HIGNS AN ARTICLE FULL OF FALSEHOOD

itatoments as to Bad Moral and Material Condition of the City Refated by Facts Given by Business Men.

Rev. Thomas C. Hall, formerly of this city, but now occupying a pulpit in Chicago, is the author of an attack on Omaha realty and religious interests, which was published in a recent issue of the Outlook, a New York weekly periodical. In an article entitled "Gambling in Real Estate," he sandbags the town in a manner that causes amazement and indignation among those who are famillar with facts which differ widely with the centiments expressed by the writer.

Among other things, he says:

Houses are even now falling to pieces with-put tenants. Ministers left pulpits to go into the real estate business and are now stranded and discredited, hawking books or picking up a precarious existence that reflects no credit on their calling. Others found themselves so loaded with debt that all further religious in-fluence there was impossible. * * * Business blacked with debt impossible. * * * Business stopped. The town now lies like a poor, frembling debauchee, paralyzed and suffering after the mad exclement of the boom. It is the hardest field for religious work known to religious teachors. Statistics of "Moral Decrepitude."

With relation to Mr. Hall's alarm at the Blieged moral decrepitude of Omaha, statistics show that there are ninety-two churches and ten missions in this city at present. The former are accredited to the following denominations: Baptist 10. (atholic 11. Christian 4, Congregational 9, Restitutionist 1, Episcopal 11, Evangelical 6, Evangelical Lutheran 10, Jewish 3, Latter Day Saints 1, Free Methodist 1, Methodist Episcopal 19, Presbyterian 17, Unitarian 2, Universalist 1, Salvation Army 1, and Seventh Day Adventists 1.

Seventh Day Adventists 1. A local canvass among the clergy develops the fact that Mr. Hall's theory has no ad-vocates in this city. The only church in serious financial straits is the Southwest Presbyterian, of which Mr. Hall was the former pastor.

The veracity of figures, especially those of official record, has long been pro-verbial. The assertions of Mr. Hall are re-futed by the records of city finances and clearings. An examination of the figures in the city treasurer's office yesterday revealed the fact that the regular tax collections for 1887 were $370,855.56, while the collections for 1893 reached the gratifying aggregate of $775,744.85. The total assessed valuation of property in Omana for 1887 was $16,514,744, while the assessed valuation for 1893 was $20,472,016, an increase of $3,897,272 during the period when Mr. Hall said that gloom and apathy reigned supreme. The assessed valuation is about one-twentieth of the ac-tual value of property. The balance on hand in the city treasurer's office on December 31, 1893, was $587,378.69. Bank clearings have long been regarded as a basis for the ousiness activity of a com-munity. Mr. W. H. S. Hughes, manager of the Omaha Clearing House association, yesterday stated that the clearings of Omaha in 1887 were $137,220,534, while in 1893 they reached $316,416,873. Mr. Hughes expressed surprise at the stupendous ignorance of facts manifested by Mr. Hall in his article, especially that portion which conveyed the impression that the city was in a helpless #### condition. Business Mon Talk.

The following interviews were obtained yesterday by a BEE reporter, and they come from men who know whereof they speak. W. H. Roberson, Manager of R. G. Dun & Co's. Mercantile Agency-Mr. Hall has evidently dashed off a few ideas without proper consideration either of their truth or their effect. He is traducing a city which has suffered less than any other of its size from the effects of the depression. Omaha has lost some of its popularity, but so has every other western city. There have been comparatively few shrinkages in real estate, $1.50 for the mink's skin will not begin to pay the doctor for patching up and those instances have been in unim-proved realty located outside. Conditions the hands of Farmer Chumard and boy. reached half the number recorded for Kansas City and other cities. Omaha compares favorably in real estate activity with Min-ueapolis and other progressive localities of the west. Mr. Hall should know if he made the investigation, that Omaha's excitement ceased about one year before the limit was reached in either of the other cities, and the reaction was correspondingly less severe. Omaha has never had a bank failure except the little Omaha State bank, and occurred more than three years ago, and befere the beginning of the present "suffering after the mad excitement," as Mr. Hall puts it. The American Savings bank is in the hands of a receiver, but it will liquidate its liabilities to depositors and probably pay stockholders. Omaha's jobbing growth has been more rapid since, than before the boom, and all her finest business blocks as well as her splendid street transit system have been constructed since the so-called real estate coltapse. The Omaha and Council Bluffs bridge, East Omaha railway enterprises and Omaha's great packing industries, which have made her the third stock and packing )n. amendu center in the union, have all grown up since the epoch of which Mr. Hall complains. The maintained. boom had its drawbacks, but it brought into omaha millions of dollars and 100,000 people with all their thrift and commercial activity. Since the boom all but your of the greatest and best church buildings in the city have been constructed. Our local ministerial brethren say that every church in the city, with two exceptions, has increased in membership. In fact, Omaha kee county against the loss of its funds. has improved morally and spiritually if higher priced talent, larger edifices, more pipe organs and increased membership arany criterion upon which to base such a con-clusion. Instead of being paralyzed, as Mr. Hall seems to think, Omaha is, in fact, doing Point Terminal Railway and Warehouse company in favor of Anthony E. Thomas, Charles V. some people would have eastern capitalists believe. I think that such an article as Mr. TO FORFEIT THE CHARTER believe. I think that such an article as Mr. Hall's is inspired by a thirst for notoriety— a failing that some preachers have. So far as losing money in real estate is concerned, it can be lost there the same as in any other venture if not judiciously placed. Money has been lost in mining, but that is no indi-cation that none is made. The same applies to real estate. It is the basis of all wealth. to real estate. It is the basis of all wealth and Omaha realty never was in better shape than now, although capital is naturally timid all over the country during the finan-cial depression. There is always an active demand for good property and plenty of ten-ants. Especially does the demand exceed the supply for modern houses to rent. Mr. Hall's article is the veriest rot. Mr. A. P. Tukey, George H. Boggs and other prominent realty dealers echoed the contimenta expressed in these interviews.

MR. THURSTON EXPLAINS.

Compromise Union Depot Ordinance and

What it Means. General Solicitor Thurston, in explaining how he came to offer a new ordinance relating to the Metropolitan Union Depot company as a substitute for the ordinance now in the hands of the judiciary committee of the council, said: "When President Clark examined the ordinance introduced by Counexamined the ordinance introduced by Coun-cilman Saunders he raised some objection to it on the ground that it was not specific enough and I was called upon to redraft the ordinance. Representing the Union, Pacific company as I do I had no other recourse than to introduce the safe-guards which are embodied in the new ordinance. The ordinance introduced by Mr. Saunders is most general in character and relates only to the quieting of title in the present depot grounds. There have been other questions raised as to grounds now occupied by the Union Pacific, and to remove from controversy these lands in which a legal title is vested in the Union Pacific I have sought to have the whole subject forever set at rest. I have no interest in this matter one way or the other, but as the representative of the Union Pacific railways my only object has been to wipe off the slate and start afresh." "Some objection is raised," said the re-porter, "to the new ordinance, on the ground that if the present shop yards are included in the quieting of title it will remove one of the safeguards which the city insisted upon in the old days, that the snops should never be removed from Omaha." "That idea about the shops remaining for-ever in Omana is purely a myth; it only ex-ists in the minds of men," said Thurston. In the deeds of grant to the lots and lands in question there is no mention of continuing the shops in this city. The deeds provide that the grounds shall be used for railway purposes. The Union Pacific could operate a single shop on these grounds, in fact put down rails simply and yet hold an absolute right in the property. The clause of re-version is explicitly stated that whenever the grantee shall fail to occupy the lots for rail way purposes, then the lots are to revert to the grantor. So long as the Union Pacific performed its part of the contract so long can it hold against all comers. But the question aside, it is the purest folly to suppose the Union Pacific will ever abandon its present system of machine shops or head-quarters in Omaha. It would mean the out-ay of millions of dollars and therefore is not to be considered a moment. "In the discussion of this question it must be borne in minc that the Union Pacific can get along with its present depot facilities depot at the foot of Farnam street. It will cost an immense amount of money to get cost an immense amount of a pacific bridge. The settlement of this question cannot be one-sided, for the Union Pacific is giving up in the company of the control of the settlement of the settl on the head until he had killed it. The

a good deal more than it receives, as will, I think, be granted by every fair minded man who studies the question from every side. We only aim in the ordinance framed by myself to forever set at rest all bicker-

Hitting the U. F. Hard,

Curcago, Jan. 13 .- The question of handing emigrants, on which Peter McDonnell of New York and the advisory committee of the New York Emigrant clearing house have been conferring for two days, has been settled in favor of the Western Passenger astied in favor of the western Passenger as-sociation. McDonnell and the other heavy New York agents have agreed to deal exclusively with the associa-tion lines in routing business and the lines have agreed to deal only with such emigrant agents as are a party to this agree-ment. This contract hits the Union Pacific hard as it is not a member of the associahard, as it is not a member of the association, and its fight to secure control of the San Francisco business has gone for nothing. There is no intention, however, on the part of the association lines to crowd the Union Pacific or divert from it any business to which it is justly entitled.

CHRISTMAS DAY IN ROME Celebrating the Great Festival in the Eternal City. ENCHANTING SERVICES IN THREE CHURCHES

Great Throngs of Worshipers and Surpass ing Music-St. Peter's and the Pope -Sunset from One of the Seven Hills.

ROME, Dec. 26 .- [Correspondence of THE Bun.]-Have you ever thought to visit Rome for Christmas day! Yes, eager, active, every-day, modern Rome. The city of all others in the world where the glorious sunshine thrills one with new life, where to enter its portals is to fling wide open all the parts of the mind to new and marvelous thoughts. Here life's mental current is a new stream, clear and invigorating, from which one quaffs deep draughts. Here are association, postry, suggestion, art, history -a perfect carnival of themes, either to dudent, dreamer, traveler, any one. But without a thought of any of these there is a sort of charm, a strong and utterly irresist ible feeling that seizes one on entering the Eternal City. Since September 1 northern portions of the country have been visited, such as parts of Germany, through Belgium and much of Holland, where have been found very much of interest in the different people and their ustoms. As winter approached one thought to learn much of their outdoor sports and pleasures incident to the season, but so far there has been only a little ice and not a flake of snow. Of theaters, te deunis, flower shows, fairs and the like, one soon tires. The boulevardes have been rather gay, but eac day is a repetition of the one before. Th The reat galleries of Amsterdam, Antwerp and Brussels have been seen; the palaces and orincipal places at The Hague; the enrious ity of Bruges with its queer streets, many pridges, several notable convents, rich hurches and immense buildings visited; long with many of the chief industries of the several places. In Amsterdam there is diamond cutting.

also linen, cotton and silk works to interest one, aside from the wonderful old city. The one, aside from the wonderinf old city. The city, crosscut-shaped, is built upon about ninety islands, the caual being crossed and recrossed by more than 300 bridges. The rambarts of the city are covered with trees and little parks and converted into boulevards of exceeding beauty, along some of which are to be seen some of the richest, the nost elegant, and in some respects, the nearest matchless buildings in all Europe. In Brussels and Mechlin are the lace in dustries and tapestry works rich in interest, also bleaching and linen works in The Hague, and also in several Belgian towns. The round of industries has been made, occupy ing every moment until nearly Christmas time, and only a few words heard of the joy wholly Catholic people it is decided to visit the country least like our own as to a or coremony, pleasures and all, relating to the Christmas holidays.

Scenes Enroute.

Leaving all prospect of the season's galoties among the few friends made, we left brilliant, busy Brussels for Rome. It is a long journey. Six hours to Paris-gay, sunny and bright as ever, though lacking in show of commercial activity, owing to the curtailed pecuniary resources of the people these severely hard times. The next day is spent between Paris and Lyons, the second city in France as to population, and first in industry, a journey intensely interesting by reason of the diversity of the country. The third to Marseilles, every hour nonring the great blue sea, whose warm breaths give to so much of France and lovely Italy their in-At Marseilles, the great bustling scaport,

The half-lighted church, the silent theusands, the mysterious something between the lights and the shadows of the church, and the belliant white light in the quiet world outside, lend an impression not easily imagined. The great organ continues its sound flood, accompanied by the soulful voices of the singers, almost uninterfustedly from 11 to 12 o'clock. Then the thousands pass out into the streets of the city. In traversing the length of the great nave (some 280 feet long) one cannot but notice the very simple and very grand interior of this church, with its long line of marble columns on each side, surmounted by a rich frieze of mosaic pictures, its rold vancied colling and remarkably rich floors of precious stones and colored marbles, all in

The Roman thousands are treading home ward for repose or to await the dawning of another morning. Leaving the hotel at the early hour of 4.30 a.m. for morning mass at 5, one does not see the same number of persons moving churchward, as was the case a few hours are. The bells are overywhere softly pailing while worshipers, mostly women, hastan to the churches. The old church was well filled when, at 5, the celebrants entered and music and song commenced. Hundreds of women went forward to the chancel for th sacrament and all over the church, bril liantly lighted as it was, were kneeling hun reds. Now and then a man and sometimes young boy would go forward with down-ast, pious look and folded hauds, perhaps dreds.

one man to twenty-five women. For one hour this service of song and music, prayer rising and kneeling continued, and then on passing out all Rome second astir as the people passed homeward for early break lasts. Christmas Morning.

Even to a lonely soul there is no fog, no gloom, no sensation of fading away from exstonce because alone among strangers this forious morning. The hour of suprise and the light of new day is rapidly lending a brilliancy to all surroundings. Christmas morning dawns with a lustre that lends to life a new sensation. The world seem almost new, No other city in the wide world can so intoxicate one's mind. It is truly said by some one that one dreams of Venice as it lies smilling under soft sun ventee as it nees smilling gondonas, its poetry and song; one loves Plorence as a charming thing of life, of undying grace and beauty. Yes, this is true; one dreams of Venice, one oves Florence, but you must worship Rom

But there is positively nothing else to think of or do today but to go to church, hear th nusic and watch the people, and commenc ng at 10:30 the night before it would seen one's prospects for seeing and knowing were good. So at 0:30 a.m. we are crossing the great square in front of St. Peter's, while there looms up before us the cathedral of the world.

St. Peter's.

Just as there comes up in the life of every man, here and there along his career, i woman who wields a power) though she may not know it) I fancy this great cathe ral affects a person on first beholding it t makes one think it charms; it gives one ambition and new ideas it stirs one's being until there is left small wonder that Catholics worship it. Under the scintillating golden light the great pile, at once a palace and a mausoleum, is irresistibly attractive. A few moments spent in watching the people enter will give one an idea of its great size. Fully 8,000 persons must now have entered within, where the scene presented was most brilliant. Every one in the great mass of people seemed to appear in his best dress, and with the glorious sunsuine, the white and gold of the church, with its wealth of color in its pictures of mosaic, the lelicate blue and light of the dome, the humareds and hundreds of lights surround-ing the altar, rich banners hung here and there, the handsome vestments of the great officers of the church, all presented a mag-nificent spectacle. When at 10 o'clock the celebrants entered in their rich robes of while and gold and the attending boys in white and red, all bearing the golden in-signin of office, the singing commenced. One can scarcely imagine a heaven theor in melody or song charm. The scene is indo scribable, so also is the music. It seemed all the song of Italy, all the music of Rome in blue. Here was found a gay multitude, really modern, Roman life in all its variety, brightness and charm. There are beautiful carriages, beautiful w usen, fine horses, and amongst the carriages are many bearing the insignla of foreigners from every clime. All this beauty is taken in ere the sun dippe-behind St. Peter's, the moment for which we wait at this high point to see Romo at sunset on Christmas evo. The view is of the turbid current of the

Tiber flowing in glowing luster in the still sunset light; of the round roof of the abbia Pantheon of many columns, of the ruined Collisoum, as it towers the most magnificent of rulus; the capitol, the great palace of the Quirinal, all in soft red and golden gleams of fading day; to the west looms the great esthedral in almost awful majesty be-tween the darg pines of Monte Morio. All these look far of, though the city is at your foct: as darkness brings a strange silence, the stars come peoplag down on the scene, and the myriads of light begin to glummar out over the city so well known to all the readers of the world, "this shrine and center f human history." George W. Ames-Records of real estate transfers in this city utterly refute the nonsensical and vicious statements of Preacher Hall. The growth of cities regulates really values and the city of Omaha has grown largely since Mr Hali left it. I regard his attack on Omaha as either the work of a fanatic or a vicious stab at a community that ones gave him a living. It is really beneath the dignity of notice, but to people who are not familiar with the true condition of a fairs his attack might do some harm i allowed to go uncorrected. In the first place some harm if there never was any mad excitement in estate deals. It was an active and profitable speculation, but every man kept his head with the exception of a few, pos-sibly like Mr. Hall, who lost outh their heads and their money a some deal, and yow seek revenge by sand-bagging the town. The values of real estate in Cmaha for good property are on the ascendancy instead of declining. For in-stance, just a few weeks ago A J. There was ro turkey, no cranberry sauce nor even a plum pudding. Yesterday the markets were visited to the night service or midnight mass; Santa Ashanase for the morning or early mass and earn what tempting things were displayed St. Peter's for the day service or high mass, though now nearly all the Catholic churches celebrate the three masses. It is soon found before the Roman epicure. For a time the poetry and mental life of Rome were forgot ten and markets were searched for catables We found turkey in very small numbers though there was a time when these spien hat all of Christmas, or nearly all, in Rome is celebrated in sonnection with the churches. It is of sorvices, therefore, I write. For the midnight mass, of course, one goes to Santa Maggiore, and anticipating did birds, with their rich truffles, each one so cooked being worth many lire, were given to the poor. Then came a time when goose, stuffed with marrows were so served the unfortunate, while now the crowds, goes early, that is at 10:30. All the churches were crowded, but none to they are lucky to receive patisseere, or little sweet cakes, as gifts of Christman. Hundreds and hundreds came and went, being unable course much meat, such as beef and mutton, were found, all vegetables, some very unfa-miliar, nearly all fruits, and in many places to find even standing room. One is told there is not much religion in Rome now, and then wonders why all these people are so anxious to enter here. It is found that this church, along with its other marked feawere tiny flower markets. The shops were found to be brilliant, but there were not many purchasers. Passia through some aide streers we found cuildre at play much the same as in America. Littl tures, such as size, richness, etc., lanoted for its superior instrumental and vocal music. It was in this church last August where we heard 200 of the finest male singers of Rome at the fetes of the are play more than a sine as in America. Inter-grirs with doils, some lumping rule, and a few small boys playing at marbles. There were found beggars overywhere, on all the otheren stops and at nearly every corner, as a reminder that the poor are every where, or always with us. In the late afternoon the Corso was brilliant with gave life but not shower of white flowers. Then it was a britliant day and glorious music welled through the great edifice, while from the the great charges in the second of sound is joined by the glorious harmony of the great organ that en-
