Which Business is Being Conducted is Out, Presaging Action Toward Raising Premiums.!

A circular just issued by H. Bennett of this city, inspector of fire insurance companies. presents figures which are calculated to show that there is no great amount of profit in the fire insurance business. The losses and expenses (not including dividends) for the five years ending December 31, 1893, amounted to $573,824,012, while the gross premium receipts amounted to $552,115,125, which makes a net loss on the five years' business of $21,708,887. Just how much the parenthetical clause referring to dividends may include the circular does not tell, but the fact of its being there is an indication that there must have been some dividends declared. Statistics show that an average of one fire insurance company fails or retires each week, the year around, so the same document says. It is stated that on the st ength of yard the statements contained therein another rise in rates will be made. Already there has been an advance of 1 per cent per an-num ordered in risks on buildings where electric motors are used having ground conwaists.

nections. It is claimed that there is much more likelihood of there being a fire where motors of this kind are used.

Major Halford's Address on the Work of the Association.

An audience of about 600 people gathered at the First Presbyterian church to hear a talk by Major E. W. Halworth, U. S. A. on the subject of Young Men's Christian association work. For some time past the local association has been in hard financial straits, and it has now come to the point where, unless something is done it will have to close its doors and go out of business. The fact of so large an audience being present shows that a large proportion of the church going people of the city are opposed to its going under and is an indication that their support will be rendered when it becomes imperative. After excellent music by Mrs. W. W. Sherman and the church choir, Major Halford was introduced, and commenced ford was introduced, and commenced by saying that the popular statement that the economic value of every man to the community in which he lives is about $1,500 is bought from H. E. Southard, for wages due from the company for his services as night not strictly true. God's estimate puts man a little lower than the angels, and Shake-speare says man is divine. The most dangerous men in any community are not from the company for his services as hight watchman. The company put in a counter claim for damages, alleging that Southard stole enough goods while he was watchman to offset the claim. During the trial the fact was proved, and it was also shown that Southard had served a term in the county full for the origing. The variation was control those who inhabit the jalls and penitentiaries, but those who live in stone houses, look out of plate glass windows and dress in broadcloth, for it is their apathy that allows young men to go down to ruin because of insufficient safeguards around them.

The latter's house, th Sixth street, was entered while unbers of the family were away, and along was turned upside down by the in their search for valuables. Co the res in their search for valuables. Concert at St. Xavier's. The first of a series of Sunday afternoon concerts was given at St. Francis Xavier's Catholic church yesterday afternoon, the large audience room being well filled. Mr. J. H. Simms opened the program with a fine rendering of Guilmant's "March in D," on the organ. Miss Zena Lange made her first appearance as a solo singer, showing herself the possessor of a very promising soprano voice. Prof. Sutorius, the Misses Lowe, Mr. Cummings and Miss Crandel Lowe, Mr. Cummings and Miss Crandel of Omaha played two selections on mandolin and guitar, and would certainly have been encored had it been any other day or place. Miss Jennie Keatlhg sang an "Ave Maria," by Ballo, and Mr. I. M. Treynor sang "There Were Ninety and Nine," by Campion, both of them sustaining the good reputations they have earned as vocalists. Mrs.A.G. McCallister played an organ plece by Batiste, and the choir sang a couple of numbers. A collection was taken, netting about $30, which will be turned into the music fund. At the close of the concert those participating were served with lunch in the rooms in the basement by the ladies having the affair in charge. The success of the entertainment was such that others of the same kind will probably be given at intervals of a month or so through out the winter. The Dudley Buck male quartet of this city has been engaged to give a concert at the church on Tuesday evening, October 30, REPUBLICAN STATE PLATFORM.

Sound Principles Enunciated by the Party in Nebraska. The republicans of Nebraska in conven tion represented deplore the disastrous re-sults of the "change" in the policies of the national government, decreed by the people national government, decreed by the pecple at a time when the mental balance of the country was temporarily disturned by the exhibit action of a long course of peace, prog-ress and material prosperity, and the casmor of demagogues and political quacks, and confidently appeal to the people of the state for a return to the conditions that ex-isted prior to the elections of 1892. Thismayed by the financial devulsion that paralyzed the business centers of the coun-try, when the results of the national and paralyzed the business centers of the coun-try, when the results of the national and paralyzed the business centers of the coun-try, when the results of the national and paratice elections made it certain that the policy of protection of home industries and the guarantee of public credit and a sound currency were about to be over now by a democratic president and a congress demo-cratic in both branches, the leaders of the party, wholly in power for the first the course to embody the principles set forth in their national convention at Chicago in legela-tion, of the wisdom to sound on their threat-ened raid on the industries of the people in suspense and uncert tinty dur-ing twelve months of unpractable debate over the work of framing a tracable eco-nomical system, cortupt on its face, dis-criminating against northern industries for the benefit of the south, openly denounced by a majority of those whose votes carried its passage, and not only fraught with disaster to the people, but confessedly stamped with "party perfidy and party dis-honor," as an abandonment of priociples" as are found in alimst ery paragraph of the sourt tariff for revenue only, "and the prin-ciples and pledess upon which they were placed in power. THE WORD AND THE ACTION. How an Indiana Orator Caught and Replaced lils Teeth.

Captain W. R. Myers, who has been placed at the head of the ticket by the democracy of Indiana, and who was given in the convention one of the grandest and most enthusiastic ovations ever accorded to man, is deserving of the honor and trust. Aside from his grand record as secretary of state, says the Indianapolis Sentinel, his personal popularity and sterling integrity, he possesses an indomitable will, which enables him to overcome all obstacles and triumph under adverse circumstances. During the state democratic convention this last characteristic of Captain Myers was brought out most forcibly and displayed to the admiration of the delegates. It was while the captain was on the platform facing 4,000 democrats of the state and delivering his eloquent speech of acceptance.

When Captain Myers was a boy his father kept telling him about cracking walnuts with his teeth. He didn't believe it would with his teeth. He didn't believe it would huirt them, and, as he liked walnuts, he kept mashing them between his molars to save the time necessary to hunt up a stone. He had a curiosity to find out what effect cracking walnuts would really have on the enamel. And now-well, he isn't cracking walnuts. In fact, he doesn't really care for them any more. Time and again during wainuts. In fact, he doesn't really care for them any more. Time and again during the last few decades of years has the dentist planted his feet firmly between the captain's shoulders and then just pulled till he—that is the dentist—was red in the face. First the molars went, then the blouspids, and last came the incisors. Of course a new crop was procured, but they were never so reliable as the old ones-those wainut teeth of boyhood days.

As aforesaid, the captain was delivering his speech of acceptance. He was earnest, and the perspiration was streaming down his face. The new set of teeth felt a little shaky, and he was nervous, but he never let on. His will power came into play.

"Yes, gentlemen," said he, moving his hand across his mouth, "there is certainly in my mind today no cause for dis-may." Here he felt an uneasy sensation which caused him to mutter, "d--- those teeth.

"The republicans blame our party with | the recent depression, and hurl in our teeth (they're loose again) reproaches for bringing about the panic. They say we're going to pleces, actually falling apart—" Here the captain grew so earnest that he should forth the words with all his power, and with the words out came the teeth. They shot out like a catapult, and for a moment it seemed as though the speech must come to an abrupt termination. But he hadn't atterded every game this season for nothing He knew a thing or two. He threw out his hands, made a running catch that would have brought down the grandstand, flagged the teeth, replaced them and continued without a moment's hesitation: "But it's a lie gentlemen. We may split up a little gentemen. We may split up a nittle onco-in awhile, but we know how to get to-gether again." (Applause.) It was so dexterously done that few noticed it. Many men would have been discomposed, but not the captain.

A Well Paid Contractor.

Falloy, the self-called patriot contractor and the Haussmann of the French revolution, obtained the contract to demolish the Bastile and cart away the material, and made a good thing out of it. He built with the stones the bridge over the Seine at the Place de la Concorde, the guard house of the theater on the Boulevard du Temple and the house at the corner of the Boulevard Polssoniere and the Rue St. Fiacre. He employed 1,000 workmen in demolishing the old prison fortress. The blocks of stone he was unable to use as a builder were turned to account

His Calling.

Breslau, a celebrated juggler, being at Canterbury with his troupe, met with such bad success that they were almost starved He repaired to the church wardens and promised to give a night's takings to the poor if the parish would pay for hiring a room, etc. The charitable bait took, the benefit proved a bumper, and next morning the church wardens waited upon the wizard to touch the receipts. "I have already disposed of dem," said Breslau; "de profits were for de poor, I have kept my promise, and given de money to my own people, who are de poorest in dis parish!"

"Sir!" exclaimed the church wardens, "this is a trick." "I know it," replied the conjurer; "I live by my tricks."

Stabbed by Her Stay. The cries of a woman coming from the Universal restaurant on Seventh street near Broadway attracted a crowd last night, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The woman was nicely dressed and was quietly eating when she suddenly gave a wild cry and put her hand over her heart. The cries brought Police Captain Fletcher with the crowd, and the woman said that some one had cut her in the side. The captain, with the assistance of the woman's sister, opened her dress and found that she had laced so tightly that one of the corset steels had broken and the sharp edge had cut her.

PATRIOTISM IN BALTIMORE.

The Bunting that Stirred Enthusiasm on Federal Hill,

They were salling majestically down Chesaptake bay, says the Cleveland Plain-Dealer; they entered the "river," that buoy-marked track that leads into Baltimore harbor; Fort Carroll was passed and the spires of the beautiful home of the oyster stood outlined like a string of Fourth of July fireworks ready for the torch. They were so filled with patriotism that for a long, long time neither spoke. They could only think-and feel

At last his soul burst from his lips; "Isn't it grand?"

"Beautiful!" "Charming!" "Sublime!"

"Little wonder," he continued, "that Francis Scott Key should be inspired amid such surroundings to write a song that could move fleets, and armies, and nations-" "Oh, yes!" she chattered, "the grand glorious, beautiful, brave, patriotic 'Star Spangled Banner."
