boys will be boys."
"Then she gasped for breath. it was money. She looked at me, then at father, and then with trembling fingers drew the great roll of bills out.

"Ha! ha! ha! I can see father now as he stood there, then, on tiptoe, with his knife in one hand, fork in the other and his eyes fairly bulging aut of his head. But it was too much for mother. She raised her

St. Paul Pioneer-Press. "Hello, Jim! Where have you been lately?" shouted a broker the other evening to a portly, finely dressed man in the corridor of the Fifth Avenue hotel. The gentleman stopped, shook hands with his friend, and replied: "T've been home to see my old father and mother, for the first time in sixteen years, and I tell you, old man,

"Kind o' good to visit your boyhood home,

"You bet. Sit down. I was just thinking about the old folks, and feel talkative. If you have a few minutes to spare, sit down, light a cigar and listen to the story of a rich man who in the chase for wealth had almost forgotten his father and mother." They sat down and the man told his story

"How I came to visit my home happened in a curious way. Six weeks ago I went down to Fire Island fishing. I had had a lunch put up for me, and you can imagine my astonishment when I opened the hamper to find a package of crackers wrapped up in a piece of the little, patent-inside, country weekly published at my home in Wisconsin. I read every word of it, advertisements and all. There was George Kellogg, who was a schoolmate of mine, advertising hams and salt pork, and another boy was postmaster. By George! It made me homesick, and I determined then and there to go home, and "In the first place I must tell you how I came to New York. I had a tiff with my father and left home. I finally turned up in New York with a dollar in my pocket. 1 got a job running a freight elevator in the very house in which I am now a partner. My haste to get rich drove the thought of my parents from me, and, when I think of them, the hard words that my father last spoke to me rankled in my bosom. Well, I went home, I tell you, John, my train seemed to creep. I was actually worse than a schoolboy going home for vacation. a schoolboy going nome for vacation. At last we neared the town. Familiar sights met my eyes, and, upon my word, they filled with tears. There was Bill Lyman's red barn, just the same; but—great Scott! what were all the other houses? We rode nearly a mile before coming to the station, passing many houses, of which only an oc-casional one was familiar. The town had grown to ten times its size when I knew it. The train stopped and I jumped off. Not a face in sight that I knew, and I started down the platform to go home. In the office door stood the station agent. I walked up and said: 'Howdy, Mr. Collins?' stared at me and replied: "You've got the best of me, sir."

"I told him who I was and what I had been doing in New York, and he didn't make any bones in talking to me. He said: 'It's about time you came home. You in New 'It's York rich, and your father scratching gravel to get a bare living!"

"I tell you, John, it knocked me all in a heap. I thought my father had enough to live upon comfortably. Then a notion struck me. Before going home I tele-graphed to Chicago to one of our correspondents there to send me $1,090 by first mail. Then I went into Mr. Collins' back office, got my trunk in there and put on an old hand-me-down suit that I use for fishing and hunting. My plug hat I replaced by a soft one, took my valise in my hand and went home. Somehow the place didn't look The currant bushes had been dug up from the front yard, and the fence was gone. All the old locust trees had been cut down and young maple trees had been planted. The house looked smaller, somehow, too. But I went up to the front door and rang the bell. Mother came to the door and said: 'We don't wish to buy anything today, sir.' It didn't take me a minute to survey her from head to foot. Neatly dressed, John, but a patch and a darn here and there, her hair streaked with gray, her face thin, drawn and wrinkled. Yet over her eyeglasses shone those good, honest, henevolent eyes. I stood staring at her, and then she began to stare at me. I saw the blood rush to her face, and with a great sob she threw herself upon me and nervously clasped me about the neck hysterically crying: 'It's Jimmy, it's Jimmy!' "Then I cried too, John. I just broke down and cried like a baby. She got me into the house, hugging and kissing me, and then she went to the back door and shouted, 'George!'

"Father called from the depths of the kitchen, 'What do you want, Car'line?' "Then he came in. He knew me in a moment. He stuck out his hand and grasped mine, and said sternly, 'Well, young man, do you propose to behave your-self now?" He tried to put on a brave front, but he broke down. There we three like whipped school children, all whimpering At last supper time came, and mother went out to prepare it. I went into the kitchen with her.

"Where do you live, Jimmy?" she asked.
"In New York," I replied. 'What are you working at now, Jimmy' "'I'm working in a dry goods store.

'Then I suppose you don't live very high for I hear of city clerks who don't get enough money to keep body and soul together. So I'll just tell you, Jimmy, we've nothing but roast spareribs for supper. We haven't any money now, Jimmy. We're poorer nor Job's turkey.'
"I told her I would be delighted with the spareribs, and to tell the truth, John. I haven't eaten a meal in New York that tasted as good as those crisp roasted spare-ribs did. I spent the evening playing checkers with father, while mother sat by telling me all about their misfortunes, from old white Mooley getting drowned in the pond to father's signing a note for a friend and having to mortgage the place to pay it. The mortgage was due in a week, and not a cent to meet it with-just $800. She sup-posed they would be turned out of house and home, but in my mind I supposed they wouldn't. At last 9 o'clock came and father said: 'Jim, go out to the barn and see if Kit is all right. Bring in an armful of old shingles that are just inside the door and fill up the water pall. Then we'll go off to bed and get up early and go fishing. "I didn't say a word, but I went out to the barn, bedded down the horse, broke up an armful of shingles, pumped up a pail of water, filled the woodbox and then we all went to bed. Father called me at 4:30 in the morning, and while he was getting a cup of coffee I skipped over to the depo cross lots and got my best bass rod. Father took nothing but a trolling line and a spoon hook. He rowed the boat with the trolling line in his mouth, while I stood in the stern with a silver shiner rigged on. Now, J I never saw a man catch fish as he did. Now. John

With some trouble I got it cashed, gettting paid in $5 and $10 bills, making quite a roll. I then got a ronst joint of beef and a lot of delicacies, and had them sent home. After that I went visit-ing among my old schoolmates for two hours and went home. The joint was in the oven Mother had put on her only silk dress and father had donned his Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes, none too good, either. This is where I played a joke on the old folks. Mother was in the kitchen watching the Father was out to the barn, and had a clear coast. I dumped the sugar out of the old bowl, put the thousand dollars in it, and placed the cover on again. At last supper was ready. Father asked a blessing over it, and he actually trembled when he stuck his knife in the roast.

"'We haven't had a piece of meat like this in five years, Jim.' he said, and mother put in with, 'And we haven't had any coffee in a year, excepting the times when we went a-visitin'.' Then she poured out the coffee and lifted the cover of the sugar bowl, asking as she did so, 'How many spoonfuls, boy, Jimmy!"

"I stayed home a month. I fixed up the place, paid off all the debts, had a good time and came back to New York. I am going to send $50 home every week. I tell you, John, it's mighty nice to have a home." John was loooking steadily at the head of his cane. The wonderful region reached by the Northern Pacific railroad is elaborately described in a handsome booklet entitled "In-dianland and Wonderland," from the pen of Olive D. Wheeler. This vast territory, once roamed by the savage and the shaggy buffalo but now dotted with ranches, towns and cities, and cropped by countless flocks and herds, is illustrated in colored photogravures printed on fine calendared paper in the high-est style of the art, producing the most charming effects. Sights and scenes, towns, historic persons and typical characters are all nictured so as to reflect this section in its entirety and to complete the impression words alone fall to convey. Can be procured by sending 6 cents in postage stamps to Charles S. Fee, general passenger and ticket agent Northern Pacific Railroad, St. Paul. SOUTH OMAHA, May 28 .- To the Editor of The Bee: In the report of the meeting of the South Omaha Democratic club I was misquoted by your correspondent. I simply expressed an opinion that any action was ill-advised until Mr. Bryan announced himself as a candidate. I see no evidence that Mr. Bryan has changed his mind as to his determination to resume the practice of the law. Under such circumstances such premature action on the part of the club would have a tendency to create discord and possibly organize factions with no element of strength for Mr. Bryan's future. I certainly refrain from any attempt to dictate the action of the club. I am fully impressed with the idea that where a matter is fairly presented to the members of any organization within its legitimate sphere of action, the action taken is binding upon all. But in such cases all members of such organization should at least have a voice in its deliberations. To urge a candidate against his own conclusion not to accept an office seems to me a superfluous work which weakens where it is proposed to strengthen. J. W. DAVIS.

THE RELIGIOUS PULL. How the Late Frank Hatton Disposed of a Pions Inspector. Having been brought up in the Methodist church Hatton found himself, as first assistant postmaster general, subjected to many a religious pull from persons introducing themselves to his notice as members of the same communion. One of these persons. says Kate Field's Washington, was a minister who had not held a settled charge for several years, but had combined itinerant preaching with the duties of an inspector inder the Postoffice department. Hatton came in several subordinate function-aries were marked for removal, among others this one. He hurried about, and by one means and another secured letters from prominent church dignitaries asking for his retention. He applied first to Postmaster General Howe, who turned him over to his "I believe I have written first assistant. you asking for your resignation?" said listton, quietly, in response to the visitor's Methodism. "Ah, my friend, there you do our church a gross injustice." answered Hatton, coolly. "Since I have been raised to one of the most prominent positions in this department I take it that the Methodists are satisfied. They certainly would not ask for everything; and as I can serve the church better as first assistant postmaster general than you can serve it as an inspector, you will have to get out, for I shan't. Good merning, Mr. Smith." Postmaster General Howe was very much delighted with the way Hatton put a check upon that kind of influence in which politics and religion are brought into unholy alliance.
