

Boyle to show him the Dellones. It was then ten minutes to 9. Shearer said also that he had been married, but refused to state whether he was a widower or not. He said he had just mailed a couple of letters to his wife, Mrs. E. E. Shearer, 14 Brighton Place, Allegheny City, Pa. He said these were his children. He said he wanted to advise them how to live. He then gave the names of some other parties to whom he had written. They were Miss K. H. Nichols, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. McGinn, Ottawa, Ia.; W. Kirkland, 14 Brighton Place, Allegheny City, Pa.; Milton Gartner, an uncle of Miss McClintock, at Dahlonega, Ga. He left another addressed to the hotel proprietors, saying that his real name was J. E. Shearer. He desired that a telegram be sent to Dr. W. W. Shearer, Green Castle, Mo., and another to Mr. McGinn, agent Adams Express company, Ottumwa; also to turn over his belongings to Dr. Shearer when he came (meaning that he would remain for his trial). He gave the address of the letters to Dr. Shearer. The letter is signed J. E. Shearer, alias H. J. Hughes. It gives a postscript saying he assumed the latter name because a man by that name had been intimate with his mother. He gave the room for which he was asked when he went to the hotel, and his desire to occupy that room.

Shearer was then unable to say more, and at last accounts was asleep.

The contents of the other letters, he refused to divulge, nor did he say who they were to be given to. He said something about a statement he would like to make before he should die, but he wanted Miss McClintock to be with him when it was made. He could not make it without her, and at last he said: "I see death is to come to me, and I will make it; I would have made it if she had not been with me, but there was not time."

He called for a drink, which was given him, and he fell back on the cot.

The man's wounds at first were not thought to be serious. Dr. Saville at first said he was lucky, but the bullet, which apparently entered the right lung cavity, might have glanced off, while he was certain the one that entered the left side would not prove fatal. Later it appeared that the man was bleeding internally, and the doctor thinks the wound in the lung may prove fatal.

Dr. Allison, who attended the woman, thinks she will recover.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife." After going to the room, she says that Shearer accused her of being unfaithful and also of being intimate with Hughes. This she denied, and a severe argument, which Shearer drew a revolver and threatened her life. Just as he was about to fire, she says that the landlord burst in the door to the room and drove them out of the house. From there they went to the Dellone, where her companion registered as "J. C. Shearer and wife." They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

Looking for Shearer.

Sheriff Remond of Wayne county is in the city in quest of S. B. Seybolt of Wayne. He is wanted for a crime alleged to have been committed about two months ago. Seybolt is a prominent man at Wayne, married, and has several grown up children.

SERIES 4. The Book of the Builders

HISTORY OF THE..
WORLD'S FAIR

D. H. Burnham
Chief of Construction,
.... and ....
F. D. Millet
Director of Decoration.

B RING 6 coupons with 25 cents, or send by mail, 5 cents extra, in coin (stamps not accepted). Address,

Memorial Department,

OMAHA BEE.

SERIES NO. 12.

DICTIONARY.

Only that number of the 3332 entries in the series in the order of the chapters presented will be delivered.

ONE Sunday and Three Week-day evenings, with certain oil will buy one part of The American Encyclopedia Dictionary. Send ordering to T. B. Bee Office.

Mall should be addressed to:

DICTIONARY DEPARTMENT

EASY GAME FOR LINDSEY

Omaha Pug Finds the Wyoming Black Pearl Quite a Pleasant Fellow.

DARKEY QUILTS IN THE THIRD ROUND

One Punch Enough for Him and a Claim of Fouls Follows—Referee Gives the Fight to Lindsey—Other Sports.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., May 18.—(Special Telegram to The Bee.)—The advertisedastic encounter between James Lindsey of Omaha and William Gibson of Cheyenne came off this evening and resulted at the end of the third round in a wrangle over a foul claimed by Gibson, which the referee refused to allow. The latter's decision gave the fight to Lindsey.

Several matches between local sports occurred before Lindsey and Gibson stepped into the ring. It was evident from the start that the Omaha man was too much for the Wyoming descendant of Ham. In the first round the men sparred rather timidly for an opening, which was not discovered by either. In the second round, after several clinches, in the break-away Gibson struck his opponent and the latter claimed a foul, which was not allowed. Round closed with honors evenly divided. In the third round, after considerable clinching, Lindsey advanced in place of his superior, and after Gibson's left leg, bringing the latter to his knees. While in this position Lindsey tapped him playfully on the cheek. The Wyoming man immediately claimed a foul and left the ring and refused to continue the fight.

OUTCOME OF THE RUNNING.

Dr. Allison, who attended the woman, thinks she will recover.

DR. SHEARER'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."

They were assigned to a room on the second floor. As soon as they had entered the room, the woman says that Shearer locked the door, drew the revolver from his pocket and again accused her of being intimate with other men, especially with Dr. R. S. Allison, who, she says, that she denied the charge, saying that Hughes was simply her friend and nothing more. Charges and counter charges were made, after which Shearer fired at her once and then turned the gun upon himself and fell down. As soon as she realized that she was shot, she states that she fled from the room, ran down the stairs and fainted. She said that Hughes has a brother who is a druggist on North Twenty-fourth street.

Miss McClintock says she is 19 years old. She refuses to have her friends notified of the shooting.

MISS MCCLINTOCK'S STORY.

The wounded man was seen at her room in the Dellone hotel a few moments after the shooting, and in giving her version of the affair stated that she formerly resided in Pennsylvania, not far from the town of Alleghany. She said she first met Shearer several years ago. Two years later, leaving her mother an invalid, she came west and remained with some relatives near Ottumwa, Ia. One year ago she came to Omaha and shortly after her arrival formed the acquaintance of H. J. Hughes, whom she recognized as a friend of Shearer's, residing for some time. Later on she said that she returned to Iowa, where she again met Shearer and they became engaged to be married. After that she paid several visits to Omaha, meeting Hughes each time and receiving his attention. On December 10, 1892, she came to the Mihm hotel, where they were assigned to a room, Shearer registering as "H. J. Hughes and wife."