to Furnish Her Boarding Rouse Table. side which Yankee methods resemble almost oriental extravagance, is the catering done by a little French boarding house keeper. says the New York Evening Sun. She sup-plies small rooms and two means a day to lodg-rs of modest means, who boast of her table. It is, indeed, quite royally spread, and literally from the kitchen of millionaires. A year ago it occurred to her, as she went to market in the early morning, that the garbage cans sent out from the areaways of fine houses betrayed a lamentable waste of good food. She was visited by a great idea and acted upon it by having interviews with the cooks of several uptown mansions. The result was that for a small consideration these cooks consented to permit her the rive. these cooks consented to permit her the privilege of making what selections she wished from the plates and dishes returned to the kitchen and from the mistresses' table, after the cooks had made certain reservations. Here was a wealth of material beyond the dreams of any boarding house gourmand. The little French woman rarely goes to the regular market, but once a day makes her rounds to the kitchens. She carries a bas-ket lined with zinc and divided into compartments, and a fork. Her selections from the plates and dishes are made with the utmost discretion, and in her own kitchen every scrap is turned to the most tempting and wonderful account. Her expenses have been greatly reduced, and her boarders look forward to her meals with great anticipation.

the hero of "Hold the Fort." A large variety of miscellany, poems and illustrations combine to make an exceedingly entertaining number. Johnson Brigham, Des Moines, Ia, "Day After Day" and "Venice, Fair Vencs" are among the new popular sheet music recently issued by White-Smith Publishing Company Chicago.

The strongest short story that Mr. Wilds man has so far contributed to the Overland is another Malayan sketch. "In the Burst of the Southwest Monsoon," appearing in the November number. In Almarin B. Paul's exhaustive record of the doings of "The Vigilance Committee of '56," he deals with the death and funeral of James King of Wm., the hanging of Casey and Cors, and the stabbing of Hopkins. The illustrations are all reproductions of old newspaper cuts of the day. "Fishing at Drake's Bay" is the narration of how the San Francisco market is supplied with fish by means of nets dragged by steam tugs. editorial department (The Progress of the World) has some suggestive paragraphs bearing on the present attempts at "municipal housecleaning" in the great cities of New York, Chicago and San Francisco, and takes the occasion to emphasize certain lessons to be learned from European municipal experience. In speaking of Glasgow's system of street cars, owned and operated by the municipality, the editor points out that this responsibility was not undertaken by the city until the municipal government had been tested with many large enterprises which it had shown its fitness to control and operate successfully; it is now managing its street car service as successfully as the best of our American cities manage their fire departments. The surprising growth of technical and trade journalism in recent years is brought toreibly to mind by the fact that the publishers of The Engineering Magazine have just inaugurated a monthly "Review of the Industrial Press," which is designed to do for tephylical literature that when the Parley for technical literature just what the Review of Reviews does for the political and literary magazines. The new departure occupies ninery closely printed pages of the November number of the magazine, and for many it will hold a revelation as to the importance which industrial journalism has already assumed. The authors make no pretense in the way of advancing new ideas, but have collaborated and arranged facts to direct attention to their significance and to their essential rela-tion to each other. In this respect it is rather a text book in a new field anticipat-ing the growth of a social science. The at-tempt here to prescribe limitations or to distate the essential scope of the science while in its present vague state of development is a very questionable position to assume, particularly in insisting on minute particulars and coupling biology and chemistry as pre-

BACK COUNTRY POEMS—By Sam Walter Foss. A new edition. Cloth, illustrated, $1.50. Lee & Shepard, Boston. From N.

B. Falconer, Omaha.
"Back Country Poems" has a hearty, whole-couled ring in it that is all too rare in these days when to be funny usually means to be dippant, and when men are afraid to be earn-est for fear of being thought prosy. Almost every stanza written by Mr. Foss has a comi-cal twist in it somewhere, and his poems bound in humor-real humor-the kind that will force even a dyspeptic to laugh and which yet never leaves a sting behind. He has a peculiar knack of combining healthy He always gives a philosophical turn to his tun, and a funny twist to his philosophy, in a way that is reculiarly his own and which

The book is written in an attractive and ucid style, and whatever may be one's opinion as to the system advocated, it merits regard as an able and full exposition of the gard as an able and full exposition of the views concerning the true nature of health and disease advocated by the author. It explains the principles of mental healing as founded upon the fundamental premise that man, by the development of his intelligence, secures a "marvellous control over matter." man, by the development of his intelligence, accures a "marvellous control over material by the power of his mentality, and proves it by curing his physical ailments and preserving bodily health solely by the skillful exercise of mind." Vitality and strength are shown to be the instantaneous results of the process of mental healing, when man "dis-
