argued orally, and written arguments were also submitted. The hearing is in the case of the State ex rel David F. Witter, ap-pellant, against J. L. Forkner and W. W. Moore. Forkner is a saloon keeper and more owner of the building. The two main points charging unconstitutionality of the law are that the mulet haw confers on a portion of the people of a county the right to make laws, a power limited to the legis-lature, and, second, the power to suspend the legal penalities of another law. There are a number of technical errors charged in the petition of consent under which the saloon is operating. The court took the matter under advisement and a decision is looked for son. a valuable bed of hone stone has been dis-covered. Fifty cars of the valuable material are already in sight, and prominent reolo-gists who have visited the place say that at least seven acres are underlaid with the stone. There are only six places in the United States where hone stone is found. Most of the best quality used in this coun-try comes from Scotland and sells for $2 a pound. New York experts pronounce the stone found here equal to that mined in Asia, which sells in this country for $1.50 a pound. B. B. Bliss, the lows electrician, owns the hand and will develop the bed at once. The people in this section of the state look upon the discovery as something sim-ilar to a gold mine. The complainant was Mrs. W. H. Bowman, who alleged that the corner lot which had a good house on it was only assessed $235, while the adjoining vacant lots were assessed at $225. These assess-ments were all too low in her estimation, as the lots immediately in the rear were offered for sale at $500. After some disussion the corner lot was raised to $275. and the other lots to $250. The James Morton & Sons Hardware company were on deck with a sworn affi-davit in which they protested that their assessment of $3,550 on their stock at 1511 Dodge street was excessive in view of those of other and competing firms. All the parties to the matter were present and were given an opportunity to make a representation of the invoice value of their stocks. The board finally decided to lower the complainant's assessment to $3,000, and to add $120 to that of the Lobeck-Linn company. There was a protest heard against the assessment of the Boston store at $4,000 which, it was claimed, was ridiculously low. Mr. Brandels stated that at the time when the assessment was made their stock was very low on account of the fire and the board left the assessment as it stands.
