SERIOUS RESULT OF NEIGHBORHOOD ROW

Lancaster County Laboring Men Making Extensive Arrangements for the Proper Celebration of Labor Day at Lincoln.

LINCOLN, July 19 .- (Special to The Bee.) -A neighborhood row in South Lincoln over the respective rights of a cow and some colored boys now promises to develop into a murder case. A man named Overton is the victim, and his physician considers the chances of his recovery very slim. Overton is the proprietor of a cow, which he had tethered in a vacant lot across which a number of boys were accu-tomed to carry water. James Hinton and a lad named Rollins were among the boys, and a day or so ago had some difficulty with the cow, and Mr. Overton came to the assistance of his animal. In the dispute a brick was thrown back and forth until it struck Mr. Overton on the head, rendering him unconscious. Hinton and Rollins were locked up, the latter carious condition, and the hoy was again The attorney for the Rollins boy was at the police station this morning with a vig-orous protest, claiming that the police had no right to rearrest him unless his bonds-

Dutchy Rouett, who was taken in by Detective Malone on Tuesday on suspicion of being the murderer of E. E. Drummend at Holdrege, was taken last night to that town by Sheriff Knudson.

The East Omaha Land company this morn-The East Omana Land company this morning filed in the office of the secretary of state a petition to amend their amended articles of incorporation making the authorized indebtedness $150,000 instead of $250,000. Articles of incorporation of the Perkins County Irrigation company, with a capital stock of $25,000, have been filed.

The case of W. H. Curtis against the Chi-cago, Burlington & Quincy has come to the supreme court on an appeal from the Lan-caster county district court. Curtis is a switchman who lost his hand while coupling. He sued for $20,000 damages and ob-tained a judgment of $10,000, the defense of the railroad being that Curtis was a member of the Burlington Relief association and had been paid the amount due him, $300, and that the company had a release of all claims for damages against them. The case of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy against Peter H. Soderberg, appealed from Kearney county, is a similar one. He sued for $10,000 and obtained a judgment of $5,000. There is quite a number of these cases now ready for the consideration of the supreme court. the judges and juries in all the inferior courts having decided against the road. William Coburn, sheriff, against Annie B Hughes is the title of a case from Dougla county filed in the supreme court today.

KILLED BY A FALLING SCAFFOLD. Philip Mechan and Andrew Peterson Fatalls Injured at York.

YORK, Neb., July 19 .- (Special Telegran to The Bee.)-This morning at the Orphans' home, three-fourths of a mile north of town. Philip Mechan, a contractor, and two of his men, Andrew Peterson and A. D. Townsend were working on a scaffold, building a chimney. The scaffold gave way and Mechan and Andrew Peterson fell to the ground, distance of fifty-five feet, and were covered with boards and brick. They were taken to the hospital at the home and physicians summoned and it was found that their bodies were badly mangled. Meehan died in an hour after the accident. Mr. Peterson is still alive and there is some hope of his recovery Mr. Townsend saved himself from the fall by grasping the chimney and jumping on the roof. Mr. Mechan was a prominent busi ness man, a Catholic and a member of the Hibernian society.

FREMONT, July 19 .- (Special to The Bee.) -Henry Frederickson and Fred Gumport were the only contestants for the Chautaugua bicycle cup on the assembly ground last evening and Frederickson will bear the cup honors for the ensuing year. The board of trustees of the Fremont Chautauqua assembly adopted a resolution complimentary to Rev. George M. Brown, national field Chautauqua secretary, and presented him with a copy previous to his departure for another field. Notwithstanding this being the clos-ing day of the 1894 assembly, the attendance was good and all were well entertained by the two interest-ing lectures of Chancellor Isaac Crook of the Wesleyan university, who spoke a full hour at II a. m. and again at 3 p. m. Examinations in Itinerants' club and physical culture and music occupied the intervening time and the session was brought to a final close by athletic exercises by the Young Men's Christian Association Athletic club and others and vocal music by the Hanscom Park quartet and instrumental music by the Normal orchestra.

Bet on the Wrong Boy.

RED CLOUD, Neb., July 19 .- (Special to The Bee.)-Monday Amos Gust of Line township drove up to Mrs. Williamson's place and became interested in a discussion as to the relative abilities of her two boys as sprinters. He knew which one was most speedy and offered to back his judgment with cash. The widow entered the controversy and backed the other son. The result was that some money and farm implements of both parties was put up, some of it being represented by bills of sale and the balance put up on the spot. Then the widow wanted to back out, but Gust said no, and the race came off. The widow's favorite won. The stakeholder was a stranger to Gust. His home was across the line in Kansas. While Gust was hunting a lawyer the property wagered was spirited away and cannot be found. It is said to be of the value of $1,000.

Young Syracuse Girl Drowned. SYRACUSE, Neb., July 19 .- (Special Telegram to The Bee.)-Miss Clara Doman, aged 17, was accidentally drowned this evening. She was fishing with her younger brother in the Little Nemaha, near her father's house, five miles west of here. The two became separated, and later on the brother returned and found his sister's fishing pole and bonnet heside the river. He immediately gave the alarm. The neighbors turned out enmasse, and after dragging the river for some time recovered the body. The deceased was the daughter of William Doman, a wealthy and influential citizen.

Discovered Russian Thistles. RED CLOUD, Neb., July 19 .- (Special to

The Bee.)—Considerable excitement was caused here by the discovery of Russian thistles growing near the depot the other day. M. Finkenbinder was shown one and recognized it as the same kind of a plant which had appeared in six acres of millet on his farm. CHAIRMAN WILSON RECOGNIZED. Immediately after the adoption of the the speaker recognized Chairman son. Ri ing in his place on the right of the chair, his bandaged head making him look like a worn and battle-scarred veteran, the appearance of the chairman of the ways means committee was greeted with the most unbounded enthusiasm on the demo cratic side, enthusiasm in which the crowded gallaries joined. The bandage extended down over Mr. Wilson's eyes, completely blinding hlm, but with stoical fortitude, in clear, ringing tones, be delivered his speech in support of the position taken by the house conference committee against the senate amendments. After formally announcing and reading the report announcing a dis-agreement, Mr. Wilson said: "I move that the house further insist upon its disagreement to the senate amendments and ask for a further conference from them, and upon hat motion I shall submit a few explana

"It is true, as the gentleman from Maine Reed) has just said, that there have seen but two meetings of the full conferonce on the part of the house and senate A tariff bill, of recent years at least, and perhaps almost always in the history of this country, has been a political measure—a measure proposed by one party and resisted by the other. The present tar ff legislation oes not differ from that character. It was ully recognized and cordially expressed by he republican conferees of the senate that t was the duty of the dominant party in the two houses, through their own special conferees, first to try if they could recon-cile their own differences before they brought to the attention of the full conference committee their proposed action. While, there fore, there have been but these two meet fore, there have been but these two meet-ing; of the full conference committee, daily protracted, earnest and laborious consultaconferees, representing the majority party in this house, and the senate conferees, rep-resenting the majority party in that house, as to the 634 amendments, in the hope tha some agreement that could e reported to the full conference committee when it should be called together. It is because no such agreement has been at ained, it is because no such agree seems at present in sight, that we have felt t was our duty to bring the whole matter ack to the house and receive its instruc-

SENATE WAS HANDICAPPED. "I desire to be perfectly frank and as complete as possible in any statement make to the house today, and yet I recognize there are some limitations to complete ness of statement which probably it would be best for me to observe at this stage in controversy between the two h But I think I may say with truth and frankness and courtesy that if the conferces of the senate on the part of the majority party had been as free and untrammeled as we ourselves, with nothing to control our ac tion but our sense of duty to the people and to our party and the house, a tariff bill would have been agreed upon in one day's session that would have been satisfactory to the democratic party and that would have given hops and courage and enthusiasm to the American people. (Applause on the demo-cratic side.) But, sir, we were not long in finding out, greatly to our disappointment that whatever might be the personal opinions the personal judgment, the strong personal wishes of the democratic conferees of the senate, they came to us somewhat fettered and semewhat limited as to any actinight agree to upon this bill, either by the supposed moral obligations of party caucu or the apprehensions that there were forces in the senate, however small, yet powerful enough to resist successfully the passage of bill which did not make concessions to great corporations and trust interests, that we, as representing the house did not feel free on our part to agree to. (Applause on democratic side.) I do not believe speaker, there would be any difficulty in oming to a compromise or an agreement upon the vast mapority of the 634 amend-ments proposed to this bill by the senate, but there are important amendments pro-posed by the senate which give to this bill in the main a different character from what taxation. This great question of tariff reit had when it went to the senate. It is because of these amendments and because of the statement made to us in all kindness and courtesy, and I might almost say in sadness, that such was the condition of affairs it the other end of this capitol, that unless this house would agree to accept the senate bill practically and substantially as it passed he senate there was to be no tariff legislation at this session of congress. We did not feel, representing the house of representatives, that we could, without a sacrifice of its dignity and of its equality as a legis lative chanmber, respond to any such prope sion as that. (Applause on the democratic The differences between the bill as it passed the house and the bill as it cor back to us from the senate are so marked and objectionable to tariff reformers in the counry generally that we could not, without the ruidance and instruction of this house, agree o accept those differences and thus adopt a different and modified scheme of tariff re HOUSE BILL WAS ACCEPTABLE. "Whatever imperfections may have at-tached to the house bill, it did seem to be accepted by the people of this country as a fair and substantial performance of the pledges by which the democratic party came nto power at the beginning of this admin stration. It was framed upon democratic lines in the main. It sought in levving taxes o consider chiefly and primarily f the public treasury and not the profits and schemes of great private interests. clause on the democratic side.) The which comes back to us from the senate has not met the approval of the great tariff re orm sentiment of this country. ate voted down the proposal of the commit-tee on ways and means for a gradual repeal f the sugar bounty and a reduction by one half of the duty on refined sugar. The sen-ate has reintroduced into the proposed tariff bill a sugar schedule, which, whether truly r not, has been accepted by the country y the press, by the people as unduly favor ble to the great Sugar trust. It proposes duty of 40 per cent ad valorem on grades of sugar, a differential of one-eighth of a cent upon refined sugar, in addition to a differential of one-tenth of ent on sugar imported from cour tries that pay an export bounty up ugar. There is reasonable ground for dif erence of opinion among democrats as to whether any duty upon sugar should be blaced in our tariff bill or not. It has always been contended by those who have been leaders in the great tariff reform movements in this country that of all the articles yielding large revenue sugar was the one rticle upon which an ideal democratic rev enue tariff could be placed. There will be substantial agreement, I think, with that position today in the democratic party, except or the fact that the framers of the McKinle oill, in their zeal, cut off taxation, the larger part of which went into the public treasury order that they might increase taxes, a larger part of which went into the ockets of their beneficiaries. (Loud applause n the democratic side). If the house con erees were prepared to recode from the house osition for free sugar and attempt to agree some revenue taxation for sugar, they ould not, without the mandate ouse, accept such a provision as that which s offered in the senate bill. (Loud applause on the democratic side). If it be true, as stated by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. ohnson), of which I have seen myself some onfirmations in the press, if it be true the reat American Sugar trust has grown so trong and powerful that it says no tariff oill can be passed in the American congress in which its interests are not adequately guarded-if, I say, that be true, I hop-his house will never consent to adjourn (Great cheering on the democratic nent. side). I hope, whatever the fate of the general tariff bill is, that this house will no onsent to an adjournment till it has passed single bill putting refined sugar on the cratic side).

The bill which passed the house was not only approved, prepared and voted for by those who are the immediately chosen serv ants of the taxpayers of this country, but it has been officially endorsed by the president who was chosen by them to carry out this great reform of the tariff. (Applause on the democratic side.)

"Thus every part of the machinery of the United States government today deriving its authority from the direct vote of the Ameri can people has endorsed the scheme reform proposed here and carried through this house. No man in this country has been more interested in the progress and successful termination of this great movement that he man whom the people selected to lead them in this great campaign. (Applause or the democratic side.) So far as it was within his power, I believe he has never spoken an uncertain word as to his position on this question. While the necessity of his posi-tion has compelled him as a matter of couresy to the two branches of congress to emain perfectly quiet during the pendency of this bill, he has felt it to be his duty to what his position is today, and just as we vere entering on the great work of ferring between the two houses, I had the onor to receive from him a long persona letter, which, with his consent, obtained this morning, I will now send to the clerk's desk to be given to the people of this country. (Great applicuse on the democratic side.)

CHEERS FOR REED.

At the conclusion of the reading of the resident's letter, Mr. Reed, the leader of the almority, rose. For almost a minute the heers and shouts of his political colleagues began, "that the gentleman to whom the letter was addressed to which we have just listened has observed all the proprieties which gentlemen ordinarily observe gard to their correspondence, and that a let er which is marked 'personal' having been addressed to him, he has not been guilty of in any way making it public in this fashior without the express consent of the author. Hence we have here today the somewhat remarkable spectacle of a letter sent by the of representatives through his faithful comittee on ways and means. This see e a just reciprocal action on his part, for the house will recollect the committee on ways and means communicated to this house its intention of having an income tax through the kindness of the president of the United States. (Applause on the republican side.) Whether this relationship thus intimate be president was contemplated by the constituion of the United States is hardly worth the trouble of inquiry in the shape in which the matter now stands before the house. Least of all would anybody on this side find fault with the severe language which the president -the democratic president-has seen fit to and laughter on the republican side.) with an argument on the other points of dispute between the two houses. I have, perhaps, almost gone beyond the limits of doubtedly his personal intercourse with the members of that body and his official relations with them have enabled him to pu forth all the strength of a reproof which that letter contains. But the transaction as it stands today, is between them and him. Far be it from us to interfere. If he under any bill that may be passed by congress. I will simply, therefore, in closing, has made a righteous charge their characcall attention to the position in which we find ourselves today with reference to tariff are blackened, and if made a false charge it for them to see that justice is done for the truth of history. (Appliause on the republican side.) We have no concern with it except as spectators. The public aspect of his affair however show s that the newslewspaper rumors ever have in regard to the relations between this committee of the house and the president of the United States, and it is shown very clearly the committee has his directions to consent to a sufficient tax upon sugar in consideration of the fact that coal and iron ore shall be brought here ree. In other words, in the great contesetween the trust which manufactures the sugar of this country and which is a home corporation and the great corporation which to exploit the mines of Nova Scotia and enrich by $10,000,000 the set of men who are engaged in that enterprise, the president and a committee of this house takes he side of the Boston corporation. (Laugh er and applause on the republican side.) Which is best, let them decide. Which is the most satisfactory to the people, let the country decide. It is a matter that does not

SENATE BILL IS AN IMPROVEMENT. "The gentleman from West Virginia has pledged this house—amid the uproarious ap-plause of their side—to stand out against the senate, to break the fetters which bind those gentlemen to their present positions. I have no doubt that what the gentleman ays is true, that the southern gentlemen the senate met their southern brethren with sadness; I have no doubt that sorrow illed their hearts, because there are many mendments of the senate which it is far to say are improvements on the house bil and in the direction of protection. The senite bill is not what this country ought to to its industries, but the house bill was so bad that almost any change in an upward direction would be bet But what was the trouble with these southern gentlemen? These southern gentlemen met with the interests and inlustries of the northern democratic forces, their fellow senators, and what is a tariff bill but one which relates to the in terests of the industries of the When a distinguished senator held out for collars and cuffs and the democratic party senate marched up to the poor meas ure of protection on them, that senator was acting not merely for his own interests but for the interests of his constitutency. And if it is true, as is stated, that he himself was in any way interested in business in that town-not of that kind-and that business would lose its vigor and life on account of the destruction of the collar and cuff in dustry, he was representing his people, because this country and its presperity is made up of its industries and its interests. (Applause on the republican side.) contleman from Ohio (Mr. Outhwaite), in that oment of truth which sometimes comes in the exhaustion of intellect-(laughter and pplause on the republican side)-I mean the weariness, for I do not mean to be dis respectful, says the southern gentlemen who are running this matter for the house sacrificed their own interests, and notable In one instance the interests of their constituents, and the democrats on the other side spite of all they say they do not recognize the fact that the taking off of the tariff is the sacrifice of an interest and of an in dustry. DRAG DOWN, NOT RAISE UP. "No. Mr. Speaker, if they did sacrifice their own states, it was because they wanted to sacrifice us with the rest still worse, and they are engaged today in the process, so fateful to this nation, of endeavoring to bring the prosperity of the rest of the country down to their level instead of doing what we are trying to do, to bring their prosperity up to the great level of ours. (Prolonged ap-plause on the republican side.) We believe of in the success of one section, but it the success of the whole country-(renewed applause) - and we stand as ready to give the outh the benefit of the laws of the land which makes higher wages for men and an

HOW THE TROUBLE MAY END. Since it became certain that there would be a disagreement between the senate and house on the tariff bill there has been more less discussion among senators as to how the difficulties would ultimately This morning members of the democratic party in both houses, upon whom will rest the final determination to be reached, talked more freely than at any time since the bill members there was a determination to stand more freely than any time since the bill firm and there were men who said that a quorum would be maintained until the senate adjourned. One of the conservative democrats of the house whose judgment is always sought in times of extreme party trials said that the situation would finally resolve itself into the question of one-eighth of 1 cent per und protection to refined sugar. This one-will agree to and to pass the bill the senate will have to recede. This assertion was substantiated by other men high in the party councils, who stated that this and other differences would be adhered to by the house.

"We have in the senate," said a leading emocratic senator, "a democratic majority It does not take very much figuring to show little we have to depend on. The senator was informed that it was laimed by the house that when the fight finally resolved itself to that point alone and can be reached." Another democratic senator said that the bill as it passed was the scheme of the party caucus, and the fact that one provision of it, as agreed upon in caucus, the extension of the bounty to 1895, was eliminated, placed the measure in a precarious position before it finally passed the senate and for that reason the members of the finance committee felt the necessity of standing firmly for the

There are possibilities for a long deadlock, but this is not anticipated by many, and it is believed that an adjustment of some kind will be made when it is found that one side the other has determined to remain
