Trial of Chief Nicholson and the Firemen Acoused of Incendiarism.

WEBBER GIVES STARTLING TESTIMONY

Protectors of the City Placed in an Unenviable Light-An Awtol State of Affairs H True-The Other Evidence Adduced.

Chief Charles Nicholson, Firemen James O'Brien, Peter Kuykendail and Miles Schofield, and Ben Webber had their preliminary hearing in police court yesterday on the charge of conspiracy to commit a felony. As a result O'Brien and Kuykendall have regained their liberty, while Nicholson, Schofield and Webber are still under the ban with a strong probability of their being bound over to the grand jury. Judge McGee took the case under advisement and will probably render his decision today or tomor-

Attracted General Interest. The morning session of the police court was held in the room over the patrol house, and the four walls were almost dislocated by the crowd that sought admittance. Every inch of available standing room was occupied. It has been years since there has been a case that attracted so much attention from the public. That four men who were drawing salaries every month for helping protect the city from the ravages of fire should be accused of entering into a combi-nation with a fifth man by which the law-less element should be allowed to do its work on the property of the city without hindrance seemed almost beyond belief, and every one who could get inside the court room was anxious to do so in order to hear the details of the affair. To accommodate the crowd Judge McGee held the afternoon session in the council chamber, which was almost as full as the smaller room had been #### in the morning. Webber's Testimony.

Webber himself was the first to testify at the opening of the morning session. He told a strange story, the main facts of which coincided with that which appeared in yes-terday's BEE, but the details were decidedly nteresting to the audience, as well as to the defendants.

"I have been an applicant for a position on the fire department for something over a year, but never succeeded in getting a chance to do anything more than special work. Lasked Chief Nicholson for a job when he was first elected, and again when John Rogers was appointed. He told me I stood a good show. In all I have worked three weeks at No. 3 and three days at No. 4 as substitute. When I was not working I made a practice of loading at No. 4 a good deal. No. 4 was the headquarters of the chief, and he sometimes slept there, as well as being there most of the day.

Wednesday afternoon we went to Omaha to see a ball game. By we, I mean the chief, Miles Schoffeld and myself. We drank several beers on the way over, and several coming back. While on the cabic car coming back the three of us got into a conversation about matters connected with the fire de-partment. I asked the chief if I could not ret an appointment and he replied that if there were more fires there would be more firemen. He told me to get out and hustle firemen. He told me to get out and and he'd make a holler for more mer gave me to understand that I should be the next man appointed.

Agreed to Burn a Building. "When we got off the cable car we went when we got on the cable car we went to the Denver saloon, where we drank some more. Schofield left us just after we went out of the saloon. Before he left us we had a talk by ourselves, which I don't think the chief heard. In it Schoffeld and I agreed to go and set a fire at a certain hour that night. The marble works and the shed back of Maurer's crockery store were spoken of by us as the best places for a fire. We drank plenty-all we wanted.

"When we got back to Council Bluffs we went up to No. 4's, but only stayed a min-ute. Then we went down to a saloon east of Bryant street on Broadway and played ker a while, and I lost. I sat and watched the game a while longer. It was between 1 o'clock and 1:30 when I went back to the engine house. I went up stairs, opened a cupboard and took out a lot of waste sat-urated with kerosene and started for the marble works to set it on five. Before I had done the job the officers caught me and took me to the station. They let me go, and I wet back to the engine house. The chief, who had been sitting in a chair by the stove when I went in the first time, was lying on top of a pile of hay fast asleep. I to'd him that the officers had got me and asked him if he wouldn't help me. He saut he would? f he wouldn't help me. He said he would.

O'Brien and Kuykendall Discharged. When asked what other members of the are department had tried to induce him to start fires, he could not say anything very definite. All he could remember of O'Brien's saying was to tell him to "do a good job" whenever he would leave the house. He always took this as a joke, as he thought O'Brien meant it. Kuykenuall had remarked at various times, when he would be passing an old ramshackle building that that place would make a good fire, and that was all he had said. The evidence against the two of the defendants was so meager that at the opening of the afternoon session City Attorney Hazleton dismissed the case as far as they were concerned.

Schofield was put upon the stand in the afternoon, and the most striking characteristic of his testimony was the sweeping way in which he swore against everything. He had never even heard the subject of incen-diary fires mentioned at the engine house. On the trip to Omaha Wednesday afternoon the only thing that was said during the whole afternoon was with reference to the wind. Some one said, "That wind blows pretty hard." Nobody either affirmed or denied the allegation, and that was the end of conversational attempts.

Chief Nicholson's Story.

Nicholson's testimony was almost as sweeping in its denials, and it was worded in almost exactly the same language. In addition he said that he had never given Webbotton he said that he had never given Webber the least encouragement in his aspirations to a position on the fire department. There had been several vacancies since Webber made his first application, but he had never been appointed. The conversation told of in Webber's testimony with reference to Nicholson's agreement to help Webber after he had been causaft by the officers was denied in toto. He was lying asleep in the haymow when the officers asicep in the haymow when the officers came up, because Kuykendali was sick and one of the other men had a leave of absence.

one of the other men had a leave of absence. When City Attorney Hazelton came to cross-examine him Nicholson was compelled to admit that he did not make a practice of sleeping with his hat and overcoat on when he slept at the engine house, and did not know why he made a change in his usual tactics on this occasion. He was not drunk, however—he was certain of that, although he admitted having drank a few beers, he could not say how many, during the afternoon and evening. noon and evening.

A question as to his condition when he smashed the new hat in the store in Omaha was ruled out on an objection from his attorneys.
"You and Webber wanted to accommodate those follows who wish their ground cleared of old buildings so they may put up brick blocks when you lit those fires, didn't you?" was Hazeiton's last question.

"Naw," was Nicholson's emphatic answer,

Naw, was Nicholson's empiratic answer, delivered in a way that made the audience quite hilarious under its breath.

This ended the taking of evidence, and some time was form up by the arguments of the attorners. At the close Judge McGee announced that on account of the importance of the case he did not want. decision at once. He accordingly took the case under advisement, and a decision is coked for sometime today or tomorrow.

Rather Absurd Theory.

The organ of the local democracy made a great effort last evening to charge that the bringing of the fire chief into the case was part of a political scheme by which J. M. Scanian, the republican candidate for sheriff, was to reap benefit. The editorial in which this charge was made is laughed at by the democrats who do not allow this organ to do all their thinking for thom. That Walber all their thinking for them. That Webber, who is a democrat, should render himself liable to a term in the peniten tiary in order to give a son of J.M. Scaalan, who is a member of the American Protective association and a republican, a chance to distin-guish himself and incidentally to throw a halo around the family name for political purposes is a little too absurd to deserve a

REPUSED TO SUSPEND.

Fire Chief Nicholson Still Holds Down His Position in Spite of Everything. The city council held a meeting last evening for the avowed purpose of taking some action with reference to the charge of drunkenness which has been made against Chief Nicholson of the fire department. It was the tamest kind of a meeting and the action of the council seems to indicate strongly that the chief's misconduct will be whitewashed at the final wind-up unless that part of the public which owns property and wants it protected by men who are not in the habit of going to bed with their boots. hats and overcoats on, rises up and demands that something be done.

Mayor Lawrence opened the ball by reading an official communication in which he stated that as it had been charged that Charles Nicholson, chief of the fire department, had been guilty of gross misconduct on the 11th inst in being intoxicated, he submitted the case to the council to be investigated. After some discussion, next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock was decided upon as the time for leaving into the classes. upon as the time for looking into the charges

A resolution was read by the city clerk providing that cards be printed with sections 12, 14 and 16 of the ordinance governing the fire department and posted in conspicuous places in the engine houses and that hereafter the rules be strictly enforced. These sections provide that no intoxicating liquors shall be brought into any of the engine houses, that any fireman being found guilty of drunkenness be discharged, that any fireman absenting himself from his house excepting when the rules allow it be discharged, that members who visit saloons, gambling houses or other improper places be discharged and that men who do not belong to the fire department be prohibited from making the engine houses a loafing place. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Alderman Smith moved that pending an investigation of the charge above referred to Chief Nicholson be suspended from office. "On, that's not necessary," said Keller.

"I never heard of allowing a public offic to hold his place with a charge like that hanging over him." retorted Smith.

The alderman from the Fifth was outnumbered 7 to 1, however, and his motion failed even to get a second. Tibbitts, the only other republican member in the council, failing to side with him, from the fact that Nicholson was a relative of his. It was evident that nothing more would be done, so a motion to adjourn was made and car ried in a trice.

Another Incendiary Blaze. A building located at 618 West Broadway ook fire last evening and the fire department had to be called out to extinguish the blaze. Like most of the other fires that have occurred recently this was an incendiary blaze to all appearances. It caught on the southeast corner of the building on the outside while J. N. Miller, who occupies the upper story as a dwelling, was at church with his family. The fire burned to the top of the building before it was finally extinguished. The house is the property of William Moore and the lower floor was oc cupied by Flood & Smith as a feed and fuel establishment. Both the house and the furniture owned by Miller were fully insured. The loss was about $300.
