QUINCY, Ill., May 19 .- (Special Telegram to The Bee.)-Quincy could not lose the first game at home, and so had to take liberties with young Mr. Whitehill's slants. Eleven of his choicest were straightened out beautifully, and along with them came siven large, robust errors made by the Rourke family. Paddy Boyle, especially, let golden opportunities go glimmering. Pedro, the new left fielder, did nothing. Omaha fought hard, but not hard enough. Score; QUINCY.

Omaha Y. M. C. A. Too Strong for the Team from the State University.

MR. BARNES WAS EASILY SATISFIED

His Cordial Reception in a Single Inning Gave Him All He Wanted of the Christian Singgers-Rus McKelvey's Work.

The Young Men's Christian association athletes could not have chosen a more perfect day than yesterday in which to trounce the base ball aspirations out of the University of Nebraska amateurs. The sunshine was just bright enough to make out-of-door life a pleasure. The breeze was just strong enough to turn the greener side of each grass blade uppermost without carrying a burden of dust from the diamond to the grand stand, and the air was rich with every essence of vitality.

The grand stand was well filled with friends of the association, supplemented by a number of Lincoln students, and to judge by the noise they made they were highly appreciative of the efforts of the Y. M. C. A. young men to amuse them. The Christians played as though they never expected to get another crack at the collegiate aggregation. and not contented with fairly beating them off the diamond they had the temerity to knock Barnes, their crack pitcher, who has made such a phenomenal record against Western association teams, out of the box in a single inning.

The Christians played a wonderfully strong game all around. The feature of the con-test was Rus McKelvey's brilliant work. He collided with a fielder early in the game and was knocked senseless for a few minutes, but soon came to life again and put up the prettiest game of ball seen in these parts for many, many years. In five times at bat he made three three-base hits, a twobagger and a single, and accepted nine chances at third base without an error What more could you want than that? Robinson pitched a very strong game for the Christians, holding the collegiates down to six scattered hits. They were unable to get more than four men to bat in any one inning, and neither of their weak, attenuated runs was within a mile of being earned

HOW THE RUNS CAME IN. It would be useless to tell the whole story of the game. It was simply a case of see ing how badly we could beat the University people from start to finish and they never had a chance to win at any stage of the game. They went first to bat, but Hopewell and Haywood were each thrown out at first by your Uncle Russell and Randolph go a base on balls only to be nailed by Abbott in his attempt to purloin sec

The Christians scored once in their half on a couple of hits and some well calculated sacrificing. Haywood went into the box at first for the visitors, and Stoney placed a neat little hit past the short stop. Crawford and Abbott both sacrificed, advancing Stoney to third, and he scored on a clean line hit over second base by Heald hit safely for the collegians, but Robinson struck two men out and the third died easily from Robinson to Jefferis. For our side Jeffer's fouled out to Barnes and then Jellen placed a safe one just back third base and ran to third while while the fielders were holding the ball. Then Mc-Kelvey smashed out a corking three-bagger to the left field fence. Jellen scored and McKelvey followed him over the plate on Marquette's single.

It was goose eggs all around in the third, and then the visitors scored for the first time. Barnes hit a hot liner, which flew from Stoney's fingers. Abbott's only passed ball advanced him to second and he made a pretty steal of third to score on Heald's scratch hit to left field. It was while run-ning after Heald's fly that McKelvey collided with Lawler, and was temporarily disabled by a tremendous blow in the stomach. He was unable to arise for about five minutes, but finally staggered back to his base and played like a three-time winner.

scored twice in our half and then the Universities gathered in their second and last on a base on balls and a hit by Haywood. Haywood was hit rather freely by the Christians and Barnes went into the box in the sixth inning. McKelvey was the first man at bat, and he knocked the first ball clear to the fence for three bags. Then Marquette hit 'er out, and after Lawler had struck out Stoney and Crawford each followed with clean hits. Abbott died on an the pitcher and Robinso struck out, but four earned runs were in and Barnes left the rest of the pitching to Hopewell.

The rest of the game was just the same way. The Christians evidently made as many runs as they wanted to while the visitors could scarcely get a man to first pase. This is the way it went: Y. M. C. A.

MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM.

Decoration of Graves in the Morning with Public Exercises in the Afternoon. The Memorial day committee appointed by the various Grand Army of the Republic posts and Women's Relief corps of the city held a meeting last night in room 326. Bed building. This committee has been working hard for a month, making preparations to celebrate appropriately the day dedicated to the memory of their dead comrades, and the program is being rapidly completed.

Reports were read from various subcommittees, showing that flowers and flags were being obtained in abundance to decorate the graves. A letter was read from the park commissioners, granting the use of Hanscom park for the day and the services of the Seventh Ward Military band for three hours. The offer was unanimously accepted, and the committee extended its thanks to the commissioners. An offer of ice from the South Omaha Ice and Coal company was also accepted.

An endeavor will be made to get the Seventh Ward Military band to escort them. He also stated that the Rifles would perform guard duty and the Guards would consti tute the firing squad.

A motion was made that the committee obtain the roster of the graves of the soldiers, which is now being prepared, and was referred to the burial committee. A resolution was prepared by Mr. Jenkins and passed requesting the Young Men's Christian association base ball team to defer the game that is scheduled for that day The resolution recites that the time of

Two Children Have a Narrow Escape-

Saved by Their Mother. The report that a couple of boys were in a fair way to be devoured by wolves caused a great deal of excitement just after the ball game at Y. M. C. A. park yesterday afternoon, and the report was in a measure true. For a couple of months Mr. C. H. Hyadine, 2101 Miami street, has had a pet wolf, and is has been a cause of great pleasure to the children in the vicinity, and often would the little tots bring it pieces of bread and meat and so forth. Occasionally when the wolf would be troubled a great deal it would take hold of a pant leg or something of that sort, but it was not supposed it would bite any one. Here is where the trouble came in. Mrs. G. E. Peek, who resides next door to Mr. Hyadine, has two children, Alec, a boy of 8, and Perry, aged 10. The wolf has always been a great favorite with these boys, and many is the piece of cake they have stolen from their mother's cupboard give to this same wolf. About two weeks ago, after they had been playing with the wolf for half an hour, it became angered at some-thing and snapped at Hec. The boy paid no attention to it at the time, but continued to olay with the wolf. Yesterday things came to a climax. Mrs. Peck was preparing supper when she heard the most unearthly screams. She rushed into the yard to find her boy Alec lying on the ground and the wolf on top of him. The animal had hold of the boy's collar and the boy was endeavoring to drive it off with a pocketknife. The wolf appeared very fierce, and all of a sudden released its hold on Alec and made for the other boy, Perry. It grabbed Perry by the calf of the leg and gave him a horrible gash. The mother, when she saw the wolf in this attitude, was nearly frantic. She stood as if she had been turned into a pillar of salt, and looked. wolf was sinking his teeth deeper into the flesh of the boy's leg, and she was about to faint. She retained courage enough, how-ever, to sieze a club and beat the wolf off. Notwithstanding she beat it almost to insensibility, it made another stand, and was about to spring at her when Mr. Parmalee, a neighbor, hit it with a ball bat and Neither of the children are seriously injured, but they had a close call, and will bear some marks whereby they may remember their experience. Mrs. Hyadine, who owns the wolf, said she had been in the yard a few moments

John Nichols Comes Back from Dunlap to Get Even. John Nichols was arrested last night for assault with intent to do great bodily harm, and the complainant is his uncle, James

The arrest grows out of an affair that i said to have taken place last winter. James Nichols, an old, gray-bearded man, said that John came to this city from Dunlap, Ia., last winter and had about $70 with him. He at once went to the residence of his uncle Forty-first and Hamilton streets, and made his home there. Things went well for a while, but one morning John woke up, and hurriedly going to the room of his uncle claimed he (John) had been robbed of $40 He said he was asleep, and that it must have been taken from him about 4 in the morning. Search was instituted, but the money was not forthcoming.

John went back to Dunlap. That was all that was thought of the stolen money till last night. He said a friend told him that his Uncle James had stolen the money. So imbued with this idea was John that he came all the way back from Dunlap to lay the crime at his uncle's door. The latter denied any knowledge of the money and told his nephew it was either lost or stolen. The latter would not have it that way. That was about 1 o'clock yesterday after-noon, and the nephew left, ostensibly to go to the postoffice. He returned about 4 o'clock and said he wanted his $40 and was going to have it. He did not wait for an answer, but with a huge knife in his hand he made for his aged uncle, with the words, You will rob me, will you; I'll murder

The uncle was terrified. He ran from the house with the young man after him and called for help.

Officer Poole then arrested John. He seems to be slightly out of his mind. He has no doubt lost $40 in some way, as he can be heard swearing vengeance on the man who took it, and he swears he will yet kill his uncle.

RUNNING ON HIS WAR RECORD

Breckinridge's Peculiar Way of Trying to Retain His Seat in Congress.

FAIRY TALES TOLD HIS CONSTITUENTS

Confederate Comrades Informed that the Pollard Suit Was a Grand Army Scheme to Knock Him Out of Public Life.

GLASGOW, Ky., May 19.—(Special to The Bee.)-The absorbing topic in Kentucky political circles at present is the contest seing made in the Seventh congressional district by Colonel W. C. P. for re-election. The sensational litigation in which he was recently involved has eliminated the lines ordinarily recognized as indicating the Ashland district, and from the general manner in which the matter is being discussed throughout the state it would seem that every man, woman and child in Kentucky is entitled to cast a vote for or against Colonel Breckinridge. Not since the days when Henry Clay was a factor in politics of the Blue Grass section and the clouds of civil war were visible to those most familiar with the situation in the south has the interest been so general as at present. All other issues are wholly obscure. The features of the contest that cause Breckinridge and his immediate friends the greatest apprehension are the declarations of the majority of the democratic war horses of the old school of polities against returning to congress a man whom they consider as having disgraced the seat that has been occupied by Ken-tucky's most illustrious sons. In the south the masses are more prone to follow a few leaders than in the north. This is one of the relics of the civil war, and the same qualities that made confederate officers who faced death at the front of their divisions popular with the rank and file gave them sitions as leaders in the political field when peace was secured. Hence, when this element declared its intention against returning Breckinridge as a result of the niscrable scandal, the mass of democratic roters were not slow to follow. Breckinridge appreciates this peculiar influence, and is making a vigorous effort to regain his position along the same line

PLAYS THE "LOST CAUSE" RACKET. As a result of this combination the singular circumstance of seeing prejudices, supposed to have been buried with the "lost cause," appealed to, is now being witnessed in Kentucky. But the man who finds the hands of the majority of his influential friends against him is making a pewerful weapon of his record as a confederate soldier. Very quietly he is shaking hands with the men who enlisted in his command in '61. For instance, he meets one of this class, and, with that air of sincerity which even Breckinridge's enemies admit that he possesses to a marked degree, he greets him. At once the subject of the Pollard case comes up.
"Yes," remarks the congressman, "this is a miserable thing, Brown, a miserable thing, and the worst feature of it is that some of my friends think I want them to condone it, but not so. Bill Brown, I can be candid with you. We were boys together and I know you haven't forgot that little service I rendered you when we were fighting 'round Richmond. I was badly mixed up with this young woman. I have never denied it. But that did not prevent me serving my district, you know that. Now, Brown, you were never involved in a thing like this, and God knows I am glad of it, but I want you to give me another chance. And, Brown, I need the confidence of my old army friends more than they suspect. You know these northern politicians have never forgot the side we were on in '61. I don't say they induced this young woman to make this matter public, but they are aggravating the situation. But if they desire to persecute me for my war record, I don't object, for I am proud of it. Well, Brown, good day. Remember me to the folks, and if you can conscientiously vote for me I hope you will, but at any rate, Bill, think as kindly of me as you can." Now this kind of thing might not pass muster in Nebraska, and may appear thoroughly ridiculous in some respects, but Breckinridge is said to have strong hopes of winning along this line. SETTLE DABBLES IN "DRAW." If Breckinridge is not nominated the choice of the democrats it is believed will be E. E. Settle, a bright Lexington lawyer. But even Settle is under a cloud, for a case is pending in the court of appeals, brought by Mrs. Settle to recover from a number of prominent Kentuckians several thousand dollars poker. This failing, however, never damaged Henry Clay's prospects with the voters of this district, who invariably spoke of it as the Ashland district in honor of the great statesman, whose home in the suburbs of Lexington bears this name. In this connection it is interesting to note the fact that Cassius M. Clay, sr., the best living type of the great Henry, is being spoken of as the republican candidate, in the event Breck-inridge is renominated. He is now renominated. inridge is 84 years old, but still possesses much of the fire of youth and love for politics which distinguished him as a pioneer abolitionist. While the mantle of Henry Clay did not fall on his eminent relative, Cassius M. Clay as a republican candidate would arouse much en-thusiasm. Still since the days of the old line whig party he has been a member of

can be prevailed on to run independent. George Sweeney of Lexington is probably the most available republican candidate in The return of Breckinridge to the church has by no means secured him the support of church members. The people of the district do not forget the biblical teaching that a sinner may secure saving grace at the elev-enth hour, but many think that the colonel's appeal to be taken back in the church is similar to the prayer of the individual who, when falling over a precipice, exclaimed:

so many parties that his political complex-ion is at present in doubt. In the Ashland district at the last election Breckinridge received 16,500, the republican nominee 9,433 and the populist 730. No prominent democrat

Demands of the Union Pacific Cause Another Hitch in the Proceedings. CHICAGO, May 19.-The general meeting of the Western Passenger association lines which was to have taken place today has been postponed till next Tuesday. A con-ference lasting all day was held between representatives of the Rock Island, Bur-lington, Atchison and Union Pacific lines, but nothing definite was arranged by them. The troubles of the Western Freight asso-ciation are now apparently over for the time being, at least. The action of the Atchison and the Missouri Pacific in de-claring that they were willing to put up the rates has restored harmony all along the line and no further trouble is looked for at present.

Late this evening the Union Pacific made a demand in relation to the settlement of the emigrant rate troubles, which bids fair to upset everything. It demanded its eastbound emigrant business should receive the same consideration as the westbound. This, the other lines claim, is simply allowing the Union Pacific to manipulate eastbound rates at its pleasure while the other lines are bound by an agreement. It is not be-lieve the Atchison will allow this condition to exist. This means the destruction of the emigrant agreement, and unless that is set-tled everything else in the way of an agreement between the western lines is doomed

Old Suit in a New Dress. HARTFORD, Conn., May 19.—Receivers Thomas C. Platt and Marsden J. Perry of Thomas C. Platt and Marsden J. Perry of the New York & New England railroad nave filed a bill of complaint against the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad in the United States circuit court The complaint alleges that the defendant road is unjustly discriminating against them in the transportation of freight and is contriving through its officers, agents and servants to prevent shippers and the public from shipping freight over the complainants' lines. This, it is alleged, has unlawfully reduced the revenue of the New England road. A restraining order and an injunction is asked for. The bill of complaint is filed to take the place of a former bill which was dismissed this week because of lack of jurisdiction, and is returnable on the first Tuesday in July.
