SHOWING OF FACTS MADE FOR THE STATE

Attorneys Insist that Not Enough to Even Suggest Conviction Has Been Established by the Testimony that Was Introduced.

The cases brought against Edward Rose water, editor of The Bee, by ex-Sheriff Bennett and his wife, charging criminal libel, were called in police court yesterday

The information upon which the suit is based cites the open letter to the citizens of Douglas county, headed a "Last Word of Warning," which was signed by Mr. Rosewater and appeared in The Bee of November 6. In substance it reviewed the conduct of George A. Bennett from the time he assumed the duties of his office as sheriff up to the date upon which the article was published.

It called attention to the fact that Mr. Bennett was neither a competent nor efficient law officer; his office work was done by a substitute; his executive work as custodian of prisoners had fallen into the hands of negligent and law-defying deputies; Jail deliveries were frequent; instances of Jailer Bennett's inadvertence were The case of Henderson the embezzler, who was taken to a gambling house at night by the jailor and allowed to gratify his desire to play faro, without being closely watched, was enumerated in the list of accusations.

The Mosher scandal was also referred to. It stated that the "county fail had not only been turned into an assignation house, but a veritable brothel in which custodians of prisoners acted the part of procurers." case of the 15-year-old white girl and the alleged abortion was cited. Other instances which completed the series of loose methods in vogue under the Bennett administration were given at length. The writer defended himself against the vituperative attacks of Bennett's official organ and replied to the accusations made by Bank Wrecker Mosher. Other libelous stories, which doubtless emanated from Bennett and his friends, Mr. Rosewater, were exposed as vicious falsehoods.

The contemptuous indifference with which Bennett, as sheriff, treated cases of violations of prison usage which were brought to his attention from time to, time also came in for a good scoring.

Assistant County Attorney Day appeared for the prosecution and was assisted by G. W. Covell and A. S. Churchill, who had been retained by Bennett to help push the cases. Judge Lee Estelle and E. W. Simeral ap-proceed in the case in which Bennett was the complaining witness, but the state had made up its mind to try the other first. The defense was not ready in that case, but it was finally agreed to try both cases at the same time, and the defense was to be given such time as was needed to secure necessary TAKING OF TESTIMONY.

George A. Bennett was the first witness called. He testified that he was sheriff of called. He testified that he was sherif of Douglas county on the 6th of last November and lived in the county jail, where his wife held the position of matron. He was at that time a candidate for re-election. He was a subscriber to The Evening Bee, published at Seventeenth and Farnam streets in this city, but ceased to be a subscriber on the date mentioned. He identified a copy of The Evening Bee of that date and was excused vithout cross-examination. Mrs. Bennett was next called. She testified that as matron of the county jall she had charge of the female prisoners, did the mending and had general charge of things. jailors had full charge of the women. She was not cross-examined. N. P. Feil testified that for the past three years he had held the position of business manager of The Bee. The circulation of The Evening Bee was under his supervision; The Evening Bee was under his supervision, on the date mentioned it was about 10,000, nearly all of which was in Omaha and South Omaha, with perhaps 600 or 700 copies sent to points in western Iowa or in Nebraska outside of Douglas county. He identified a copy of The Evening Bee of November 6, and testified that the paper was printed by the Real Publishing company, of which the The Bee Publishing company, of which the defendant was president, and that the defendant was also editor of the paper. He was not cross-examined.

George B. Tzschuck testified that he was secretary and treasurer of The Bee Publishing company. He had nothing particular to do with the circulation, but knew that the circulation of The Evening Bee during the early part of last November was about 10,000, of which several hundred copies went outside of Douglas county. He told where the paper was published and identified a copy of November 6. No questions were asked on cross-examination and the state offered the paper in evidence, calling atten-tion to the alleged libelous article. The defense objected to its admission and the court agreed to hear arguments on that point at a later time.

Mr. Tzschuck was recalled to testify as to the defendant's connection with the paper. He knew that Mr. Rosewater was editor of The Bee on the 6th of last November, but did not know whether the defendant was in the city at that time or not. He testified that J. B. Haynes was managing editor of the paper and had charge of it in the absence of Mr. Rosewater. When asked absence of Mr. Rosewater. When asked what the relation was between them, he replied that Mr. Haynes had charge of the editorial department and that Mr. Rosewater wrote articles occasionally. from contributing articles he could not say whether the defendant had anything to do with the editorial management or not. The witness said he had previously seen articles signed, as was the one alleged to be libelous, but he did not know who wrote them, neither did he know why the signature was

A. Messick, official stenographer of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, was called, and testified as to evidence given by the defendant before the board December 28, in the matter of a protest against the granting of a liquor license. He said the defendant had testified that he was the editor of The Bee, and had been since the starting of the paper in 1871; and that he was president of The Bee Publishing company. The witness could not remember that Mr. Rosewater had stated how long he had been president of The Bee Publishing company, and Mr. Tzschuck was again recalled to say that it was since the organization of the company in 1878.

prosecution announced that it was willing to rest its case on the showing made.

ALLEGE NO CASE MADE. Judge Estelle said that if the prosecution was willing to stand by what it had said the case must be dismissed. This course must follow, not because it had been proved that Mr. Rosewater wrote the alleged libelous ar ticle; not because it had been proved that he caused its publication, but because it had not been proved that the article was false and malicious, which was absolutely necessary under the law. Attention was called to the old law regarding libel, and the amendment of the law as passed by the legislature 1887, which is the law as it stands today. It was cited that under the old law the libel must be false "or" malicious, but now it must be false "and" malicious. The defense had not proved that this article was either It was not a contention as to whether the article was libelous or not, but whether or not it was false. This was for the prosecu-tion to show. There must be falsity and malice to make out a case of libei under the statute. There was not the slightest pre sumption of falsity—there could be no such presumption-for every presumption must be

Mr. Day insisted that when an article showed itself libelous on its face per se, the burden of proof rested on the defendant.

Mr. Simeral said that when an article was libelous per se the law presumed dam-age, and it was for the jury to fix the amount of the damage, but in a criminal prosecution there could be no presumption of guilt. It would not do to establish any such precedent as to presume this defendanguilty merely because this suit had been brought. The witnesses for the prosecu-tion had it in their mouths, minds and hearts to swear to the falsity of the assertions made in the article in question if they had so desired, but instead of doing that they merely swore to their having been candi-dates or to the positions they held. Had they done this they would have put the defendant on the defense, but up to this time they had certainly not done so.

Estelle again insisted that no case had been made out, and called attention to the change in the law that makes criminal libel now a felony instead of a minor crime. The state had recognized that law in seeking to make out the paper to be one of wide circula-tion, and now wanted the court to presume the two essential elements necessary to make out the crime charged. It might be possible for a jury to presume malice from the acts of the defendant or from facts before them, the law did not presume e, and no one could pre-the falsity of the article. sume the falsity of the article. The state would probably admit that some of the matters set forth in the article were true, but they denied none of them, and it would be impossible for the defense to know what it was expected to meet.

Mr. Day said that there were two justifications for an article—its truth and a good motive in its publication—and it was for the defendant to so justify the publication of

The court advised that inasmuch as each side was positive that it was right it would be well for each to submit authorities on the positions taken, and fixed the time at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Providers for the People. ANNOUNCEMENTS.

"The stone which the builders rejected has become the chief stone of the corner." Verily, "Niobe," which the American and English managers rejected when it was offered to them by the Paultons, would seem to have proven the most popular and successful comedy of the period. And when the manuscript was rejected by such eminent builders as A. M. Palmer and T. Henry French, less persistent authors than the Paultons would have given up the search for a manager, and so never would have found Abbott & Tillotson, who have proven that they know a good thing when they see it. "Niobe" will appear at the Fifteenth Street theater on Sunday after-noon, February 11, and for four nights, with

It was announced in the Oregonian several days ago that the capital of the Stearns Fruit Land company had been increased to $250,000. With this increase of capital has come a change in the directorate and the personnel of the management.

The new directors are: A. E. S. Stearns, F. K. Arnold, George E. Caukin, H. C. Wortman and E. S. Blakeslee, the latter representing eastern capital. F. K. Arnold succeeds Mr. Stearns as president of the company and the latter goes east as superintendent of agencies and organizar of calonics on of agencies and organizer of colonies on plans perfected by himself, the result of years of study and practice. Mr. Arnold is too well known in connection with the wholesale drug trade as a member of the firms Hodge, Davis & Co., and Snell, Heitshu & Woodard Co., and as the former secretary of the Portland Board of Trade and other public positions, to need encomiums from the Oregonian. It is sufficient to say that he cuts loose from all other business connections and takes active management of this company's affairs to know that it will be conducted on business principles and in a manner to give the most satisfactory results to its stockholders and clients.

Henry Calloway, an Ex-Slave, Seeks to Se cure a Share of His Father's Estate. Henry Calloway is a colored teamster in Omaha, but he may toss the ribbons aside in the near future and hold big rolls of greenbacks instead of leather in his hands. He has instituted suit in Kansas City to break the will of his alleged father, the late Rev. James Sweeney. The latter recently left an estate of $50,000. His will was filed in the probate court at Kansas City in August, and immediately thereafter Calloway began suit to have the will set aside, claiming that the will was not the last will of James Sweeney, as at the time it was ex-ecuted Sweeney had not sufficient mental capacity to make and publish a will, and James Sweeney was always religious. and, it is said, always made a better hand at the prayer meeting than in the cornfield. In 1845 he was owned by a man named Arthur, who lived in Boone county. A young colored girl owned by Arthur fell in love with the young preacher, and they were married. Henry Calloway, it is claimed, was the only fruit of this union. In 1820, when Calloway was only 3 years old, "the preacher," was sold to another planter, and the slave's family was sep-arated. Aunt Johanna regarded Henry with suspicion, but the old man owned him as his son. Henry's stay was not prolonged, as his stepmother, it is said, made it rather unpleasant for him. Henry called on his father once or twice afterward. Shortly before the old man died he executed a new will. Under its provisions all his property was left to 'Aunt Johanna.
