day morning. Geber was on a spree Sunday. He and his companions became quite drunk to face the man he had accused. The peti-tion and the depositions of Mrs. Campbell by night. Geber could scarcely stand. His friends carried him into the barn and left related a number of escapades and long car-riage drives, to say nothing of a home in Council Bluffs, a plano and a gold watch which, it was claimed, Mr. Johnson had bought and presented to her. When the him Coroner Maul was notified and instructed Brewer & Sloan to take charge of the body. Geber had a wealthy brother in Colfax, though Mr. Johnson still has the notes as great satisfaction. evidence of the existence of the same. The watch story was also disproved, it being esthat the watch was pur-by the members of Camptablished chased bell's Iowa church and that the only connection that Johnson had with the mat-ter was to take the money and make the purchase during one of his trips to this city. After having purchased the watch with the After having purchased the watch with the money to subscribed Mr. Johnson turned the same over to the preacher, who in turn gave it to his wife. The piano story was even thinner than the one concerning the watch. The instrument was bought by the preacher of a firm in Council Bluffs and Mr. Johnson was merely called in to give his opinion with reference to the value. During the whole of the trial there was not a line of testimony to indicate that Mr. Johnson had ever been upon intimate terms with the woman, even she not daring to come into court and tesshe not daring to come into court and tes-tify to the allegations made in the depositions, notwithstanding the fact that she was in Lincoln during the whole of the trial. There was no evidence tending to show that There was no evidence tending to show that Mr. Johnson and Mrs. Campbell had ever taken the moonlight rides which it was claimed they had enjoyed together. Mr. Johnson has no hesitancy in denouncing the prosecution as a blackmail, and in stating this he has detailed the manner in which he was induced to settle prior to the filing of the pet'tion. When the attempt to settle failed he was induced to have a church trial the pet'tion. When the attempt to settle failed he was induced to have a church trial that the matter might be kept quiet. This proposition he rejected, saying that he had committed no crime and was willing to trust his intrests and rights to a court and jury. Even after this it was shown that Mr. John-son was hounded, and that some of those who were prosecuting him tried to induce him to go to Lincoln in order to bring on a settlement outside of the courts, that the whole affair could be kept quiet. During the trial there were no witnesses

During the trial there were no witnesses who testified to indiscreet acts upon the part of Mr. Johnson, every one, even the wit-nesses for the prosecution, declaring that he was a man of irreproachable character.

Concerning Judge Eller.

Ex-County Judge Eller is going to have a lawsuit on his hands in a very short time. Ever since Eller retired from the office his successor has been endeavoring to get a settlement with him without success. Es-tates which had been closed up by Eller are still short on cash, which he was supposed to have turned over to Judge Baxter, but which he failed to do. Judge Baxter has reported the matter to the county commis-sioners, showing that Eller owes in the aggregate at least $6,000 to heirs in estates that were settled during his administration Dailey in that were settled during his administration, or that of his predecessor, Judge Shields. In several instances money which was turned over to Eller by Shields was not paid to the heirs by Eller nor returned by him to his succesor, Judge Baxter. Judge Baxter has made several reports on the matter to the commissioners, and they have referred the cases to the county at-torney. That official has not seemed disposed to do much in the case, but has recommended that the matter be left to litigation between Eller and the representatives of the interested estates. This would necessitate the starting of more than a score of suits, and would result in almost endless litigation. Some of the commissioners have about decided to employ special counsel to commence action against Eller, in the name of the county, covering all estates involved.

May too Out of Court.

The case of Halss vs the City of Omaha was called in Judge Keysor's court this morning and continued by consent. This morning and continued by consent. This is an action growing out of the proposed change of the grade on West Douglas street. Some of the property owners are not satis-fied with the proposed change and have en-folmed the city from carrying out the con-tract for the work. Assistant City Attor-ney Cornish informed the court that he thought the property owners would agree upon another change of grade and that the case in question would be dismissed.
