VOORHEES BILL PASSED BY THE HOUSE

Speeches Made and Other Proceedings Before that Body Yesterday—How the Members Voted—It Has Been Signed by the President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Silver purchases by the government ceased today. The purpose for which Mr. Cleveland called congress in extra session was accomplished at 4:25 this afternoon, when he affixed his signature to the bill to repeal unconditionally the purchasing clause of the Sherman law.

The struggle in the house was short. Only twenty-seven minutes were allowed for the debate by the silver leaders, Messrs. Bland and Bryan, Mr. Bland and his colleagues, knowing further opposition was futile, referred to sacrifice the opportunity for a few hours debate offered by Mr. Wilson in order to force the majority to bring in cloture and concur in the senate amendment by duress. But even in this they failed.

Neither Mr. Bryan nor Mr. Snodgrass, his lieutenant, are well versed in parliamentary proceedings, and when thrown off their guard by a momentary distraction they exposed their flank by falling to follow one filibustering motion with another. Speaker Crisp overwhelmed them by putting the pending motion to order the previous question. It was carried with a roar. The filibusters had been caught napping, and nothing remained for them but to submit.

For thirty minutes, under the rule, followed the battle of oratory amid great confusion and excitement. At its conclusion the vote was taken on Mr. Bland's free coinage substitute. The majority against it was seventy-three. Then came the final vote on concurring in the senate amendments. The vote stood 193 for concurrence and 94 against.

When the original bill passed the house August 28 the vote stood 201 to 100, so that although the total vote today was smaller, the proportion was practically the same. The final vote was taken at 3:50. The bill was engrossed at once, and at 3:10 the formal announcement was made to the senate that its amendment had been agreed to by the house.

The bill was hurriedly enrolled by Chairman Pearson of the committee on enrolled bills and at 3:30 it was given to Speaker Crisp for his name. A fleet-footed messenger carried it to the senate, where it was taken up at 4:25. The bill was signed by the president at 4:25. The bill was signed by the president at 4:25.

Mr. Bland took to the desk and had read his amendment. It revises the free coinage act of 1837. Mr. Bland said a vote must now be taken upon the amendment, and he returned to the law of 1837. The recent panic was precipitated by the moneyed interests of the country, and he proposed to wipe out until after the political party to which he and they belonged had redeemed its pledge by restoring the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

Mr. Bland said the bill was not to be repealed. He said the bill was not to be repealed. He said the bill was not to be repealed. He said the bill was not to be repealed. He said the bill was not to be repealed.

By this time the area in front of the speaker's chair was crowded with members and the aisles were choked. Mr. Allen

TO HIS LAST RESTING PLACE

Scenes at the Funeral of the Assassinated Mayor of Chicago.

CARTER H. HARRISON LAID IN HIS GRAVE

All Night Long Crawds Thronged the City Hall for a Last Look at His Body and Today Followed the Hearse to the Cemetery.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—With the solemn pomp and imposing ceremonies attending the funeral of the chief magistrate of the World's Fair city and his pitiful dramatic fate, Carter H. Harrison's body was escorted to Graceland cemetery by an immense throng of sorrowing citizens.

Tenderly the remains were borne from the black-draped and flower-scented corridor of the city hall, where they had rested in state, and placed in the funeral car. Through the great crowd that gathered to see the murdered mayor's last unveiling of the scenes of his arduous labor in behalf of the city he loved, the black car slowly passed and took its place in the waiting procession.

As the hearse drew into line, the march was taken up and thousands who had gathered to do honor to the dead moved slowly through the crowded streets with banners draped and to the sad music of the funeral march.

Thousands Mourned for Him. Out from the center of the city the great procession moved across the river and to the beautiful church of Epiphany near the lake executive's home.

From the time the mayor's body was placed in the city hall a continuous procession has moved through the corridor and past the interior of the Graceland chapel.

A peculiarly pathetic reminder of the dead mayor's life was a pair of shoes which he had worn on the day he was shot.

Scenes Along the Funeral's Route. From every window, upon every roof and in every doorway along the line of march, from the city out almost to the county line, faces looked forth upon the solemn scene.

During the crush opening the doors of the city hall, a crowd of about 100,000 people gathered, and the police were unable to control the mob.

Guarded the Assassins. Because of the great crowds down town to view the funeral procession of the dead mayor, Sheriff Gilbert became alarmed for the safety of the murderers.

Services at the Church. The services at the church were not of great duration, consisting only of an address by Rev. T. N. Morrison, rector, and the singing of several hymns. The last hymn

Nov. 1.—(By Mexican Cable to the New York Herald-Special to THE BEE.)—Advices from Rio Janeiro are that the siege is likely to be prolonged, perhaps indefinitely. It has been declared extended until November 30, and may be continued beyond that time.

The warship Republica has been ordered by the president to cruise about the mouth of the river Plata to await the appearance of the Tiradentes, the warship that has remained loyal to the government, or for other ships that may make their appearance there.

Argentina's minister has filed a protest with the diplomatic corps against the seizure by Mello of the cargo of Argentina's steamer, Pedro Percero. The Herald's correspondent at Buenos Ayres, Argentina, has also sent advices to the effect that Argentina's minister in Rio de Janeiro, falling sick, has resigned his position.

It is expected that the ships recently purchased in England by President Polkito will arrive at Santos this month. Mello has failed in obtaining recognition from the Spanish government, and some time ago sent a cablegram to the Spanish government asking that it recognize the belligerence of the insurgents.

WEeping Water, Neb., Nov. 1.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Matt Akeson, a well known German, was shot and killed at his home, six and a half miles northeast of this place, this evening. Robbery was the incentive, and the crime was committed by two unknown men who were indebted to their victim for food and shelter.

Saturday two strangers came to Akeson's place and applied for assistance. Both were abled and when proffered work in the cornfield they accepted. They were kept at the house over Sunday, and Monday they went to work husking corn. As shuckers they were hardly phenoms, and when Tuesday night came Akeson discharged them, paying each his wages for two days. Today they were both in Weeping Water. One went into a hardware store and bought a cheap 38-caliber revolver, while the other waited outside. Then they disappeared.

Shot Their Benefactor. Just after the Akeson family sat down to supper tonight the door of the farm house was thrown open and into the dining room stalked the two ex-shuckers. "Throw up your hands!" commanded the one who held the pistol.

Two Others Shot. Tom Akeson had taken a hand in the fight and got a shot through the left hand near the wrist, disabling him. Another hired man, whose name is not known, was shot in the right leg at the knee and he, too, was disabled.

In the meantime the second of the robbers was not idle. He was armed only with a club and while his partner was making every shot in his new revolver, the stick was being used on old Mrs. Akeson. She was knocked down and severely beaten about the head. It is not known just how seriously she is injured, but it is thought she may survive, though dangerously low.
