traversed the sands and penetrated the woods and explored the sources of the ozons. She sometimes encountered Winn, and then the fellowing day would ride in the opposite di-rection, with the result that she surely met him. This chance perturbed her mind as if

"Ah!" There was a concerted gasp from the hortrified youths, which warned Monica how trivial was the cause. "Yours is a singular vocation, Mr. Winn." she said, 'buil I doubt not it's very con-genial.' Yet she felt annoyed because the chorns snickered. "Well, 'asked Cyrll, as she and Winn strolled down the avenue to the club. "Well, what do you think of our princess?" "A nice girl enough," replied Winn con-templatively. "Of course, a rose among cabbages does smell the sweeter. She's a mere girl, after all." "I am one of the cabbages," retorted

"T am one of the cashing of the same." "You're a good fellow, all the same." said Winn, as they entered the club, "and I wish you luck, which means that I'll buy." The groom had come to grief. In cross-ing the bridge his horse's hoof had struck beast lay on its side struggling, but unable to rise; the man was picking himself out "Nonsense! She feels her oats, I suppost. "No, there is no self-consciousness about her; if there were, she would waste away for love like Narcissus. She simply is accus-tomed to nectar and ambrosia instead of to bread and water. She simply has ichor in her veins, where we poor mortals have blood." "And of lukewarm quality. So you are one of the knights of a rueful countenance, my poor Cyril?" "I can't help it, and I wouldn't if I could. "I can't help it, and I wouldn't if I could."

> were many, of which Monica Abercromote was afraid, it was a thunder storm. Surely fate had not been so cruel as to cast her alone in the midst of one! Evidently fate had been exactly that cruel, for far-away mutterings advanced and coalesced into crashes, and through the interlacing boughs shot vivid vibrant flashes of light. The stout little horse caught the terrors of its rider and dashed onward madly, and when Monica at length summoned sufficient courage Monica at length summoned sufficient courage to check it she realized that she had lost her way. Was there no one—no great, grand, splendid one—one who would come te her aid when so distressed? Hardly had her heart uttered the prayer when down the bank from the wood clambered a big, roughly-clad man, and oh, relief unuttera-ble the creature so hurty so uncouth proved ble, the creature so burly, so uncouth, proved to be James Winn. Was it possible that sha could be so overjoyed at his easy, impudent presence, hateful smile, and all! But Winn's manner became solicitous, his expression grew sympathetic as he learned dent— . Cyril Creighton certainly was ardent; his hands, his eyes, his expression, his being glowed with the suble fire. As for his tongue—well, if silence be golden, it had irretriovably adopted a silver standard! . "Oh! but Miss Abercromble," he was say-ing, "you cannot mean it, to leave town just in the height of the season. Why, the un-derpinning will be knocked from everything, and we shall all be a lot of humpty-gumptics."
