THE IOWA REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN.

The republican campaign in Iowa has opened with Senator Allison at the front, as it is proper he should be, as the man best prepared to present and discuss the national questions which are uppermost in the attention of the people of that state.

In no respect is the Iowa senator stronger than when he discusses the money question. His contributions to this subject are not less valuable than those of any other man in public life, and he has always advocated a sound and stable currency.

It is not all, for the silver we have would decline largely in value or purchasing power, thereby still further diminishing the effective money supply. The country would be brought at once to a silver basis, while possibly, as Senator Allison says, we might in the course of ten or fifteen years have a larger supply of money than now.

Secretary Morton's interest in the proceedings of the democratic state convention has doubtless been chilled since he put the ocean between him and the Nebraska democracy.

Republican candidates for the legislature should remember that a nomination does not always mean an election. The ticket should not be loaded down with any man whose conduct has to be defended or explained away.

It was too bad that President Cleveland was not at home when John L. Sullivan called at the white house to pay his respects. There might have been a very interesting discussion upon the subject of taking defeat like medicine, a subject on which both might talk from experience.

Over in Iowa the whole political fight is centering around the campaigns in the various congressional districts, where several combinations have been made against the republican candidates by the democrats and populists.

Omaha's representative on the Missouri river commission should be encouraged in his efforts to have some of the money appropriated by congress for improving the channel opposite this city expended this season when it will not only give needed employment, but also go further in accomplishing its object.

The balance of trade may be turned against us, making a larger drain of gold than we have experienced during the past year. In that case the treasury would, of course, be called upon to supply a considerable part of the demand.

But it does not seem to be necessary. In the present state of public confidence in the credit of the government, to maintain a gold reserve of $100,000,000. One year ago had it been proposed to reduce the reserve nearly one-half the proposition would have been generally condemned as pregnant with danger to financial stability and to the national credit.

Secretary of War Lamont must have expected numerous protests to be made against the army order abolishing certain western posts and have fortified himself against them. Such an important step would not have been taken without first canvassing the probable results and considering all possible arguments, both for and against it.

Later reports from the scene of the cyclone that traversed northern Iowa and southern Minnesota on Friday last prove that the first accounts of the ruin wrought in its wake were by no means exaggerated.

It was good politics to name Senator David B. Hill temporary chairman of the New York democratic convention. He is a courageous leader, and the democracy of the Empire state is at present in need of men who can infuse some spirit and nerve into it.

The oldest daily newspaper in America, the Philadelphia North American, last week passed the 110th anniversary of its founding. Compared with the great newspapers of this generation the North American gives promise under the enterprising management of its editor, Clayton McMichael, to continue to bear its proud title for years and decades and centuries to come.

Women are now associated with men in all kinds of beneficial societies and fraternalities, and have been united in trade organizations all the way from the north to the south.

The canal proposition without the trunkway as an adjunct is liable to legal attack by injunction. Our ablest lawyers consider it a mooted question as to whether a water power constitutes such an inherent improvement as is contemplated by the statute under which the subsidy is to be voted.

The populists of the Nineteenth representative district have nominated a bank cashier for the legislature.

Colonel Majors tore up his shirt and sent it to secure a turnout at a Major's rally on a week day that they have gone to holding political meetings on Sunday.

There is one less minister running for office this week than last. Rev. C. C. Ossel, the republican nominee for the legislature of Nebraska, has declined to stand for the office.

The editor of the Omaha Bee, it is said, will make a stimulating tour of the state in the interest of the Republican party.

Charity knows no Section Lines. Philadelphia Record. "A soldier of the lost cause" has sent a letter to the editor of the Philadelphia Record, made destitute by the Minnesota fire, and it is a curious comment on the whirling of the cyclone that the document was sent to George H. McClellan, acting mayor of New York.

Sign of Improving Times. Philadelphia Record. The fire losses in the United States and Canada for 1884 up to August 31 were $7,425,000,000, and for the corresponding time in 1885 were $11,324,000,000.

Forging to the Front. Philadelphia Record. It is a very encouraging sign that the republican state convention of Washington this week voted a resolution for the free coinage of silver at the rate of 16 to 1.

Way with It. Philadelphia Record. The fact that President Cleveland attributes the smaller size of her freshman class of this term to the "hazing" troubles of last year furnishes a commentary on modern college life which is worth emphasizing.

NEW ARMY DIVISIONS.

Washington special to New York Sun: The question has suggested itself whether the approaching retirement of General Howard for age would not furnish a good opportunity for remodeling the present system of territorial departments.

The organization used to be that of those military divisions for the three major-generals, and included within these divisions six military departments, commanded by the six brigadier-generals. But after the death of General Sheridan and the succession of General Schofield as senior major-general, the command of the army, there was a break in the symmetry of the system, which was ultimately followed by the abolition of the divisions and the assignment of the two other major-generals to the command of departments.

It is estimated that 15,000 men gave up comfortable homes and a certain income to make a quick fortune in the land of promise. It is believed somewhat of the fear of them are bankrupt today.

John Jacob Astor of New York has just bought about 100 acres of land on the Bronx and Pelham parkways, opposite the Morris Park race track, for $150,000. It adjoins the old Bradford estate, which Mr. Astor already owns.

Rev. Father Peter Havermans of Troy, N. Y., has been a priest for sixty-one years and for fifty-one years has been pastor of St. Mary's church in that city, which he built, and in which he still celebrates mass every Sunday.

Anna L. Diggs, the suffragist leader of Kansas, says Mrs. Leage is not and has not been a reconciled suffragist, and that Mary Ellen is principally anxious to keep her name before the public.

Miss Maudie Reed, who has written a Buffalo Courier: "You say he made his money through the stock market, and that he is at work at present on a large plantation representing a scene during a strike."

Philadelphia Record: No, Maudie dear, if you were a woman, I think we had better break our relations. I have broken all mine already.

In such a system. Above all, the duties of some brigadier-generals as department commanders might be almost nominal, while those of others, commanding at the west, would be increased by the enlargement of territorial commands there, as a result of creating new ones in the east.
