

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

E. ROSEWATER, Editor.

PUBLISHED EVERY MORNING.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION: Daily Bee (without Sunday) One Year, $4.00

Omaha, The Bee Building, South Omaha, Corner N. and Twenty-fourth Sts.

COMMUNICATIONS: All communications for news and editorial matter should be addressed to The Editor.

ADVERTISING: All business letters and notices should be addressed to The Business Letters.

STATEMENT OF CIRCULATION: George B. Tschuck, secretary of the Bee Publishing company, being duly sworn, says that the actual number of copies of the Daily Morning, Evening and Saturday Bee printed during the month of July 1909 was as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Date, Circulation. Rows for each day of the month from 1st to 31st.

Total, 75,591. Less deductions for unsold and returned copies, 18,431. Total sold, 57,160.

GEORGE B. TSCHUCK, sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence this 1st day of August, 1909.

TO NEBRASKA REPUBLICANS: All republicans who are opposed to the domination of railroads and desire to resist the attempt to make the party subservient to corporate monopolies and public thieves are hereby invited to express their views by letter directed to me personally.

We must make an organized effort to save the state from the blighting miracle which has repudiated the pledges repeatedly made to the people in our platform; has made the execution of our laws a farce and looted the state treasury.

Notice will be given in due time through The Bee which will be deemed most advisable to accomplish the ends in view.

Adieu, congress!

We will renew our acquaintance with congress on the first Monday in December next.

If New York republicans want Levi P. Morton for their next governor, Mr. Morton will yield to their entreaties to become their candidate. It looks very much now as if Mr. Morton is wanted.

Only a few days more and the lists of contestants in all the congressional districts will have been made up. The race for congress promises to be a lively one throughout the whole of Nebraska.

Congressman Bryan had to stop in Iowa to give his friend, Mr. Weaver, a lift in his congressional campaign. This means that Nebraska is in turn to be afflicted with Weaver before the campaign shall have ended.

It is to be feared that a long time will elapse before Senator Vest takes it upon himself to make the announcement of his own prospective retirement from public life. The retirement is more likely to come unannounced.

While President Cleveland is reviewing the Knights of Pythias grand parade today, why not also review the congressmen as they march out from the seat of their long session's labors to face the music of their constituents?

The men who started out to capture Chicago were evidently not aware of the magnitude of the job they were undertaking. They should have known that Chicago had annexed parts of three states in preparation for the World's fair.

The weather reports indicate that the people residing in the country north of us have been having another touch of mercury-expanding temperature. This is simply to remind us that we are still within the shadow of midsummer heat.

The upward tendency in prices of hogs and cattle at the Omaha market is encouraging to stockgrowers in this section. Reports from the great cattle ranges of Wyoming indicate a prosperous year for cattle men, as feed and pasturage are plentiful.

On the whole, the path of the Fifty-third congress has thus far been a rather rocky one. Its unpopular measures have so overshadowed its popular measures in the public estimation that few will retain tender memories of it unless it redeems itself during the short session with which it is to close its career.

We give no credit to the report that one of the most celebrated of the rainmakers has been bottled outside. No one who ventures into the business of rainmaking could have anything but boundless confidence in the possibilities of the future. A rainmaker could not look away from the bright side of things long enough to commit suicide.

Let word go out to all the country round about that charitable institutions in Omaha require applicants for relief to return an equivalent in work of some kind, and the usual fall influx of chronic beggars may be cut off. Omaha has enough to do in the line of relief work as it is, without assuming the load that neighboring communities should carry.

The populists of this congressional district will make their nomination this week. Two years ago their nominee received 2,152 votes and it is claimed that their candidate will double this vote next November if a wise selection be made. At the last congressional election in this district 25,390 votes cast, Doane, democrat, receiving 10,388 votes and Mercer 11,488 votes.

Heretofore the railroads have controlled the location of the state fair. It is high time the citizens, in whose interest the fair is held, put in their cards and locate the fair in Omaha. The beautiful attractions of this city will draw large crowds to the fair, a fact which should receive the consideration of those who have the power to locate the fair, and it should be apparent to railroad managers.

THE TARIFF BILL A LAW.

The Gorman tariff bill, as it will be known to history, has become a law without the signature of the president, agreeable to the provision of the constitution, which says: "If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it."

and hypocritical. There is not a trust in existence that will be in the least degree injured by the legislation of this congress, and not one of them stands in any fear of the administration.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP. The embodiment into the state platform of one of the principal political parties of Nebraska of a declaration in favor of municipal ownership of street cars, gas and electric lighting plants and water works must be taken as an indication of the great growth of the popular interest in this question.

The increase in the volume of business in Omaha last week over a corresponding period last year may be partially accounted for in the fact that eastern jobbers have withheld credit from many old customers throughout the section.

The drift toward municipal ownership in this country has been quite perceptible in recent years, although it has been extremely irregular and has been confined to but two or three features of municipal service.

The railroad press of the state is just now assiduously engaged in denying the fact that the republican state convention was manipulated and controlled by railroad managers.

The science of railroad engineering is becoming more and more profound as the years go on. Perhaps ordinary minds are not expected to understand it.

Along with this movement there have been many attempted compromises between the two contending forces and many devices by which the conduct of these enterprises has been left in private hands upon conditions intended to protect the public and to give the public an adequate return for the valuable privileges conferred.

One of the democratic claims in behalf of the present congress, and perhaps the most preposterous of any of them, is that its policy and legislation have been inimical to the trusts. This claim is set up by Mr. McMillin, whose statement is understood to be in the nature of a manifesto representing the views of the house democrats, and therefore especially designed as a vindication of the party and at the same time to supply an argument for campaign purposes.

It is to be feared that a long time will elapse before Senator Vest takes it upon himself to make the announcement of his own prospective retirement from public life.

Only a few days more and the lists of contestants in all the congressional districts will have been made up.

Congressman Bryan had to stop in Iowa to give his friend, Mr. Weaver, a lift in his congressional campaign.

The upward tendency in prices of hogs and cattle at the Omaha market is encouraging to stockgrowers in this section.

On the whole, the path of the Fifty-third congress has thus far been a rather rocky one.

We give no credit to the report that one of the most celebrated of the rainmakers has been bottled outside.

Let word go out to all the country round about that charitable institutions in Omaha require applicants for relief to return an equivalent in work of some kind.

The populists of this congressional district will make their nomination this week.

Heretofore the railroads have controlled the location of the state fair.

and hypocritical. There is not a trust in existence that will be in the least degree injured by the legislation of this congress, and not one of them stands in any fear of the administration.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP. The embodiment into the state platform of one of the principal political parties of Nebraska of a declaration in favor of municipal ownership of street cars, gas and electric lighting plants and water works must be taken as an indication of the great growth of the popular interest in this question.

The increase in the volume of business in Omaha last week over a corresponding period last year may be partially accounted for in the fact that eastern jobbers have withheld credit from many old customers throughout the section.

The drift toward municipal ownership in this country has been quite perceptible in recent years, although it has been extremely irregular and has been confined to but two or three features of municipal service.

The railroad press of the state is just now assiduously engaged in denying the fact that the republican state convention was manipulated and controlled by railroad managers.

The science of railroad engineering is becoming more and more profound as the years go on. Perhaps ordinary minds are not expected to understand it.

Along with this movement there have been many attempted compromises between the two contending forces and many devices by which the conduct of these enterprises has been left in private hands upon conditions intended to protect the public and to give the public an adequate return for the valuable privileges conferred.

One of the democratic claims in behalf of the present congress, and perhaps the most preposterous of any of them, is that its policy and legislation have been inimical to the trusts.

It is to be feared that a long time will elapse before Senator Vest takes it upon himself to make the announcement of his own prospective retirement from public life.

Only a few days more and the lists of contestants in all the congressional districts will have been made up.

Congressman Bryan had to stop in Iowa to give his friend, Mr. Weaver, a lift in his congressional campaign.

The upward tendency in prices of hogs and cattle at the Omaha market is encouraging to stockgrowers in this section.

On the whole, the path of the Fifty-third congress has thus far been a rather rocky one.

We give no credit to the report that one of the most celebrated of the rainmakers has been bottled outside.

Let word go out to all the country round about that charitable institutions in Omaha require applicants for relief to return an equivalent in work of some kind.

The populists of this congressional district will make their nomination this week.

Heretofore the railroads have controlled the location of the state fair.

and hypocritical. There is not a trust in existence that will be in the least degree injured by the legislation of this congress, and not one of them stands in any fear of the administration.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP. The embodiment into the state platform of one of the principal political parties of Nebraska of a declaration in favor of municipal ownership of street cars, gas and electric lighting plants and water works must be taken as an indication of the great growth of the popular interest in this question.

The increase in the volume of business in Omaha last week over a corresponding period last year may be partially accounted for in the fact that eastern jobbers have withheld credit from many old customers throughout the section.

The drift toward municipal ownership in this country has been quite perceptible in recent years, although it has been extremely irregular and has been confined to but two or three features of municipal service.

The railroad press of the state is just now assiduously engaged in denying the fact that the republican state convention was manipulated and controlled by railroad managers.

The science of railroad engineering is becoming more and more profound as the years go on. Perhaps ordinary minds are not expected to understand it.

Along with this movement there have been many attempted compromises between the two contending forces and many devices by which the conduct of these enterprises has been left in private hands upon conditions intended to protect the public and to give the public an adequate return for the valuable privileges conferred.

One of the democratic claims in behalf of the present congress, and perhaps the most preposterous of any of them, is that its policy and legislation have been inimical to the trusts.

It is to be feared that a long time will elapse before Senator Vest takes it upon himself to make the announcement of his own prospective retirement from public life.

Only a few days more and the lists of contestants in all the congressional districts will have been made up.

Congressman Bryan had to stop in Iowa to give his friend, Mr. Weaver, a lift in his congressional campaign.

The upward tendency in prices of hogs and cattle at the Omaha market is encouraging to stockgrowers in this section.

On the whole, the path of the Fifty-third congress has thus far been a rather rocky one.

We give no credit to the report that one of the most celebrated of the rainmakers has been bottled outside.

Let word go out to all the country round about that charitable institutions in Omaha require applicants for relief to return an equivalent in work of some kind.

The populists of this congressional district will make their nomination this week.

Heretofore the railroads have controlled the location of the state fair.

VOICE OF THE STATE PRESS.

Lincoln News: For people who are blamed glad that Roosevelt has withdrawn from the republican party as at present constituted, the friends of Tom Majors appear to set real teeth at a prospect of talking about its having no effect on the result.

Cosad Tribune: The defeat of MacColl is to be deplored. It is quite generally conceded that he was the best voter before the convention and his nomination would have cemented together all party factions, while Majors is already confronted by the storm of the day.

Pawnee City Republican: The turning down of W. S. Summers in the state convention for attorney general was a cruel and unjust act. It was unduly nominated on the first ballot, but the inefficiency of the secretaries and the inability of the chairman to grasp the situation caused another ballot to be taken, which resulted in Summers' defeat.

Nobrara Pioneer: The nomination of Thomas J. Majors for governor of Nebraska looks good to Nobrara and the republican party. He is one of the worst types of the politician, and while he parades his army record as something wonderful, there are many equally as brave who have never been heard of.

Winer Chronicle: The ticket selected by the republican state convention does not arouse a great deal of enthusiasm among the republicans of Cumings county. They are loath to see the convention controlled by a spirit of wisdom which would dictate such a nomination as the present one.

Broken Bow Republican: Regardless of the result of the election, the county's most highly respected citizens are high in position as governor of the state, is looked upon with pride. The judge evidently has no objection to the republican party, and he has been favored with a nomination each year for positions on office.

Lexington Pioneer: The defeat of John H. MacColl at the recent republican state convention was undoubtedly by a series of unscrupulous tricks which beneath the dignity of any man who desires or aspires to hold a state office.

Governor Waite of Colorado is to have everything his own way in the convention that is to renominate him as the populist candidate for governor.

Nebraska manufacturers will make the greatest exposition of their products at the state fair this year ever seen in the state. It will be the chief feature of the fair, worthy of the consideration of every citizen of this great state.

A Commendable Failure. The present congress has failed for having failed to live up to a good many of its threats.

Tickets the Fellows Abroad. It is doubtless cheering to Mr. Cleveland and his followers to learn that the un-American tariff bill receives the hearty approval of nearly every manufacturer in Europe.

Information Wanted. It would be instructive and interesting if the present congress could be called upon to invite its present congressmen to stay at home next time.

A Futile Protest. What President Cleveland expects to gain by refusing to sign the tariff bill we cannot imagine.

Expert Opinion of the Trust Tariff. Every citizen who comes to a sincere tariff reformer knows that this bill in its present form, and as it will be submitted to congress in its amended form.

Results of Folly. The window glass manufacturers of Pittsburgh are now coming to an agreement as to the extent of the wage cut which should be made on account of the reduction of the tariff on window glass.

President Warren of Gates college, Neligh, has resigned his position and has accepted the presidency of a college in Salt Lake.

The convention of the Young People's union of the East Nebraska conference of the United Brethren church opens this morning at Crete.

James Myers of Odell is under arrest on the charge of embezzlement for failing to show the government an cashier of the Farmers bank of Odell.

A. R. Graham, a well known Nebraskan residing at Winer, is about to remove from the state and make his home in New Mexico, where he has secured a large tract of land that he will convert into a ranch.

Sugar beet in Madison county are reported as looking fine, and they will make a good crop, even if there is no more rain until after harvest.

Advanced the Price of W. L. Key. PEORIA, Aug. 27.—The Whisky trust has ordered an increase in price of 5 cents per gallon to take effect today.

"PEACE CONTRIBUTIONS."

How Corporations Buy Immunity from Legislative Attack in New York. A striking story of the legislative blackmailing of corporations in New York state is given by Joseph B. Bishop, in "The Price of Peace," which appears in the Century for September.

Incidents, which are, by the way, of unquestionable authenticity: Toward the close of the campaign of 1882 the president of a powerful and wealthy corporation called a meeting of its directors to consider a special matter there was some delay in getting them all together, and the meeting was not held till the Friday preceding election day.

When the directors had assembled the president stated a business that the corporation had been asked to contribute $15,000 to the democratic campaign fund.

He advocated the granting of the demand, saying that the amount was the same that they had paid the year before, that they had got all they had bargained for, that he considered the payment a good business investment for the company, and that as careful custodians of the interests entrusted to them they could not afford to refuse.

The directors voted the payment. It was stipulated by the "peace" legislators that the money should be divided into three equal parts, one check for $5,000 to go to a state machine leader, another for the same amount to a local boss, and the third to the national committee.

The checks were drawn, and were to be called for by one of the beneficiaries on Monday following. They were locked in the company's safe in Sturtevant's name.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

Another instance, no less authentic, is equally illuminating. A meeting of the board of directors had been called a few days before election to consider the question of a contribution of an amount similar to the one in the foregoing case.

PATRIOTIC BILLS.

"Greater Love Hath No Congressman Than This." It is seriously announced, says the Washington Star, that Representative Bryan of Nebraska has devoted what he terms his "quota of plants from the Botanic Gardens" to the decoration of the grave of Thomas Jefferson. A more affecting tribute than this can hardly be imagined, and many sympathetic tears will roll down the cheeks of those who worship the memory of Monticello's sage.

Mr. Bryan's "quota of plants from the Botanic Gardens"—the blooming cacti, the graceful palm, the fragrant heather and the gorgeous tulip, daisies and roses were looked for, holidays regarded as probabilities, gold-mines permitted, but beyond these and a few other of the simpler wild and cultivated varieties no Monticello hopes had soared.

And now comes this torrent of generosity, which promises to make Jefferson's grave in bloom with floral radiance such as is likely to break the horticultural record. How this example of independent, but never in the most optimistic of their drama did exaggerated mental visions behold the beauties of Mr. Bryan's "quota of plants from the Botanic Gardens" is going to affect the remainder of the nation can be secured from the elementary institution which Superintendent Smith has conducted with such admirable success will be continued until the remainder of his career may be willing to give Jefferson a handful or two of the cut flowers they beg from the protesting gardeners but which are granted as a gratuity as that of Mr. Bryan is not likely to be contagious enough to cause comment.

Curious people may wonder and ask what "greater love" than this? It is enough that Mr. Bryan has elected to beautify the Jefferson tomb, even though he may be a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing. What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

What if the horticultural campaign job about to get something or move on itself, and with many an empty flower pot in Nebraska, he is careless of his future that he may have the shades of him whose departed yet ever-present, greatness he adores. Greater love hath no congressman than this: That he lay down his quota of plants on the grave of a man who, by reason of his own or even anti-Jeffersonian, fashion, Mr. Bryan has, however, done more than a little thing.

Gone to Sleep. The "renowned" makers of hats have all gone to sleep this year except John B. Stetson, and he's the man that put them to sleep, for he made his "Stetson Special," and they can't touch it for style, or anything else. It's a modest, elegant hat, and we're sole agents. The few summer suits we have are going at half price this week.

Browning, King & Co., Reliable Clothiers, S. W. Cor. 15th and Douglas.