SOUTH OMAHA ELECTION TALK, Corporation Whips Were Used for Majors-

Democratic Defection. More interest was taken in the election in South Omaha than in any for years. The voting was quiet, but the plans of the men who had set out to defeat Holcomb were well rehearsed, and the slaves were whipped into line with great success. Men who would rather have gone hungry for a week were intimidated and forced into line. The fight between S. C. Shrigley, Z. P. Medges and Joseph Sipe for assessor was a not one. At midnight Shrigley met a friend to asked: "Well, Sam, how is the battle?" T've lost," replied Shrigley. "I'll bet you 5 you haven't," replied his friend, and Sam took the bet. Yesterday, after Mr. Shrigley learned that he had been elected, he paid that bet with much grace. Mr. Hedges gave him a close race, and Joe Sipe was not far behind.

Mr. A. L. Sutton, the republican nominee for the legislature, received the highest vote of any man in South Omaha. Mr. Sutton is a popular young republican, and was almost the unanimous choice of South Omaha regardless of party.

George L. Dare and Con Hogan both re ceived a complimentary vote here at home. By an oversight the name of J. D. Bennett was not placed on the ticket for constable, and as a result Mr. McGee was elected by a large majority.

publicans are likely to lose Nebraska. This makes a gain of five and a loss of one, a net gain of four, raising the republican total to forty-two. The populists now have three senators. The returns indicate a gain for them in South Carolina and Nebraska. Senators Junes and Stewart of Nevada have of late affiliated with the populists, so that the populist strength may be increased and the republicans decreased by two.

An estimate of the next senate by Chairman Babcock gives the republicans forty-four out of eighty-eight senators. He counts upon Senator Peffer's co-operation to organize.

ALABAMA.

Democrats Elect All the Congressmen but One.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 7.-Later returns from the Ninth congressional district show that Underwood, democrat, is elected by at least 2,000 majority. Returns from the Seventh district, the only one in Alabama where the democrats are not sure of success, are slow, but indicate the election of Howard populist, over Bronson, democrat. The Kolites are in high spirits over the result Their convention, called to meet in Montgom-ery next Monday, will organize a legislature of their own and name a United States sens tor to contest for the seat of John L. Morgan, who will be re-elected by the democratic legislature, on the ground that a majority of the regular legislature was elected by fraud.

show that Holcomb carries the county by about 250, and the rest of the state ticket about the same. The independent candidates for the legislature are elected by between fifty and seventy-five majority. Indications are that John Crawford, independent, is elected to the senate by about eighty majority.

A little man with steel-gray eyes and close cropped beard streaked with white was the center of a group of interested listeners in the Phoenix hotel rotunda, writes a Lexington correspondent of the St. Louis Republic. He was entertaining them with recitals of the deeds of valor of various Kentuckians who shed luster upon the state this county by 151 and the district by 11. before the war. He was Colonel William Duke of Danville. Colonel Duke has, per-Brady, republican, and Scott, populist, are haps, fought more sensational and bl elected representatives, and Norris Brown, republican, is elected county attorney by a duels than any American alive today. His meeting with General Roger Hanson was on of the most notable in the history of the code. They fought with pistels at ten paces. and Hanson was shot through the hips. Colonel Duke in appearance, speech an decoloner buse in appearance, speech an de-portment is one of the best specimens of the old type of Kentucky gentlemen to be found in the state today. When he heard that a representative of the Republic was in the hotel lobby the colonel sent an emissary to the newspaper man with an invitation to come and mest him. This is about what Colonel Duke said when the correspondent was presented:

'Mr Blank, I am damnably pleased to meet you, sir. I hope you are a gentleman, and I am led to believe, from your antecedents and record, that you are, sir. By the way, sir, I beg that you accompany me to the Phoenix bar and have a sip of the real Kentucky stuff with the juice of mint in it. You don't get either good whisky or good mint in the west, sir. I have been out there, and I know whereof I speak."

whereof I speak.
Grasping the lower part of the bottle in the right hand and tipping it over till the neck resied on the index finger of his left hand. Colonel Duke let the whisky trickle out with musical gurgle into the glass, the bottom of a musical gurgle into the glass, the bottom of which was stained with mint juice. The colonel had crushed the juice out himself by pressing hard with his spoon on the leaves the bartender had dropped in the glass. Having done this, he removed the leaves and was ready for the whisky. When the glass was filled about haif with the red liquor that had the lazy sparkle of oil, he slowly stirred the decoction to get the mint juice well mixed with the whisky. All this time he spoke not a word, but kept All this time he spoke not a word, but kept his eye closely riveted to the half-filled glass. After stirring the whisky and mint juice slowly and deliberately for about a minute, he carefully removed the spoon, placed the rim of the glass between his lips, and, closing his eyes and tossing back his head, he drank the mixture with as much enjoyment as if it were the nectar of the geds. A loud smack of the lips and a shake of the head told that the colonel had recovered from his reverles.

Women Live Longer Than Men cently collected by Prof. Humphrey of England, in his work on "Old Age," show that, as usual, in records of longevity the women predominate over the men in spite of the many disadvantages they have to contend with, such as the dangers incidental to child-bearng and diseases associated therewith. He ittributes this to the comparative of woman from many exposures and risks to which man is subject. Temperance in eat-ing and drinking, freedom from anxieties in reference to labor and business, are on the side of the female sex. No woman writer has yet taken up the subject, I believe, which seems odd, as female physicians are now a necessity of modern times. It has been often stated, and it is probably true, that the principal authors on the subject of longevity have been physicians, who, as a rule, do not reach the standard in age of the average man. Galen is said to have lived to his 140th year, but the statement is not credited nowadays. Hippocrates died at 104, which was not doing any better than many day laborers of our times. Rochefoucauld, that wise and observant Frenchman, said that "Few people know how to be old," he, perhaps, thinking himself one of them, though he died at the state ninnelf one of them, though he died at the state ninnelf one of them, though he died at the 133; age of 67. RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 7.—The state judical ticket is so close that it will require the official count to decide. The legislature is in doubt. Democrats hope for it, but make no claims. Populist and republican leaders are very confident. The indications are that the fusion ticket has defeated the democratic congressional candidates in the First, Fourth, Pifth, Secenth, Eighth and Ninth, making the congressional delegation stand three democrats, however, are still claiming the Seventh, Eighth and Ninth districts.
