General Kelly's Army Moves on with the Blessing of the People.

GENEROSITY OF THE PEOPLE MANIFEST

Huge Wagons Heaped High with Provisions Lead the Way to Weston-Plan on Which the Committee of Relief Proceeded.

palmiest days never saw such a crowd of humanity afoot and in all kinds of conveyances strewn along the roadway leading from the city as that which poured in a continuous stream yesterday from 8 o'eleek In the morning until noon. In fact it was not checked until the positive information was given that Kelly's Industrials were well on their way to Weston. The committee having in charge the delivery of the supplies and securing wagons to transport them were at their work as early as 6 o'clock. The seven wagons originally contracted for were sent out to the grounds at 7 o'clock in order to give General Kelly and his men ample time to load them. Other wagons were awaiting in front of Officer & Pusey's bank to carry the supplies to be collected. It was not long until three of these were filled and started on their way. Still the supplies continued to roll in, and another freight wagon was pressed into service with extra sideboards on it, and this was finally sent away with provisions stacked upon it like a load of hay. The committee then took carriages and drove out to the grounds. But this did not stop the tide of good cheer that kept rolling in like waves from troubled waters. Single buggies, carriages and deliver, wagons that brought their supplies to the starting point continued their journey to Camp Kelly and unloaded upon the already overburdened commissary department Among these determined denors were score department of women and many children. Some of the latter walked the entire distance, carrying their packages. The ten wagons furnished by the committee were loaded to their, ful-lest capacity and still the stock on the ground was not exhausted. A breathless horseman rode up and informed General Kelly that another load was on the way from South Omaha. Before he had ceased talking a wagon bearing a load donated by the Evening News of Omaha appeared over the brow of the hill, and this was added o the pile. The committee sought an escape from the dilemma by pressing into service two more big vans, making twelve in all, and these were loaded to the brim. By this time the army was in motion and what remained on the ground was distributed among the men and carried by them. incidents connected with the gathering of the supplies were full of interest and were numberless. Many of the la present pitched in with true womanly Many of the ladies stinct and deftness and assisted in packing provisions. One well dressed woman with a kind, motherly face, pointed to the pile of provisions and remarked to a Bee man: "My new spring hat is in that pile."

The members of the committee worked like Trojans. E. A. Wickham was made temporary commissary officer and received he supplies. When the work was practi cally over Mr. Pusey walked down toward the railroad tracks, where the private cars of the Rock Island and Milwaukee roads were stationed. When he came in sight the doors were opened and the railway magnates commenced calling him: "General Pusey General Pusey." He climbed through the barbed wire fence and was most heartily welcomed in the private car of the officials who were smoking cigars and were com-fortably situated, "watching the enemy," as Judge Hubbard remarked, 'from a safe distance.' They called upon Mr. Pusey for a report of the citizens' meeting at the opera house. This was given with great minute-ness and fidelity. It included an accurate synopsis of Mr. Pusey's admirable speech in meeting that aroused such enthusiasm and did so much to quiet public feeling. It had been reported that the railroad managers objected to the guarded premise made in Mr. Pusey's speech that a train would be Pusey's speech that a train would be plied in some inexplicable manner, but when Mr. Pusey gave the synopsis of his talk in the meeting the whole speech was warmly approved by the officials. "That's just what we wanted to have said," remarked Judge Hubbard, eagerly, "but they would have mobbed us if we had gone in there and tried to say it."

PUSEY CALLS ON THE MAGNATES.

The contributions raised by the citizens' committee in Council Bluffs yesterday in-cluded 2,000 loaves of bread, 2,500 pounds of fresh meat, 500 pounds of corned beef, twenty boxes of crackers, fifteen bushels of beans, 100 pounds of coffee and 100 pounds Twelve wagons and teams were hired by the committee to transport this provender along the line of march, at $2.50 per day per team, with the understanding that as soon as a wagon was emptied it was to be allowed to return to the city. wagon took along hay and oats, so that the drivers would not have to forage on the neighbors for horse feed.

"You may say what you please about the looks of the army," remarked one of the committee yesterday afternoon who had been present when Camp Kelly broke up and the Industrials started on the road to Weston; company K, composed of the recruits from this city and vicinity, was the toughest in the whole outfit, so far as looks, at least, were concerned."

All in all, the Council Bluffs people are very well satisfied with the departure of the army, and although it took lots of bread and meat to entertain them and start them on their way to Governor Jackson's home, their visit will not be considered an un-abated nuisance if even half of the Council Bluffs recruits have gone away never to re-

Chief Scanlan states that during the entire stay of the army in this vicinity, there has not been a single burglary or robbery reported to the police. This is considered rather remarkable, for the army carried along with it a great many hangerson, who might be supposed to take advantage of the prevailing excitement and ply their trade. The chief is at a loss to account for it, for the army and the hangerson were allowed to roam about the city without hindrance, and no special police were appointed to see that they did no damage. Nor was there any drunkenness among the Industrials.

But for beggars-that is another story, There probably was never a time when such a swarm of tattered humanity struck the city, all apparently inspired with the same motive, to whitedle some of their neighbors out of their property. And for the most part, they got whatever they asked for. Tobacco was the main article they wanted. Every cigar store would receive numerous visits a day from men who stated that they had been authorized to solicit tobacco for the camp, and as there was no way to prove that they were not telling the truth, almost every one who looked as though he might be an "Industrial" got the tobacco he so much wanted. Although Kelly and his forces are now safely started on their thresome journey through the state on foot, and although the members are said to have some hopes of members are said to have some hopes of finding a train before long which will carry them to Chicago, it should be said that the committee appointed at the citizens' meeting to raise funds never gave them the slightest encouragement in such a hope. It is true Mr. Pusey, the chairman, vaguely hinted at the possibility of such a thing, but he was very careful to explain that he did not mean to hald out any promises. Finley Burke and to hold out any promises. Finley Burke and Rev. J. G. Lemen, two other members of the committee, had two talks with Kelly, in which they told him plainly that no arrangements for a train had been made, and they had no knowledge of any arrangements that might be made hereafter, so that General Kelly understands the situation perfectly, and he fails to find a train at some point east of here he will not be able to accus

BLAME LAYS WITH SWASHBUCKLERS. To the credit of the men composing the military companies that have been on duty since last Sunday morning it should be said that they do not all act as badly as some of the officers under whose control they are. Almost without exception the officers have been apparently thirsting for gore. They have been bitter in their invectives on the members of Kelly's army, and the remarks

Council Bluffs benefactors of playing a double

they have made about the citizens who have lent aid and sympathy to the Industrials have been disgraceful. "I'd like to have seen 1,000 citizens come out there to take those — into the taber-nacle in spite of us. The undertakers would have had a chance to do some work on them. That was the beautiful sentiment expressed by one of the officers after the militia had been ordered away from the Chautauqua grounds and stationed at the transfer. A half dozen of his fellows, some of them privates, heard what he said and assented eagerly. Most of the privates however, have a little more humanity about them than their superiors, just as they have a little lets uniform, and lots of them refuse to admit that they would like to have a chance to stand out and shoot their fellow citizens down like dogs, because they wanted to see the industrials sleep somewhere be-Even the Chautauqua assembly in its sides in a mul hole.

The fact has developed that it was the fault of these same military officers possibly as much as of any one else that the men were refused admission to the Chautauqua amphitheater on the night of the storm. They refused to sleep under the same roof with the Industrials, and the sheriff allowed them to have their own way, instead of leting them get out into the wet, as he might have done. The Dodge Light guards of this city were discharged from duty yesterday morning, and the transfer is now in the possession of the five companies from abroad The report of the conference between the committee of citizens, the governor and the sheriff did not meet with the entire approbation of the committeemen, although Gov-ernor Jackson states that it was an accurate report all the way through. The for-lowing communication was handed The Bee for publication yesterday:

what the committee Did.

Council bluffs April 19.—To the Editor of The Bee: We desire to correct two statements made in your paper this morning in your report of the conference between the citizens' committee, Governor Jackson and Sheriff Hazen. This committee was appointed by a meeting of citizens to protest against the continuance of militia in the immediate presence of Kelly's army, thus civing the appearance, to say the lenst, of military espionage; and, if possible, to procure their removal. There was no abuse of Sheriff Hazen or any other person, although there was no attempt to disguise the conviction that the calling out of the troops and their maintenance here was wholly uncalled for and unnecessary. Finally, when Sheriff Hazen gave his consent, Governor Jackson said that he would order the troops home. Then, and not till then, was the statement made that this action would block negotiations that were under way to procure the transportation of the army. No word of this was breathed during the entire hour and a half of conference, nor until the order had been made. The committee stated to Governor Jackson that it did not demand the removal of the troops from the city; that if, in his jadgment, or that of Sheriff Hazen, their continuance here was necessary or expedient, no objection was raised thereto, although WHAT THE COMMITTEE DID. troops from the city; that if, in his judgment, or that of Sheriff Hazen, their continuance here was necessary or expedient, no objection was raised thereto, although all the members of the committee who expressed their opinion declared their belief that their continuance was unnecessary. Not, however, having been appointed to demand the removal of the militia from Council Bluffs, but simply to demand the removal of the militia from the presence of the Army and the appearance of control which that presence implied, they were content when that mission was accomplished, and of course had no purpose or desire to block any movement toward transportation, as that was the unanimous desire of our citizens. There was at no time a "backing down" from this demand, and there was at no time a recognition by the committee of either the necessity for or the expediency in the retaining of the military force.

The Kellyites had especial reason to earnestly thank Mr. E. A. Wickham for an act nestly thank Mr. E. A. Wickham for an acof spontaneous generosity. When the col-umn moved he accompanied it nearly all the way to Weston. He had distinguished himself in the work of relief from the start, but his last act was to give an order to Sheriff Hazen to deliver to Jens Hanson, the owner of a lumber yard at Weston, directing him to use all of the lumber in his yard for the erection of shelters for the men, and to send the bill to him for the trouble and th cost of any lumber that might be injured or destroyed. The troops left the transfer last evening for their homes, and thereby hangs a tale The lack of common decency that has pervaded a portion of the military ranks throughout this whole affair came to a fitting climax yesterday afternoon, when some of the young men stood about the depot platform making insulting remarks to ladies who passed. This was endured for a time, but finally the baggagemaster reported the doings to Depot Master Mc-Millen, who in turn reported to the captain and asked that they be removed from the depot. Since Sheriff Hazen relinquished command of the militia Governor Jackson has had exclusive control, and as soon as he heard of the complaint he ordered the troops home, and they went.

There are milestones in the drama quite as brilliant and in their way quite as important as those which mark new epochs in the life of a nation." It was a milestone in the history of the theater which an Omaha audience was permitted to assist in erecting last evening, though in a large measure they sat as itslient spectators in the pit" watching the evolution of a character, part historical, but largely with a leaning toward romance.

Richard Mansfield, who introduced "Beau Brummel" to a crowded theater at Boyd's was the chief architect chosen to erect new ideals for our people, and so complete was the victory that today the metropolis will

Born in 1778, George, Brummel was the greatest of the fops and dandies of all ages.

He was sui generis, and, although he has had countless imitators, there has been no with truth be called his suc cessor. His mantle is still unclaimed, and until vaster sociological conditions present themselves the future gives little promise of a twentieth century Brummel. The man who illumined the court of the prince consort was a master of irony, which he masked in a courtesy that was the wonder and talk of London in the early days of the century. He was a master of irony, not in the sense that he was brilliant, but that he never hesitated to use his wit, like a Toledo blade. to cut an inferior or to abash an equal. Of his melancholy death and the passing of the profoundest egotist of all history from the favor of the prince of Wales to squalor, penury and the insatiate cravings of want, the "Beau Brupme!" of the mel "Beau Brummel" of the modern stage are

"Beau Brummer of the modern stage are but incidents to a wonderfully well written drama by Clyde Fitch and the actor who brought Brummel back to the actor who brought Brummel back to the flesh last night. The web of incident decidedly weak, viewed in anything like a critical sense, and everything like a series of climaxes that cause one to catch the breath with the swift movement of the story have been avoided. Interest centers in the eccentric character of the Beau, and the audience is ever on the alert to know what he will do in the changing conditions which are as sure to follow the insult to the prince of Wales as the day follows the night.

Mr. Mansfield, in selecting this historical personage for portraiture, knew the tions of the man. He knew perfectly well that the egotist was not heroic, that he was a sad failure in life, but Mr. Mansfield is not follower of the old traditions of the stage he stands for something newer, something that represents the bone and blood of higher ideals viewed from the stage standpoint purely. Mr. Mansfield brings his necromancy, his art to bear upon this somewhat complex character, and by the force of his genius forces it into the lime light, where Brummel becomes the most vivid, the most eloquent and the most affecting exhibition of the pains and penalties of profound

Of the combined work of Mr. Fitch and Mr. Mansfield one can speak in unqualified praise. While they have not given the world the real Brummel, save so far as every necdote in regard to him is preserved, they have given the stage an intensely interesting study of one who contributes much to the fashionable annals of the time. The time logue is crisp, terse, thoroughly delightful, clever and oftentimes decidedly witty, and the still more to the point, the merit of being written up to the style of the times.

As to Mr. Mansfield's portrayal of the role, it stands alongside the master creations of our greatest actors. Mansfield seemingly knows his dimensions and his limitations, and throughout his public career has given evidence of a deep purpose to encompass the very best that is in him. There is deep study in everything he does, and while some may disagree with him in his conclusions, none have ever yet been able to accuse him of a lack of reason of He is unique among the actors of today and is destined ultimately to prove himself a worthy son of one of the most brilliant of modern; women. The court is asked to set saide the will of the late Captain Rouben Kelley, the principal cause assigned to ug that the will was probated on March 27, and the last day of publication was March 23, which did not allow the proper time to intervene, and, consequently, was not in accordance with the laws of lows. The plaintiff in the case is Mrs. Martha Kelley, who claims to have been married to the late Captain Kelly in Connecticut, June 15, 1876. She resided with Mr. Kelley at Afton, Is., until February 15, 1880, when she went to Denver, taking their son, Reuben, jr., with her. Seen after Mrs. Kelley left Afton divorce proceedings were commenced against her by her husband, in the Union county district court,

It appears from the records that the case was rushed through court in a hurry, as a decree was granted March 6, which did not give the necessary time to get service by publication, and Mrs. Kelley claims she knew nothing of the proceedings whatever. At the time the divorce proceedings were in pro-gress two Afton attorneys appeared in court as Mrs. Kelly's representatives, but she now claims she never employed them to represent her. In fact, she was not aware of the proceedings, and never received any notice, legal or illegal. The plaintin has in her possession a marriage certificate relating to her marriage to Captain Kelley, June 15, 1876. Mrs. Kelley knew nothing of her husband's death until she read of it in a Con-necticut paper. Belief that the Wrongs of the Church Will Be Righted. LAMONI, Ia., April 19.-Because of the reported disturbance in the minds of some of those residing on the property affected by the temple lot decision at Independence. Mo., President W. W. Blair said: "I have and still believe the time will come when the church will have such influence in the state of Missouri that when they make application for redress for losses sustained, etc., the state will be willing to do something for them. In regard to disturbing the title of innocent parties who have bought these lands once occupied by the saints, it should be frowned down, but bye and bye, in the good pleasure of the Heavenly Father, I believe that the saints will have such influence that they can be heard by the state, and it will be anxious to redress their wrongs so far as lies in their power, and inasmuch as the United States government stood by and winked at this work, I believe that when conditions are favorable an effort may be made for our nation to do something to recover its good name and its damaged reputation. Coming, as this does, from the heads of the church, before its assembled representatives, it is of interest to those who hold suspected titles." and still believe the time will come when
