It Was a Dull Day in All Things Speculative.
WHEAT WAS NERVOUS AND UNSETTLED

Strong Continental Cables, Small European Supplies, Had Crop News and Continued Rains in the Winter Wheat Belt Were Factors.

CHICAGO, June 26.—It was a dull day in all things speculative. The small business done was principally on local accounts and consisted largely of changing over July contracts into September. The closing movements caught wheat at its weakest, from 5/8 to 1/2 below the close the day before. Corn wound up with only a decline. Oats were firm and closed higher. June, 1/2 higher for July and 1/4 higher for September. Provisions were a shade lower.

Wheat was nervous and unsettled within a range of 1/8. The opening was quiet, but fell freely by a prominent local operator and other professionals carried the price down. The offerings were all absorbed and a rally followed. The strong continental cables, small European supplies, had crop news and continued heavy rains in part of the winter wheat belt were factors in the progress, combined to cause strong fluctuations. The pool cables, however, were lower, and foreigners were credited with selling freely at the seaboard. The elevator interests, too, were said to be offering July quite freely. The close was dull; even Bradstreet's statement showing a decrease of $1,518,000 in the world's visible supply could not inject life into it.

Corn opened unchanged for September, and with firm domestic markets advanced 1/4, based on easier cables and light reports, rallied 1/4 on the decrease on ocean passages, closing 1/2 higher. Oats were active and weaker on the early trading in sympathy with corn, but later fears of a wet harvest caused shorts to cover, sending prices up 1/4, and the close was at the top figures, with a gain over yesterday's last quotations of from 1/4 to 1/2 for the various futures.

OMAHA LIVE STOCK MARKETS. Second Day of the Week Sees a More Liberal Supply of All Sorts.

TRADE IN CATTLE STILL BADLY OFF. Conditions Not Favorable, but Prices Well Maintained Under the Circumstances—Hogs Drop a Dime but Sell Fast at the Decline.

Receipts of beef cattle were comparatively limited at all the principal markets today, and as there was a fair inquiry from all sources, the tone of the market was fairly good.

The supply of cows and heifers was limited to a few loads and none of these were very good as to quality. Good fat stock was in demand at strong prices, with very few desirable cows and heifers on sale.

There was a fair supply of stock cattle on sale, and while the better grades found ready sale at firm figures, there was a disposition among buyers to hold off on light and coarse grades.

The market for hogs was active and prices were well maintained. The supply was good and the demand was strong.

The market for sheep was quiet and prices were steady. The supply was good and the demand was moderate.

The market for calves was active and prices were well maintained. The supply was good and the demand was strong.

The market for pigs was quiet and prices were steady. The supply was good and the demand was moderate.

The market for chickens was active and prices were well maintained. The supply was good and the demand was strong.

WHY EGGS ARE NOT EATEN. Commission Merchant WM. LOUDON. One of the Secrets of a Great Trade in Hen Fruit.

Under the present method of handling eggs the consumer is always eating stale stock, summer and winter. Sometimes in February and March, after the cold has been exhausted, and before the speculators commence putting eggs into storage again, there is a brief period when consumers get fresh laid eggs, as nothing else is to be had.
