interesting developments and at the same time drag several family skeletons from their hiding places in their respective closets.

The intense interest aroused in this strug-gle with the octopus corporation may be judged when the mayor feit it necessary to declare that "If the Southern Pacific rail-road attempts to charge fare for persons riding on the trains within the corporate This suit is brought by S. No taw can be retro-active, and the revised code cannot change the conditions that existed when the charter was granted. At that time the assigned year gregating $50,000, which the plautiff alleges his business reputation has sustained. For many years S. P. Morse was the leading dry goods merchant of the city, occupying some large store rooms on Farnam near Fourteenth street. As the city grew he continued to branch out in business, and eventually became the sonior partner in the pala-tial store of S. P. Morse & Co. at Sixteenth and Farran, streets. Subse-quently the Morse Dry Goods company was organized and S. P. Morse was forced out of the business, and, as he alleged, com-pletely ruined financially by his business associates. After that he rented a large store on Douglas street near Fifteenth and made all arrangements for again engaging in the dry goods trade. The store was fitted up with all the modern improvements and was a palace in every particular. As soon as the yooms were ready for occupancy, which was during the early days of last March, goods commenced to arrive and be placed on the shelves. For a few days Morse did a prosperous business and until Marshall Field & Co.'s agent swooped down and took away the goods which the firm had sold but a few days before. This act was the slogan that was sounded to the other creditors and within forty-eight hours the store was com-pletely cleaned out and the card, "For rent," was hung in the front window. Mr. Morse declared that the bringing of the suit was instigated by enemies and competitors and he bided a time when the wheel of fortune should revolve in his direction, but instead

At certain points trains must slow down of moving toward him, it went the other way and reverses followed each other in rapid to four miles an hour. bad," and as a natural result he eventually found his way to the county jail, where he remained until the trial, which terminated in a verdict of exoneration. After this he was charged with having a "Ferris wheel" revolving in his head, but upon the invest-gation the commissioners of insanity found that the charges were groundless and a discharge was entered. In bringing the suit Morse alleges that, in a measure, the members of the Marshall Field house are responsible for his sudden slide down the rocky road which he has traveled. He avers that the goods which he bought of them were purchased "on time," and that when they were levied upon the debt lacked sixty days of being due, and that if the suit had not been brought the other creditors would not have interfered. As a result of the suit, he alleges that he has been greatly injured inancially, that his peace of mind has been ruined, and that he has been brought into public scandal and

'Seven weeks ago today the executive con mittee appointed by you met for organization. Three days after that time the finance committee was organized. Now, gentlemen, in seven weeks what has been accomplished? Look back at the great enterprises of the world, or at the histories of expositions, and in two years they never accomplished as much as we have done in seven weeks. What have we done? Seven weeks ago, without a dollar, without a possible assur-ance, without organization-what has been done up to today? We have organized this exposition. We have made its rules. We nave made its classification. We have surveyed every inch of the ground. We have made our maps. We have laid out the plans. We have let the contracts for the excava-tion and grading. We have started our of-

"We have been to Washington and we have passed the bill unanimously through both houses-[cheers and applause]-and today we are here to turn the first shovelful of sand, and I tell you the Midwinter exposition will be held.'

It was all in all a gala day of magnificent proportions, in which the sloping hillsides were black with a swelling sea of humanity bright with waving flags and banners, gay with floating airs of delightful music. Her were high stands, from which speakers thrilled the multitude until their voices, dimmed by the distance, were lost to the ears of thousands. Cameras and kodaks marked conspicuous spots and thousands of snap shots made record of the scenes. One enterprising amateur perched himself upon the stout limb of a tree and had not taken many shots with his kodak when he took one shot he had not intended in his calculations, for he shot to the ground below, broke an $50 lens, ran his foot through the bellows of his camera, and then took a shoot home with a sprained arm and lacerated face. For once the shooter was shot and the world got an impression out of him on the ground floor.

Sold the First Spadeful,

"That's enough to tempt an angel. What am I bid ?"

The speaker, as might be imagined, was an auctioneer. He was conducting a finan cial ceremony and it was an interesting cere-monial. He was conducting a public auction of the silver casket containing the first spadeful of earth dug in proparing for the Midwinter fair. It was to become a great historital relic, and was enough to tempt an angel.

The speaker lauded it to the skies and pictured the fame of the buyer as only an auctioneer can.

$500. Remember fame and immortality is his reward who buys."

A voice in the crowd shouted $550. The price was not enough. The auction-eer's eloquence soared higher. There was an angel hitched to his voice. More bids followed. Adolph Ross reached $650.

silence. No more bids.

The auctioneer had reached the climax of his art.

Down went the gavel, and Mr. Ross captured the dear little casket.

Oakland's Fight.

In the language of the San Francisco Call Oakland's fight for freedom goes on with unabated vigor. Merchants, professional men, every class of society seem determined to throw off the yoke of the Southern Pacific. The friends of the monopoly are not maked the source to the monopoly are not sufficiently numerous to form a class. Not only are the men of Oakland in dead carnest in waging this holy war, but the women, too, are as onthusiastic as their brothers in a determination to see right and justice done in the beautiful city of oaks. Ladies who, a few weeks ago, had never seen the Oakland water front save from the windows of a Southers Division from the windows of a Southern Pacific train now walk fearlessly down to the Davie wharf and take the Rosalie or San Francisco.

It seems to me, said one lady, that Oak-land is like a man who swallowed a tape-worm. At first he was vastly improved in his appetite, but later, when the creature began to inconvenience him, he got uneasy and longed to get rid of it. Finally it became necessary for him to proceed against this violater of law, nature's law, of course, and drive him out. Of course he had a right to exist, but he must keep his place. Now, the Southern Pacific is Oakland's tapeworm, and the time has come when we

The fight has now gone into the courts in the shape of a legal contest over the right of the city to access to her water front, the railroad claiming ownership of the land adjoining. In this struggle, however, the railroad is doomed to lose, as no such title can exist to bar a city's direct access to the harbor. Not the city, but the entire east, would be affected by such title, as an aggregation of such titles to lands adjoining har-

Sad Case of a Woman Who Became a Raving Mantac,

Douglas county has again been called upon to care for a case of insanity that is none of its own, and this time it is a woman whose residence is in the state of Washington. Monday night Sheriff Bennett was called to Clifton Hill to arrest a woman who was a raving maniac. Upon reaching there he found that a Mrs. Annie E. Minerd, who had been stopping at the residence of Horace Case, was in a condition indicating that she might do injury to some of the members of the house. She was taken into custody and the house. She was taken locked in the county jail.

The facts are that the woman has been a natic for many years, and that during that time she has been confined in one of the Washington asylums. Last July her son visited the asylum, taking her away and bringing her to this city, where he has sup-ported and cared for her until a few weeks ago, when he went to Idano, leaving her a charge upon the charitable people of this community. Her insanity is said to have been caused by the acts of a husband. Three years ago, through some "hocus pocus," the insanity board of one of the Washington counties was induced to sit upon the case and return a judgment that the woman's mind was unbalanced. She was immediately con-veyed to the asylum, where she soon became a maniac. Immediately after that the husband fied the country and has since concealed his whereabouts.

The Nebraska Farmer is about to publish a special edition giving a complete crop re-port for this state, paying special attention to the condition and probable acreage of broom corn, flax, hay, wild and cultivated varieties, in addition to the staple products of Nebraska. The paper is also striving to obtain information of the average value of improved and unimproved lands in the different counties as well as the amount of culti vated land idle this season and new land just broken. This report when published will make a valuable document and will be sen free to all who may write for a sample copy to The Nebraska Farmer at Lincoln.

as the winner, and his court room in Tur BEE building was crowded to the door. In that room John M. Rose and Jerry O'Grady, two neighbors, are arrayed, one against the other, and a worthless red and white spotted cur is the bone of contention. Rose alleges that at one time he was the owner of the identical pup, and that the indications were that some day it would grow to be a dog of great ability and promise. Adding to his allegations, he avers that upon a certain night, not many months ago, the pup was upon the streets, baying at the moon, when O'Grady happened along and, with his going, the dog stopped his tender baying and disappeared. In other words, he alleges that O'Grady, with force and arms, stole the pup. Through the course of natural events he alleges that the pup did not like his new home and tried to make his escape, which he succeeded in doing, but a few hours later fell a victim to the wily snares of the city dog catcher, and subsequently was consigned to the depths of the Missouri river. All of this Rose avers that he learned, when he swore out a replevin for the dis-covery and return of the dog.

O'Grady admits that he had possession of the animal, but alleges that it came anout by the fact that the beast followed him home, as he scented the deast followed him home, as he scented the taste of fresh meat, an article of dog diet that had not passed into his stomach for months. Quarrel Over a Cow.

The case of the state against John Doe. real name August DeRaugonskie, is another suit in Justice Smith's court that is proving something of a drawing card. In th the stake which is being fought for is a cow and $12 coin of the realm.

As the story goes, the contending parties, DeRangonskie and Jens Jensen, who in other words is the state of Nebraska in this particular case, are neighbors and reside ou along the Military road. in the vicinity o Frahm's park. Some six weeks ago Jensen was the owner of a horse, which one night wandered into Dellangonskie's cabbage patch, spreading devastation and ruin about the entire field. Dellangonskie, being an early rise", caught the animal and held it for a ransom, fixing the price of the same at twelve boycotted and hated silver dollars. Jensen was averse to paying the amount and at once told his neighbor that also. Time moved along until yesterday, the owner of the barse and cabbage keeping possession of the beast of burden and covet-ing something else. While there is the possession of the beast of burden and covet-ing something else. While Jensen was in the city yesterday DeRangenskie slipped over to the premises, and, laying Mrs. Jen-sen low with a club, proceeded to drive away a cow, which he proposed to take in full payment of all bills and accounts. About this time Jensen returned, and a pretty fight took place, during which Mr. DeRangenskie was put to sleen accound to the most an was put to sleep according to the most approved fashion. Jensen at once saddled a horse and rode to Jenson at once saddled a horse and rode to the city, swearing out a warraut for the arrest of his neighbor, charging that he was guilty of assualt mon Mrs. Jenson, with in-tent to do great bedily harm. This docu-ment was placed in the hands of Constable Blonde Clark for service and to the DeRan-gonski domicile he went last night. There he had a fight both the assunter and his he had a fight, both the assaulter and his wife rallying to the fray, each armed with butcher knives. Single handed and alone, so he avers. Clark disarmed both of the parties and laylog official hands upon the husband brought him to the city, where he was lodged in the county jail.
