The controversy over McMullen's alleged conduct in conection with the oratorical contest, by which he becomes the state's rep-resentative in the interstate oratorical contest, was taken up by the students this afternoon in one of the most exciting and turbulent mass meetings ever held in the history of the university, nearly 1,000 students crowding into the chapel to either participate in the meeting or to listen to the interpesting developments promised. Williams presided and Jones acted as secretary. A riot was almost precipitated by Funer, one of the editors of the Hesperian, who offered the following resolutions:

RESOLUTIONS THAT MADE THE ROW. In so far as late developments in connec-tion with the recent local oratorical contest and as the contest throws the students of the University of Nebraska in bad repute before the public, and since long continued silence on the part of the students would seem to indicate that they do not condemn the action of Adam McMuilen, in that he is known to have offered money on two ocassions to men of more than ordinary ability as writers, in return for which they were to furnish him an oration which would win first place in the local oratorical con-test of the university, and which would, or presumably would have been used in the state oratorical contest; therefore, be if Resolved, That we, the students of the University of Nebraska, in convention as-sembled, do now, openly and publicly, con-dem such action on the part of the afore-suid McMullen, deciming it an injustice to those who entered the contest in geod faith and an imposition upon the students in gen-eral; and be it further. The fight was for ten rounds only, at the request of Attorney General Cunning-ham. The exhibition was clumsy and unscientific throughout. Abbott disappointed the spectators by the poor form he displayed throughout, though the fight was fast and furious at times. The first to the fifth round Abbott had the best of the fighting, landing some left hand jabs with telling effect. Rounds five to nine Bowen evened up matters, and in the eighth round the home man landed a heavy right hander on the forehead and fairly knocked th Englishman down. The latter recovered quickly and delivered some left hand punches which did not do much harm. The tenth round was an exhibition of fast fight Both men landed many blows without a single scientific one.
