

AMONG THE WAGE EARNERS

Central Labor Union Contemplates the Adoption of a New Constitution.

POSSIBLE DISAGREEMENT OVER REVISION

Some Members Favor Going Into Politics—Others Prefer a Passive Stand—Knights of Labor News-Talks with Trade Unionists—Notes.

The committee elected by the Central Labor union to revise the constitution has held several meetings, but on account of the thorough consideration it is giving to several proposed changes it was compelled to only report progress at the last meeting of the organization and asked for further time, which was unanimously granted.

It is expected a revised constitution will be reported for ratification by this committee, as some of the oldest and most experienced members of organized labor were elected to do this work.

One of the questions which is puzzling this committee is to decide just how far it should enter into politics. Some of the members are very outspoken in favor of the central body going into politics, while others maintain that they can exercise more power and do more good by staying out of politics.

Others favor picking out friends of labor to vote for success. This being a very ticklish subject to handle, if the committee's report should not be an unanimous one, may precipitate a meeting of the body to discuss the matter.

Both extremes of public opinion are well represented when a full meeting of the organization is held in the central body is a demand for a progressive constitution. Another important subject being considered is the making up of the central organization into two divisions, it shall become attached to the American Federation of Labor.

Before the last constitution was adopted the central body admitted members of any labor organization represented upon their being vouched for by some one present. The visitors, but this practice was not satisfactory to a majority, and the visitors were prohibited entirely.

In the new constitution now it is proposed to allow visitors a seat without a voice in the proceedings, provided a delegate member of the same organization is present to vouch for the visiting member. It is claimed by many that such an arrangement would prove beneficial to all the organizations.

A leading member of district assembly 120 of the Knights of Labor, in speaking of the action of the general assembly, said: "The Knights of Labor are to be congratulated upon having secured the services of Master Workman Powderly for another term. Mr. Powderly is acquainted with every detail of the visiting members of the Knights of Labor, which is really a great corporation run on business principles for the interest of the laboring people in general and its own members in particular."

The men who took the strikers' places in the Louisville and Nashville shops had their laundry refused by all the laundries of the city of Louisville. The girls employed in the shops were refused to touch the clothing of the strikers.

At least 100,000 persons live upon the property of the diamond cutting industry in the city of Amsterdam, Holland, and of the eight factories in that city fifty-four are for polishing and setting diamonds. At present it is reported that 60,000 diamonds are being cut and set in Amsterdam.

Colonel Streator of the Pennsylvania militia, who became famous on account of his capture of Private James H. Smith, a homesick soldier, by the thumbs at the front of his neck, was arrested by a man who shot him. He was arrested while drunk in Wheeling, W. Va., for stealing a horse. He will probably be compelled to retire from the militia.

Rev. Mr. Parker, in a sermon at the City temple, London, contended that "the only protest against the strike of the coal miners was for the sake of the coal miners, was for the sake of the coal miners, was for the sake of the coal miners."

During the last twenty months the National Typographical union of Germany has spent $88,324 for strike benefits, and still has a full treasury. Many of their members have and are now in prison for alleged conspiracy while others were exiled because they refused to accept the government's offer of opposition to the present form of government in Germany. The life of a labor organizer is not a bed of roses in Germany.

Board of County Commissioners. The county commissioners were in session for ten minutes yesterday afternoon, after which they adjourned until next Wednesday afternoon. At the brief session the appropriation bills were allowed.

A number of the voters of Waterloo filed a protest against the election of H. H. Hoad Superior, declaring that he had not the man for whom they voted and who received a majority of all the votes cast. It was like this: O. W. Waterloo, B. F. Richardson, wanted the office, but he did not get his name on the printed ballots. When it came his turn to vote, he refused to vote for Hoad, but the residents of the precinct wrote his name upon the ballots, but forgo to make the necessary cross. All of these ballots were laid aside and Mr. Richardson was elected.

The commissioners decided that they could furnish no relief and that they could not go behind the returns.

Some of the Evidence Upon Which Mr. Blount Based His Report.

STATEMENT FROM QUEEN LILOUKALANI

Her Story of the Revolution in Honolulu and the Incidents Leading Up to it—She Depends Upon the Justice of Her Cause.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The fourth volume of papers accompanying the Blount report was given out by the State department this afternoon, consisting of all the disclosures made by Mr. Blount in his dispatches and his report to the National Guard of Honolulu on which he based his report.

Numerous affidavits bearing on the events of the day the provisional government was proclaimed go to show that Minister Stevens had recognized the provisional government and troops had been landed before the queen's forces, under the command of Marshal Wilson, had surrendered to the provisional government.

The statement of Lillokalanai, adds Mr. Blount, is of especial interest and importance. It is a recitation of all the events of her reign. On December 17, 1892, she claims she received a letter, from a source that she does not care to divulge, warning her that the American representatives were at that time preparing for the annexation of the island.

She appealed to the British commissioner and to the United States minister to lay the matter before the members of the diplomatic corps. She says: "Statement from the Queen."

"Early in January I mentioned to Captain Knowlton of the household guards and to Mr. Wilson, the marshal, my intention to promulgate a new constitution, and to prepare myself to quell any outbreak from the opposition. They assured me that they would be ready and I gave strict injunctions to my secretary and to Mr. Wilson a plan of the throne room on the day of the signing."

"Mr. Parker and Mr. Cornwall had given me assurances of their support before their appointment as ministers, while Mr. Peterson understood such was my intention, and although I had not mentioned it to Mr. Colburn, he had heard of it already from Mr. Peterson."

"I told them that on their learning of my intentions Mr. Colburn, on the morning of January 14, immediately called the part of a traitor going to Mr. Hartwell, a lawyer, and informing him of my intentions, and, of course, received instructions from him to refuse to do anything to help me."

"This, then, was the cause of the delay. When the ministers arrived I told them everything in the throne room was ready and that I was waiting for their presence; that we must not keep them waiting."

"She was surprised when the cabinet informed me that they did not think it advisable for me to take such a step; that if they did not encourage me, they had led me to believe that they would do so."

"I was humiliated. I said: 'Why not give the people the constitution and I will bear the burden of it?' They said: 'We have not read the constitution.'"

"I told him he had it in his possession a whole month. The three ministers left Mr. Parker to try to dissuade me from my purpose, and, in the meantime, they all (Peterson, Cornwall and Colburn) went to the government building to inform the board of his party of the stand I took. Of course they were instructed not to yield."

"The ministers returned. I asked them to read the constitution over. At the end I asked them what they saw injurious in it. Mr. Peterson said there were some points which he thought were not exactly suited. I told him that the legislature could make the amendments. He begged I should wait two weeks; in the meantime they would study the constitution and report to me."

"I yielded as I was to be a queen party, nothing more and nothing less."

"The idea," said a well known populist, "is to form a party that will carry the silver issue for the first and only time. The friends of silver, regardless of their views on any other subject."
