

WERE TOO MUCH FOR CARVER

He Proved to Be No Match for Mrs. Kemp and Her Dog.

MORNING BATTLE UNDER THE VIAGUCT

Slaughter of a Favorite Fighting Cock Leads to a Family Conflict that Causes Great Excitement Among the Squatters—Its Details.

Not many moons ago the territory under the sixteenth street viaduct was the scene of almost daily rowls, brawls and fights. Of late, however, the white winged dove of peace has been flapping its wings over that particular locality until the squatter section along the tracks has been as quiet as the grave.

Subsequent developments, however, have furnished the conclusive evidence that this calm was the forerunner of a storm that has now broken forth in all of its old-time fury.

Not far from the intersection of Sixteenth and Mason streets there are a number of small houses, two of which are occupied by the families of the Kemps and the Carvers.

Some years ago these two families had a conflict over a dog, and since that time they have not been on speaking terms, nor has one member of the Carver family dared to cross the path of any member of the Kemp family.

HOW THE ROW STARTED. It so happens that Mrs. Kemp is the owner of a dog, a big, brutal fellow, while F. Carver possesses a bulldog named Mary Kemp.

One day the two dogs met, and the result was a fight that ended in the death of the bulldog. This was the beginning of the trouble.

At about this time of day Carver was crawling from his couch and drawing himself into his clothes. He went on to the street and over the dead carcass of a thing that for years had been his pride and joy.

Carver got first blood by landing a lower cut left hander squarely upon Mrs. Kemp's left eye. As Carver struck, Mrs. Kemp dodged and in countering she hit Carver under the chin that sent him to grass.

After a short breathing space the combatants started on the third round when the dog appeared to take a part, and as Carver was getting in some short arm work on Mrs. Kemp's ribs, the dog came in and bit him and at once commenced taking a bit-faster from arms, body and legs.

Carver weakened and acknowledged that he had been given a square deal. This acknowledgment, however, did not stop the fighting so far as the dog and Mrs. Kemp were concerned, for while one was pounding the other with his fists, the dog was industriously doing business at the other end, giving Carver the appearance of having passed through a mangle machine.

At last he broke away and started up town, while the crowd went wild with joy, as was the biggest circus of the season.

When the dog got in, after a short breathing space the combatants started on the third round when the dog appeared to take a part, and as Carver was getting in some short arm work on Mrs. Kemp's ribs, the dog came in and bit him and at once commenced taking a bit-faster from arms, body and legs.

That a fool is born every minute was the opinion of a great philosopher. Some people never become too old to learn something more of the crafty ways of that class of humanity that subsist upon the credulity of others.

Mrs. E. A. Broadwell is a widow who lives in a grand old city. She has existed among the snares and follies of this wicked world for forty years and is considered a woman of good sense and discernment.

"It made me Hands that Sor' I couldn't sleep 'an' if it was that hard on me hands, how hard it must be on the durrt!"

This is the way a good old Irish woman praises some washing-powder or other which she prefers to Pearline.

Whoever heard of any one claiming that Pearline hurt the hands? But there's the trouble—Pearline is the original washing compound; its popularity has drawn out thousands of imitations—so popular that to many it indicates any powdered washing material.
