RELIGION BEFORE THE BAR

Acrimonious Argument Between Omaha Attorneys in the Probate Court.

MARY M'KENNA'S WILL CAUSES DEBATE

Baldwin Scores Catholicism and the Franciscan Sisterhood—Smyth Replies—Interesting War of Words Between the Lawyers in a Celebrated Case.

The arguments in the Mary McKenna will case continue to have the way in the probate court, to the exclusion of about all other business.

Last February Mary McKenna died at St. Joseph's hospital in this city, possessed of property which aggregated $7,000 in value. This, by the terms of a will executed a few hours prior to her death, she left to the Orphanage in Benson Place, an institution which is under the control and direction of the Franciscan Sisterhood of the Catholic church.

Prior to her death Mary McKenna had been a client of C. A. Baldwin of this city, and a few months ago he filed a petition in the probate court to set aside the will, charging that it was obtained by fraudulent methods and at a time when the maker was not in a condition of mind which would permit of an intelligent bequeatnment of the property. Two sisters in Ireland appeared as the contestants, setting up the claim that as they were next of kin they were entitled to the property which was left by the sister, who was a resident of this state.

Baldwin Arraigns Catholicism.

Some time ago the testimony was submitted, and Wednesday fixed for the date for hearing the arguments. At that time Mr. Baldwin appeared on behalf of his clients and for hours he arraigned the Catholic church and its expounders of the Catholic doctrines. He alleged that the order of the Franciscan Sisterhood was conceived in iniquity. The attorney characterized the sisters as fawning proselytes and the priests as men who acted in the capacity of knaves in offering indulgences to those who would confess their sins

While making his arguments, Mr. Baldwin was frequently applauded by a lobby that filled about all the available space in the little court room.

Yesterday afternoon, however, the other side had its inning and the lash was applied in such a vigorous manner that the aged attorney left the room, going beyond the sound of C. J. Smyth's voice, the attorney who appeared for the Franciscan Sisterhood.

In putting Mr. Baldwin upon the spit, Mr. Smyth took occasion to say that there were some men who could never find virtue and purity in either men or women and invariably such men always seemed to forget that their mothers were women. Such men looked back upon their lives and found the picture so dark, so black and disgusting that they never saw anything but crime, disgrace and the almighty dollar.

Smyth's Scathing Rebuke.

Reciting the history of the Franciscan Sisterhood Mr. Smyth said that the members of the order were always found ministering ● the sick and the dying, regardless of sex, creed, or hope of reward. These were cases, he said, which never entered into their motives. They left their homes and consecrated themselves to a cause which they felt was following out the instructions of Christ, given when He told His disciples to go out and heal the sick.

"This religious question, which was brought into this case by Mr. Baldwin," said Mr. Smyth, "has nothing to do with the issues and is here for no other reason than to induce your honor to decide contrary to the law and the evidence.

"It is an insult to your honor and a disgrace to common decency for this man to come here and ask a court to take this money from that institution out on the hill, the home of several hundred little fatherless and motherless children, and transfer it to three sisters in Ireland, simply because the institution to which it was left is connected with a church that is hated and despised by a certain set of men, who have bound themselves together and arrayed themselves against that particular church.

Several Questions Submitted.

"Will you decide this case according to the law and the evidence, or will you go back four centuries to hunt up the misdoings of a church that happened to exist at that time and possibly contained some members who were not what they should have been? Will you condemn the church of today for acts that the church of four centuries ago committed.

"If you do this, then you must condemn every church upon the face of the globe, for in the early days they all committed acts that would not stand the test of today. If you must judge a man by the acts which his ancestors committed four centuries ago, I have no doubt but that you can convict this man Baldwin, who now stands with one foot in the grave, of serious charges. But I know that your honor wants to do nothing of the kind.

"As I said before, it is a shame and a disgrace that this religious question has been dragged into this court, and here in Omaha and upon the broad prairies of this state, where liberty reigns supreme, it makes me blush with shame for a man who will follow a course which would disgrace an Arnold or a Jeffries. It is a shame that a man will be so narrow minded and so bigoted that he can see no good in anything that has not got a dollar tied to the end and that dollar almost within his grasp."

Fined a Justice.

Judge Scott fined Justice Gibson $50 and the costs of prosecution for having collected illegal fees in an action which the justice had adjudicated.

In assessing the fine the court took occasion to say that he could not understand how it was that men would accept offices that paid starvation salaries. In this connection he pointed to the fact that while some city offices paid but $50 per month, men would take them and at the end of two years come out rich, own fast horses and be able to live in the finest style.

Other Court Matters.

The case of the state against Fred Mengedoht had a brief hearing in Judge Scott's court Tuesday when the attorney for the defendant filed a motion to quash the information, alleging that there was no provision of law requiring the defendant to plead to an information, as he had not been indicted by a grand jury. The motion was overruled.

Eliza W. Patrick has sued N. D. Allen and the others who were the stockholders in the Patrick Land company for $87,008, the amount due on a deficiency judgment.

During the boom days the Patrick Land company, a syndicate composed of Kansas City capitalists bought the land which now comprises Dundee place and paid a portion of the purchase money. They gave a mortgage, which was foreclosed.

Ida M. Chapman has secured a divorce from her husband, Mitchell, who, not long ago, was a bailiff in the district court. The grounds for the granting of the decree were that Mitchell was a very gay boy and loved too many
