BENNETT'S CASE DISMISSED

Complaining Witness and County Attorney Ask for a Nolle All Around.

BOTTOM OUT OF THE L'BEL PROSECUTION

Judge Scott Wipes the Case from the Docket and Pronounces a Touching Funeral Oration-Would Let No One Eise Try the Case.

The last act in the farce comedy, wherein in the name of the state of Nebraska, Mrs. Sophia Bennett, wife of the ex-sheriff. George A. Bennett, presecuted Edward Rosewater, the editor of The Bee, on the charge of an alleged criminal libel, has been performed and the curtain has gone down, there to remain for all time to come, the case having been dismissed and a nolle entered.

During the night Judge Scott, who had declared both publicly and privately that be would try the case if he lived, learned of the action taken by the other five members of the bench, Judges Hopewell, Keysor, Ambrose, Blair and Ferguson, and when he ascended the bench yesterday he was called upon to face an audience that in point of numbers tested the capacity of court room No. 1. It was an audience that was composed largely of lawyers and business men of the city, all there for the sole purpose of learning what Judge Scott would do with the Rosewater case, which was set for trial before him, and which had been taken from his docket by the unanimous order of five judges, having co-ordinate jurisdiction, sitting en banc.

As soon as Judge Scott had seated himmeif he looked out over the vast concourse of people and then proceeded to relieve his mind in the following manner: THEN SCOTT TALKED.

The case of the state against Edward Rosewater has been set for trial this morn-ing and has been reached in its regular order the same as any other case upon the criminal docket. On yesterday he managed to get five judges of this court together to try my conscience as to whether I was fit to try this case. After laboring all of the day they passed, I take it, by a unanimous vote, there sitting in chambers, an order taking the case from my docket and transtaking the case from my docket to try the transcripts, and in the morning the transcripts, and in the alleged to the transcripts, and in the morning the transcripts, a meeting held at the Millard hotel last night. To me this looks like an attempt

Last night as I was lying in my bed I thought of the beauties of nature, the wisdom of God and the immaculate purity of the man who runs The Bee, a man who can't be tried by this court, and I realized that if a man had got a newspaper and he was to be tried in court, the other judges must be convened to select one from their number to try his case, a judge other than the one to whom the case was regularly

"If it has come to this pass, then I advise every man who has committed crime to at once get a newspaper. Before me he stands the same as any other man. HAD CHANGED HIS MIND.

'I have changed my opinion concerning some things. I have learned of the wonder-ful power of a newspaper; I have felt that power, and it has been severely felt by my family simply for the reason that I have dared to administer the law. I contend that when God made man He intended that he should stand erect and perform his duty. I know of no other way to do, and I am satisfied this morning that a man whose conscience is clear is not disturbed when he lies upon his bed and goes to sleep. I want to say that here is no man upon the bench who can say that C. R. Scott prostituted his oath of office to convict anybody they know better.

"Why not this strange and unheard of proceeding in other cases on this docket? Have I not said that I would stop burglary and crime? Why, then, have not some of the men who have committed burglary invoked the aid of the other judges?. I will ou. They have not got a newspaper, not know what fear is, and no man who tries to do right need have any fear of JUSTICE NOT ON TO HER JOB. "How unseemingly do we find the condi-tion of things. One party who is charged with crime and is to be tried invokes the aid of five of the judges and the case is transferred. Yet on the dome of this court house there is a figure of justice holding the scales in her hand, and it will be a wonder if the next wind does not blow her down. My only purpose is to bring to jus-tice every person who has committed crime. To me this looks like a matter of favoritism. and if Rosewater did not run a newspaper and if some people were not afraid of him he would have been tried long ago, yet the goddess of justice swings ner scales from the top of this court house. She ought to be torn down, or else there ought to be written on one end of those scales, 'For every one else, but if Rosewater is to be tried drop down a little.'

"Every man accused of crime is entitled a fair and impartial trial, but if that trial can't be had that figure of justice ought to be taken down, thrown out into the back alley and sold for junk.

"I propose to take care of myself. I always have and I always can. In this spectacle five Judges pass upon my conscience, and for fear that they will not fix it flat enough they held a meeting at the Millard hotel last night. They are good lawyers and better lawyers than am I, but still I may have had some reason for my action.

HIS HONOR OR HIS LIFE. "I have tried to get some outside judge to come in and try this case, but you remember how effectually he was piugged and I could not blame him for not wanting the mud hills turned upon him. Here, now, is the diemma, and against my protest to the transfer, it is a case of five against one. What right had they to pick out the case against Edward Rosewater and send it to room 3 to be tried, the room, I helieve, that is presided over by Judge Ambross? What is presided over by Judge Ambrose? What took place at the Millard hotel last night I do not know, but I must and will, at the hazzard of my life, protect the honor of this

"This case was ravished off my docket, absolutely ravished, because it happened to be Rosewater who was interested and be-water, outside of the court, weighs not a feather's weight in the court.

"What is to be done? Five judges say that I shall not try this case and I have said that I will. Shall I go out on the street and fight it out? No. I will not go out on the street and fight, but here I will have not got a news.

fight for my rights. I have not got a news-paper, but I want the good opinion of good men. One remarkable thing is that one judge told me that this case ought to be dismissed. What does this mean? I never said that this man ought to be convicted. No; never, but I would have as much right to say that he should be convicted as any other judge would have to say that the case should be dismissed before the trial. With me, I never say anything that I can't back

The prosecution has said that this case belongs to the criminal branch of the district court, and now I ask why should the criminal business be scattered among the other judges?"
Having run down, Judge Scott asked, "Mr. County Attorney, what do you want to do?"

GEORGE BENNETT'S LITTLE TALK. Before the attorney could reply George A. Bennett arose to his feet, and, addressing the court, said: "My wife's reputation is at stake in this matter and the whole thing looks like a political scheme. My wife and myself have had enough political mud thrown at us and if this case is to be taken from your honor's docket and transferred to the docket of some other judge for trial we would like to have the county attorney enter County Attorney Kaley said that he had known nothing about the transfer until he found that the case had gone to room No. 3.

"Whose room is that?" asked Judge Scott.

"Whose room is that?" asked Judge Scott.

Replying to the query, Mr. Kaley said that it was the room in which Judge Ambrose presided. Continuing, he said that the case presented a very peculiar aspect and brought over on requisition papers.

that there was liable to be a conflict of authority. This being so, so far as the state Judge Scott again addressed the crowded lobby and said: "I see only one way out of this if the good name of the court is to be preserved. It is better to have this case go out of court than to have other of the judge grabbing dockets, a course that is so unseem ingly out of any rule. The way that this matter has been handled, it is apparent that the presecution has no heart and no desire to become a party to the farce.

DISMISSED THE CASE. "Let the responsibility remain where it belongs. It is a terrible thing when a man who owns a newspaper can defy the courts, but this seems to be the condition of affairs

'Last night after going home I took down an old work on mythology and as I read its pages I pored over the story of the man who hitched five stars to his charlot, got in and, cracking his whip, made the stars trot off into space. I read this again and then taking a glass I looked closely at the picture and there saw the name of Rosewater, the man who was in the vehicle applying the lash with so much vigor."

Turning his attention to the docket, Judge Scott wrote the entry to the effect that the prosecuting witness by her husband appeared in open court and stated that having become tired of having mud thrown, he desired the county attorney to enter a nolle. Then he wrote that the county attorney appeared in open court and requested the entering of a nolle, all of which the court had done, and the case was dismissed from the docket of the criminal section.

A few moments later County Attorney Kaley entered Judge Ambrose's court room, where he made the statement that he wanted to enter a nolle and have the celebrated case dismissed. This order was entered accordingly and the legal battle was at an

HAD REVERSED SCOTT.

Supreme Court Had Agreed to Order the Case Taken from Him.

Tuesday night, as soon as it was learned that Judge Scott had, according to his version of the matter, overruled the deision and findings of Judges Hopewell, Ambrose, Ferguson, Keysor and Blair, Messrs. Simeral, Duffie and Estelle, attorneys for Mr. Rosewater, began preparations for taking

After presenting the certified copies of the ecords and making their arguments, the supreme court entered an order requiring Judge Scott to turn over all of the papers in his pos-session forthwith, and at the same time restraining him from entering any orders, or taking any action in the case, thus abso-lutely upholding the position taken by the five judges Tuesday afternoon when they were sitting en bane.

The mandatory writ was set for a final hearing on November 7, 1894, and the attorneys were instructed to draw the order, cithelps were instructed to draw the order, cit-ing Judge Scott to appear at that time and show cause why he had refused to obey the decision of his five associates. As Messrs. Simeral and Duffie were preparing the order for the judges of the supreme court to sign, the information was telegraphed by Judge Estelle, the attorney who was looking after Estelle, the attorney who was looking after Mr. Rosewater's interests at this end of the line, that County Attorney Kaley had dismissed and nolled the case in the courts of this district, and an order of dismissal was accordingly entered in the supreme court.

Prof. Wiggins, who is something of a stargazer himself, contends that we, as a race, riginally came from Mars, and were projected here by some cataclysm; that the scople of Mars are very intelligent, and have seen trying to signal us for some time past. He reaches this conclusion by means of some very learned theories, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that, instead of coming from nevertheless, that, instead of coming from Mars, people are going to Mars. The Mars in this instance is, however, Prof. Jupiter Mars, the eccentric astronomer, which Joe Ott plays with such success in "The Star Gazer," a farce comedy written for him by Franklyn W. Lee. In "The Star Gazer," Mars is what the late Artemus Ward would have called "an amount," cass," and the part have called "an amoosin' cuss," and the part is just such a one as Ott likes to play, as if fits his peculiarities and gives scope to his originality; but it is by no means the only part in the piece. There is a doctor, who has invented a new and wonderful kind of gas, to breathe which gives one the earth; there is a smooth Italian villain, with a bogue as thick as the blarney stone; there is a wandering Coxeyite, who is too tired to talk and writes his thoughts upon a slate; there is a widow, with a penchant for comets, and the professor, and others, with pretty girls, make up an interesting picture. There is not a dull moment in the piece, and the situations and effects are all new and ludi-crous. It was written for laughing purposes, and it fulfills its mission. It will be at the Fifteenth Street theater for three nights and Saturday matinee, commencing Thursday,

"The Hustler" has long been noted as one of the best presented and entertaining of all farce comedies. This year it is better and brighter than ever, and is played by the largest and strongest company ever seen in it. The principals are J. I. Tierney, the farcical comedian; E. J. Heffernan, the parodist; James P. Smith and James P. Cook, whose acrobatic tramp act was the hit of New York music halfs and roof gardens last summer Harry Watson and Alice Hutchins, the Ger man character comedian and comedianne, and Irene Hernandez, the dancing soubrette. The company includes also Mamie Mayo, Julia Taylor and May V. Warren, three of the prettiest girls on the stage. "The Hustler" will open a three nights engagement at Boyd's on Sunday evening next.

The "low joints," as the local passenger association is called, had Mr. Godfrey before it for trial, and, after hearing the evidence if for trial, and, after hearing the evidence in the case, inspecting the tickets and Mr. Godfrey's prepaid order, which he received from the Santa Fe agent at this point, the association fined the Missouri Pacific man for demoralization of fates. The introduction of the prepaid order was the straw that broke the camel's back.

However, Mr. Godfrey took the matter up with General Passencer Agent Townsend of with General Passenger Agent Townsend of the Missouri Pacific and that gentleman in-formed his city ticket agent not to worry over the matter. The affair rested here for some time, although Secretary Davidson was importunate that the fine be paid, but God-frey stood him off. Now the Western Passenger association comes forward and remits the fine without prejudice, although the resolution states that the remission must not be taken as a precedent. It finds, however, that the local association did per-fectly right in fining Mr. Godfrey, but under the peculiar circumstances of the case be-lieves it better to drop the whole affair. That is the reason Mr. Godfrey has lost his

Mrs. Carrie Agee, who lives at 408 North Phirteenth street, was severely burned last ight at 8 o'clock. She lighted a gasoline stove with a piece of burning paper, and after doing so she threw the paper upon the floor near a bucket of kerosene. The liquid blazed up and set fire to her clothing. She rushed out through the room, setting fire to the furniture, into the street, where a neighbor amothered the flames with a blanket. She was taken to a neighbor's house and Assistant City Physician Towne was called. An examination disclosed that the woman body, but she will recover. One of her sons Isaiah, a boy 6 years old, was burned on the right foot and arm. Both mother and child were taken to the Presbyterian hospital.
