LINCOLN CITIZENS PROTEST

Consolidated Street Railway Company Likely to Have Trouble.

SUBURBAN INTERESTS NOT PROTECTED

It Must Show Cause Why It Should Not Be Made to Replace a Line that Was Abandoned and Destroyed.

DLINCOLN, Oct. 17 .- [Special to THE BEE ]-The Lincoln Street Railway company has been requested to appear in the supreme court and show cause why it should not be made to replace the portion of its line purchased by F. W. Little in trust for the company and afterward abandoned. The case comes up in the shape of an application for a writ of mandamus, and is entitled the State of Nebraska, ex rel John J. Gillilan and Aldridge Kitchen, relators, against the Home Street Railway company, the Lincoln Street Railway company and F. W. Little, respondents.

The line in question was built in 1890 and was known as the Capital Heights Street railway. It was consolidated with the City Electric Street rallway and was operated by the company owning the latter. In 1893 the City Electric Street Railway company was reorganized under the name of the Home Street Railway company. Later F. W. Little, president of the Lincoln Street Railway corpany, purchased the Homo Etreet railway, paving $93,000 for it. When the road was originally built the property owners along the line paid large sums of money to aid it, Gillian and Kitchen paying $1,400. They sliege that the sale of the line to Little was only a scheme to consolidate the street railway lines under one management, and that the sale was really made to the Lincoln Street Railway company for the purpose of stifling competition. Six weeks after the Home street line was purchased by Little it was abandoned and later the work of tear-ing up the tracks commenced. Now there is nothing left of the line save that portion that runs on Randorph street. The relators want it ordered that the line shall be replaced and operated as was intended and segreed upon when they assisted the original company to build it. They claim that the abandonment of the line has worked them injury, which can only be remedied by replacing the line.

Since the Lincoln Street Railway company has come into possession of all the street railway lines in the city it has abandoned several of them and in several cases removed the track. The outcome of this case will be watched with a great deal of interest, and if the railway company is defeated it will be confronted with a number of similar cases. In the Lauer Case,

At 11 o'clock this morning the jury panel was exhausted, and still there was no jury to try the case of Dan Lauer. Court ad-journed after calling a special venire of thirty men, and the baliffs and deputy sheriffs were ordered to get the men into the court room as soon as possible. At the hour of adjournment the following jurors were in the box: F. M. Harris, W. Fricke, H. Johnson, C. M. Loomis, J. R. Spelts, John Strotz, A. Holleron, A. D. Burr, J. W. Percival, H. H. Leavitt and S. B. Loughridge, Each H. Leavitt and S. B. Loughridge. Each side has three peremptory challenges left. When the court adjourned this evening there was still an uncompleted jury, but it is thought that the jury will be completed before noon tomorrow. The indictment under which Lauer is being tried is the one returned by the Mayagrand jury—the second one called. The indictment found by the first grand jury, the legality of which is before the supreme court, was nollied this morning on motion of County nollied this morning on motion of County Attorney Woodward. The indictment on which Lauer is being tried charges him with obtaining $63 from the state in September, 1891, by means of false and fraudulent

Some time ago Lydia L. Hawkins asked the district court to give her a divorce from in Hawkins. Judge Strode heard the case this morning, and instead of giving the divorce to Mrs. Hawkins he gave it to Mr. Hawkins. The court found that Mrs. Haw-kins had forgotten her maritai vows and had been guilty of doing things that were not in keeping with the acts of a chaste and loving wife. In other words she was found to have committed adultery with one Charles Holstein. The two children are given into the care of Mr. Hawkins.

A lighted lantern in a barn at 159 F street caused a blaze about 7 o'clock last night. Mrs. John Aura was in the loft storing away Mrs. John Aura was in the loft storing away a load of hay. She hung the lantern on a nail and in some way it fell and set fire to the hay. She threw the lantern out and it set fire to the load on the outside. The mules hitched to the load ran away and before they could be stopped the load was destroyed and the mules somewhat scorched. The barn was totally destroyed, together with a cow and a lot of chickens. Mrs. Aura was badly, though not seriously, burned before she could get down from the loft.

Want a New Trial.

Marquette, Deweese & Hall, attorneys for the proponents in the Turner will case, this afternoon filed a motion for a new trial, alleging that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence. Several allegations of error are made regarding the exclusion of certain testimony and the admission of other. Error in the instructions of the court are also alleged. The case was one where Dr. Turner, deceased, is said to have made a will bequeathing his property to certain Presbyterian missions. The will disappeared and it was sought to have the missions get the property anyhow. The legal heirs objected and won their case.

Odd Fellows in Session.

The grand encampment of the Odd Fellows of Nebraska was called to order at 10 o'clock this morning by Grand Patriarch Heiler of Hastings. The morning session was devoted to appointing committees and hearing the reports of the secretary and treasurer. Owing to a misunderstanding as to the place of meeting the grand lodge did not meet until this afternoon and nothing was done further than appointing committees and listening to reports. This evening the Rebekahs met at the senate chamber, Mrs. George Bennett of Omaha, president, presiding.

CITY HALL OPENING.

Formal Dedication of the New Building Will Take Place Soon.

Councilman Jacobsen, the chairman of the committee on public property and buildings of the city council, informs THE BEE that the public opening of the city hall will occur shortly. The day will probably be on a Saturday, and the hours from 5 to 10 in the evening.

The building will be decorated in the interior, and the hundreds of electric lights and gas jets will be lighted. There will be speechmaking in the council chamber, a band of music, and the heads of the differ-ent departments and their assistants will be at their posts of duty to inform the people of what the city government consists. The building will be turned over in public by the contractor and received by a representative of the city.

This event will take place on some Satur-day previous to the November election.

aspicious Circumstances Surrounding the Prisoner's Story of the Tragedy Repeated in an Indifferent Manner-Opening of the Arguments.

FREMONT, Oct. 17 .- [Special to THE BEE. ]-The court house was crowded when court pened this morning, as it was expected that the cross-examination of Charles Carleton would be searching and thorough. The general sentiment was that his story as told yesterday would not bear close investigation, and there was much curiosity as to how he would stand the ordeal that faced He did not finish his direct testimony yesterday, and it was completed this morning. terday, and it was completed this morning. He said he recognized the revolver exhibited in court as the weapon with which the shooting was done. He explained the positions in which the revolver was held in the tussle. He explained that the reason he grasped the revolver in his left hand was that he was left-handed. There was no shot fired after he got full possession of the gun. He didn't know until the struggle was concluded that Gothman had been shot. He did not ascertain that the man was shot three ascertain that the man was shot three times till he learned it from the coroner. When he got up he saw that the man was bleeding on the carpet and took hold of him and pulled him into the bed room. He then poured water on the blood and swept it out of the kitchen door. He removed the body into the ned room because he didn't want his wife and his father to come in and stumble over the body. He intended to go for the sheriff. He took the hat worn by the man out of the blood and put it into the stove. He told his neighbors that it was a tramp because he didn't want his wife brought into the affair.

Couldn't Hear the Third Shot. He was deafened by the first shot fired near his head so that he couldn't hear the report of the third shot. He didn't tell Mrs. Kimmell that he shot the tramp "until he couldn't go any more." but that he shot the revolver until it wouldn't go any more. He didn't know what revolver it was until one of Middaugh's boys suggested that it be-longed to Henry Luke. He didn't tell Mid-daugh that he thought it might be better to bury the body and say nothing about it, but told him that at first, in his excitement, he thought that it would be the best way, but finally concluded to give himself up to the sheriff. He called Gothman a tramp simply because he was tramping on the railroad. The blood he got on him was during the struggle. The first time he heard that Minnie was the wife of Gothman he was told by the sheriff that she had con-fessed that Gothman was her husband. On cross-examination the prisoner said he never told any other person than his attor-ney the story told on the stand. The other stories were not true where they conflict with this. There was not an unpleasant word spoken until he met Gothman with the word spoken until he met Gothman with the pistol. There had been nothing said about the girl until Gothman demanded to know about "his woman." He was in reach of Gothman with the hammer in his right hand. Didn't know what he did with the hammer. When the first shot went off the man was in the door leading from the kitchen to the front room. They were in about the same place when the second shot went off. Didn't know when the third shot went off. He said he didn't tell the coroner that one shot went out of the door. He didn't tell Middaugh that one shot went into the air.

didn't tell Middaugh that one shot went into the air.

N. C. Carleton, father of the defendant, testified that the girl Mary never told Charlie in his presence that Minnie was her stepmother. He did not enter his house after the tragedy until the next day. He found a door and a chair broken as evidence of the struggle. On cross-examination he stated that he did not say anything about the broken door or chair at the coroner's inquest because nobody asked him. quest because nobody asked him. Godfrey Dista, grandfather of the Goth man children, testified that he saw August Gothman in South Omaha after they arrived there before the tragedy and told him that Minnie went away with Charlie Carleton. On cross-examination he explained that he said she had gone to Sioux City, but that Charlie came back.

This concluded the defendant's testimony.

Opening of the Arguments. George S. Loomis opened the case for the state in an eloquent and forcible manner. He denounced the crime of murder as the worst of all crimes and one that the united sentiment of the civilized world condemns and abhors.

August Gothman, he declared, was killed on the 8th of June. On that matter, all were agreed, the only difference being as to whether the killing was felonious or in selfdefense. No colder-blooded murder was ever committed without a motive. Was ever committed without a motive. Was there a motive in this case? He believed that there was the strongest of motives. The perpetrator had become enamored of his victim's wife and had married her. He knew that they both could not enjoy her and that as long as they both lived there was no hope for him, as the other had a prior claim. There was no question, the speaker thought, that Carieton knew before he met Gothman on that tatal morning in June that Minnie Gothman was the wife of August Gothman. The testimony to that effect had been almost positive. He planned to meet his intended victim alone. Had he believed, as he claims, that Gothman had no claim on her, why should he not have met him like a man why should he not have met him like a man and asserted his claim? Thought the Story False.

The story told on the witness stand by The story told on the witness stand by Carleton the attorney decided was a most improbable one from start to finish. The accidental discharge of three bullets, all aimed at Gothman's brain and fired close enough to singe the skin, and all fired from different directions, is absolutely inconceivable. The testimony, so much different from any story ever told by the defendant, stamps it as having been concocted for the occasion. "If the story told on the witness stand were true why should his counsel have occasion. "If the story told on the witness stand were true why should his counsel have kept it back from the coroner's inquest!" he asked. "It was perfectly innocent and harmless and would have materially helped his case, in fact, if true, it has been an outrage to have kept him in jail all this time."

Mr. Loomis carefully went over the evidence, and his masterly argument of two hours duration was listened to with considerable attention by a crowded house.

At the close of Mr. Loomis' plea it was announced that Wesley Carleton, who was shot on Sunday, was dead, and court adjourned to give the prisoner an opportunity to view his brother's remains.

SAPOLIO

Yailoring to Order

There's a mint of money in 207 South 18th St. a big business even if we don't make much of any one.

We've built up the largest tailoring business in the world and it's growing every minute. We have no idea that we've got to the end of our string for trade; not at all.

We are going in for more trade every day.

Thousands of intelligent buyers have yet to hear of our novmon made to measure and have yet to see our big assort-ment of woolens and samples of our make on dressy men.

We will show many yet a new pathway for money saving and better dressing.

Our prices are as little as our business is big.

Suits to order $20 to $50 Trousers to order $5 to $15 Cash only buys. Overcoats to order $18 and up.

You see the same prices elsewhere, but they have a very, very different meaning when Nicoll's name is along-
