Officer Wolff affested a couple of men yes-terday afternoon on Broadway, near Six-teenth street, while they were engaged in polishing up pennies with some sort of silver wash so as to make them look like dimes. So far as is known they did not try to pass off any of the doctored coins, but the United States laws make this offense punishable and the pair will probably have a chance to answer to the charge of mutilating coins. They gave their names as E. W. Triff and Charles D. Cannan.

T. B. Hughes, the enterprising 919 South Main street merchant, predicts rain for today. If it don't rain he will give you the biggest bargain he has in his big stock of shoes and furnishing goods, and if it does rain he will give you a still bigger one. If it threatens rain and don't rain he will give you all the bargains you can carry away.

If the weather gets obstreperously contrary, as it has been all summer, and won't do anything, he will make you feel good by giving you a big bargain anyway.

Exciting Experience of a Young Man Who Had Peen to See His Girl.

NEW FLEDGED POLICEMAN AND HIS GUN

Officer Catled on the Young Man to Throw Up His Hands and Then Opened Fire on the Frightened Fugitive, Who Took Refuge in a Hotel.

John Carll, a young man living at 320 High School avenue, was on his way home from a cail on a young friend yesterday morning at 2 o'clock when he ran across Officer Autrey, a new member of the police force, who had a gun and proposed to use it. Autrey saw Carll as he was passing an alley near the Congregational church, and, taking him for a burglar, called out for him to hold up his hands. Carll, who is rather timld anyway, thought the officer was a midnight marauder who wanted to get possession of his valuables, and the way he trotted up street would have robbed Alix of all the laurels she has ever had or ever expects to carry off.

When Autrey saw that his admonition was unheeded he pulled out his six-sheeter and put it to work. Six reports rang out on the air. Carll heard one of the bullets whiz past his head, but he paid no attention to it, and only ran the faster, until he was safe and sound in the Keil hotel. Rushing up to Henry Spetman's room, very much out of breath and decidedly pale, he asked that he might have a room for the night He gave the particulars of the attack that been made upon him.

The shooting had continued all the way up Seventh avenue, and one of the bullets struck a telephone pele in front of the Keil. Sev eral of the inmates of the hotel had heard the firing and stuck their heads out of the windows to see what it all meant. When the bullet hit the pole they suddenly lost all interest in the matter and pulled their heads precipitately back into their respective

A few minutes after Carll reached the hotel Officers Autrey and Cousins also came up, and the whole business was explained. Autrey and Carll found that neither one was a highwayman, and each was accordingly relieved. Cousins dismissed Carll with suggestion that hereafter he call on his gir a little oftener and not stay quite so late and when Carll finally started for home i was with a smile on his face and both feet in the middle of the street, overjoyed at the generosity of the peeler who so kindly consented that he might live.

Banks Bound Over. Benjamin M. Banks, as he now styles him self, although he registered as J. M. Banks when brought in by Officer Wolff Monday afternoon on the charge of abducting a feeble-minded girl from the Christian home was given a preliminary hearing before McGee yesterday morning, and, as a was bound over to the September Judge result, grand jury. He was unable to furnish a bond of $500 and was taken to the county jail for safe keeping.

Banks had among his effects a number of railway passes which some of the officials have a faint hope may assist in finding out something more about the fellow. One of these passes was in the name of B. M. Banks wife and two children, issued in 1894; a second was over the Northern Pacific, issued in 1893 for Mrs. Banks and two children: a third was over the Great Northern, issued in 1893, for D. F. Banks. In his pocket was also a postal card addressed to Mrs. B. M. Banks, Lexington, Oklahoma territory, care of Ed Eggleston.

The case of F. E. Kingsbury, charged with assault upon Waldo Nason, was continued until tomorrow morning. Yesterday's devel-opments showed that Mr. Kingsbury must have done some very lively work in the scrapping line in the few minutes he was so engaged. One of the women was hit in breast and hurt so that she was kept up all night. Another is wearing her arm in a sling, while the third fainted away at the first sight of danger. Add to this the fact that Waldo Nason's face can hardly be recognized on account of the lumps and bruises it bears, and that Harry, his little brother, is still half dead from the fright he received, and it is evident that Mr. Kingsbury created a great commotion in the Nason family. Harry Nason denies that he spoke to Mr. Kingsbury when he met him on the street, or acted in any other insult-ing manner toward him. He says that he had heard that Kingsbury was making threats against him and when Kingsbury suddenly popped into view he jumped with fright. This movement, he thinks, is what Kingsbury must have taken to be mear for an insult, but he avers that it was not. A nice, cool swim at Manhattan beach, Lake Manawa, is the proper thing to take these hot days.

City Whacks Up. The city council met as a committee of the whole yesterday afternoon for the purpose of considering a matter with reference to city bonds. It will be remembered that several months ago an arrangement was made by which the Citizens State bank agreed to carry a certain amount of the city bonds without the payment of interest by the city, in consideration of having a portion of the city funds on deposit. A short time ago a dispute arose as to whether the bank had agreed to carry $30,000 or $35,000, the bank claiming the former and the council the latter. There seemed to be council the latter. There seemed to be about as much evidence on one side as on the other, and, in fact, there was but little conclusive evidence on either. At the meeting of the committee yesterday it was decided that rather than have a lawsuit ove the question a compromise should be fixed up and the difference split. This sort of an arrangement was agreeable to the bank offi-cials and will be entered into.

Bret Harte's most famous London joke made a victim of a celebrated man. Dressing himself in the threadbare, frayed, fringed and faded garments which would Bohemian journalist and a tramp, Brct Harte visited the office of Labouchere's Truth and asked to see the eminent journalist. inner office of the newspaporial M. P., and told him that he had a poem which he would be pleased to sell, and asked Mr. Labouchere to look it over. But the famous lance-hurler of the London press at first refused to glance at the offering, but upon Harte's earnestly pleading his imme-diate need of money, Mr. Labouchere hastily examined the production. Then he returned with the remark:
"I cannot use this trash."

"But, my God," exclaimed Harte, "I'm "What do you want for it?" inquired

"It is worth a pound?" said Harte, with an expression indicating that his heart was crawling up in the vicinity of his larynx. "What, a pound! It is not worth the paper it is written on," raged Labouchere, "If you want charity, I can give you a few shillings, but it would only be accomperied by advice to the effect that a strong, able-bodied man like you can make more money and give less cause of offense by seeking employment at hop-picking or ship-ping before the mast. GIBBS WAS SURPRISED.

And the Telegram Made Him Hurry Home

on the Double-Quick. Gibbs was a commercial traveler and had gone on a journey to the north, relates the New York Mercury. A few days afterward the Gibbs household was increased by onea boy. As the mother was very ill the doc tor was requested to write out a telegram informing Gibbs of the addition to his family and also his wife's illness, and asking him to return home with as little delay as pos-

This was done and the telegram was given to the servant to send off. That intelligent girl, being unable to read, put the message in her pocket and forgot all about it. The next day Gibbs paid a flying visit home and was gratified to find his wife and family going on nicely. After staying home a few hours he took his departure without anything having been said about the telegram, which his wife naturally supposed he had received.

A day or two after he had gone the servant found the message in her pocket and after consulting her favorite policeman she decided to send it off at once without saying a word to any one about the delay That night Gibbs, upon returning to his hotel, was horrified when the following telegram, bearing that day's date, was placed in his hand:

"Another addition, a son; your wife is very ill; return at once."

"Another!" he gasped. "Great Jupiter!"

He rushed to the station and took the next train home and dashing into the house in a state of frenzy, demanded to know what had happened. The servant confessed all. The next day there was a vacancy for an intelligent, honest girl at cancy for an intelligent, honest girl

Fifty Thousand Del'ars of American Gold Etolen While Enroute for Paris

METHOD OF THE ROBBERS A MYSTERY

Money Belonged to a Consignment of $2,-000,000 Shipped from New York by Lazard Freres-Robbers Secured One Cask Out of Forty.

PARIS, July 21 .- The police of France are investigating what is probably one of the most remarkable robberies on record, and it is believed that the police authorities of the United States will be asked, if they have not already been so requested, to take a hand in the investigation.

In some unaccountable manner a cask of gold from New York, valued at $50,000, has been stolen while in transportation from Havre to Paris. The French line steamship La Touraine

Captain Santelli, left New York July 21 for Havre, with forty casks of American gold on board, valued at $2,000,000, and consigned to various concerns. She arrived here July 29. The forty casks of gold are believed to have been safely landed at Havre, and they are also said to have been placed, complete, on board the train running between Havre and this city. But when the precious casks were counted upon arrival here, there were only thirty-nine of them; one cask, containing $50,000 in American gold, having y some means disappeared.

The disappearance of the cask of gold has given rise to a number of theories, the that the gold was followed from New York by expert thieves, who patiently awaited their chance to abstract one of the casks. The police, pending the termination of their investigation, will not give any particulars concerning the robbery, but it is believed several persons were concerned in the theft, for the cask of gold must have weighed nearly 200 pounds, and even a very strong man could not have earried such a load alone for any great distance. Among the theories being investigated is one which may turn out to be correct. It is that the thief hid himself or themselves in the car in which the gold was subsequently the car in which the gold was subsequently placed, and that while on their way to Paris, one cask of gold was thrown out of the train and the robber jumped after it. But the fact that only one cask of gold was stolen would seem to indicate, according to another theory, that only one person was concerned in the abstraction of the cask of gold from the train.

But the theroies are many, and the facts made public are very few, not even the name of the consignees of the gold being made known up to the present. Although it is positively asserted that the cask of precious metal was stolen while on its way to this city yesterday, there are people who ask if a mistake may not have been made in the counting of the casks at Havre, and whether the gold was not ab-stracted on board the steamer. The steamship company's officers reply that it is impossible for thieves to get at the gold on board ships, so closely is it guarded, in addition to the fact that the small hold in which it is sealed is situated in the mos secure part of the vessel. In any case a most successful robbery has been committed, and the police of

No theory as to how the robbery was com mitted, could be advanced by the steamship agents. The specie they say, is invariably placed in the strong room, which is really an enormous safe. As to the theory that it may have been thrown from the etrain while enroute from Havre to Paris, nothing could be said, in the absence of information from the home office.

TOLD OUT OF COURT.

Anecdotes and Incidents Gleaned from Bench and Bar.

Mr. W. W. Erwin of St. Paul, chief coun sel for the American Railway union officers on trial in Chicago, was not nursed in the lap of affluence. Not many years ago a dollar looked larger than a thousand now. and a $10 fee was an epoch. At one period in his life pinching poverty compelled him to ask a Mr. Ingersoll for a loan of $5. Ingersoll was rich, as well as a Sunday school leader with a great weakness for prayer. Ingersoll made no answer to the request, but took Erwin down to a quiet corner of the cellar, where he lectured the young man on the error of his ways and closed the discourse with prayer for his redemption. As soon as Ingersoll said "Amen" he turned to go away, but Erwin said: "Hold on, Mr. ngersoll; you have been very kind to and I appreciate your prayers. Indeed, I feel like praying now myself. Will you kneel down with me?"

Somewhat surprised, but delighted none the less at the other's evident penitence, Ingersoll knelt again, with Erwin at his side. With the advantage of an early re-ligious acquaintance, Erwin had the gift of prayer himself, and he prayed so earnestly and elequently, as long and even louder than his friend for the sound brought some of Ingersoll's employes to the head of the

"O Lord," he said, "help me to feel my wickedness and to appreciate all that this good man is doing for me. I realize my sins, and I will be a better man with Thy help and his, But, O Lord, bless Mr. In-gersoll, too, and make him a better man. Thou hast blest him with an abundance of worldly goods; thou hast blest him, as the good book says, in basket and in store; thou hast given him more than his share of the good things of this life. But, O Lord, thou knowest that he has been unworthy of the least of these thy blessings. Thou knowest that he is charged with grinding the faces of the poor, and that the widow and the orphan in his employ find it pretty hard to have meat more than once a and pay their car fare. Thou knowest that he is too apt to turn a deaf car to the cries of thy suffering poor. Lord, make him a better man, make him humble, make him liberal, loosen the bowels of his compassion and to show that our prayers are answered let him look upon me in my poverty right now and lend me that $5! And thine shall

As they arose from their knees there was a shout of laughter from the head of the stairs and a scurrying of the eavesdroppers back to work before their employer could identify them. Ingersold handed the young man $5 and went on his way. It was a remarkable and immediate answer to prayer

Some good stories are going the rounds concerning Sir Matthew Begbie, chief jus-tice of British Columbia, who died the other day. Here is one of them: In 1883 a man was charged in Victoria with having killed another man with a sandbag, and in the face of the judge's summing up the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty. This annoyed the chief justice, who at once said: "Gentlemen of the fury, mind, that is your verdict, not mine. On your conscience will rest the stigma of returning such a disgraceful verdict. Many repetitions of such conduct as yours will make trial by jury a horrible farce and the city of Victoria a nest of immorality and crime. Go, I And then, turning to the prisoner, the chief justice added: "You are discharged. Go and sandbag some of those jurymen; they deserve it."

An old newspaper clipping tells an inter esting story of the first law case handled by the late William Walter Phelps. His client was a pretty young woman who claimed that the landlord of the house in which she jodged had called after her one night as she entered her room, "There goes a thief." Mr. Phelps failed to prove his case and it soon became evident that the charge was groundless. Then the opposing counsel began an insulting and tantalizing cross-examination that greatly incensed not only the plaintiff's attorney but the spectators in the court room, and the young woman burst into tears The judge, with stolid indifference, refused to interfere. The jury gave a verdict in favor of the woman for the sum of $50. Later Mr. Phelps met the foreman of the Jury, who volunteered the information:

"We didn't believe that he called her a thief, and we didn't believe that you ex-pected any damages, but you were so good natured that we thought that we could give you damages enough to make the costs." It is related by Kate Field's Washington that Lord Coleridge sprang into eminence as a lawyer by adreitly seizing a simple incident white he was pleading the cause of a man on trial for murder. In the course of his long argument a candle in the jury box flickered and went out, leaving the court room in darkness. He stopped speaking and the silence in court was oppressive. The scene, with its dark shadows, its grim face. the scarlet robes of the judge, and the haggard face of the murderer was worthy of Rembrandt. The usher replaced the light and Coleridge resumed his address. "Gen-tlemen of the jury, you have a solemn duty very solemn duty to dis-te. The life of the prisoner at the bar charge. is in your hands. You can take it-by a You can extinguish that life as the candle by your side was extinguished a moment ago. But it is not in your power, it is not in the power of any of us— of any one in the court or out of it—to restore that life, when once taken, as that light has been restored." The tone in which the words were spoken, the caustice of the volce and the action of the brator, with the inspiration of the scene and the hour, produced a thrilling effect. The jury activation of the scene and coloridates for quitted the prisoner, and Coloridge's for-tune was made. He was never without a brief after that.

The sarcastic Justice Maule, says the San The sarcastic Justice Maule, says the San Francisco Argonaut, did not spare his judi-cial brethren. When ber of the Queen's Bench Reports." When a witness was telling an impossible story, and declared that he could not tell a lie, for he had been wedded to truth from his infancy, Justice Maule observed: "Yes, but the question is, How long have you been a widower?" The counsel who objected to a widower?" The counsel who objected to a bill of costs in a case before Justice Maulo and a jury declared that the account was a "diabolical bill.". The judge told the jury, however, that even if the statement of the counsel were true, it was still their duty to "give the devil his due." Another Philanthropist.

"Then every machine you build throws forty-eight men out of employment. What's to become of those?" Capitalist's Daughter-Why, papa, let them go to the senside. They're needed there awfully.

They Stuck Out Too Long. Texas Siftings: "Yes," said the old traveler, "I was on a jury in California once. I didn't want the fellow hung, and so stuck out against the other eleven for line days, locked up in the jury room, when they gave in, and we brought in a verdict o And then I was ready to stab myself with spite."

"Cause the mob had hung the prisoner on the very first day we were locked up!" WEATHER FORECAST. Partly Cloudy and Slightly Cooler Weather
