In obedience to telegrams sent to the latter port, permission to search the ship was obtained from the French consul, and the dising himself John Brown, an acknowledged alias, claiming to be an American, was bound for China under contract with the authorities of that empire to "destroy the Japanese navy within eight weeks from the time of his arrival." He professes to have discovered an explosive of tramendous power, which he declared he had first offered to Japan, but as his proposal was contemptuously refused he turned to the other belligerent and sought employment from the Chinese legation at Washington. Receiving sufficient encouragement for his purposes, he started at once for the east, accompanied by an American assistant registered as George Howie, and a Chinese interpreter furnished him by the legation. How the Japanese were warned of this transaction has not yet been discovered, but they determined at all hazards to prevent further progress of the party. That they endeavored to do this with careful regard to the requirements of international law imployment from the Chinese legation at gard to the requirements of international law is doubted by nobody, but whether they have succeeded in this particular is a question warmly discussed by foreign residents. The Japaneses army in Manchuria con tinues its march of invasion, with scarcely show of opposition. Chiu-Lien having been taken on October 26, the advance was resumed on the following day toward Hwong-Hwong, about thirty-five miles distant, on the road to Moukden. This city was entered October 31, and, as usual, without the necessity of heavy fighting, the garrison fleeing in disorder, shaping their course for Moukden. Since the opening of the Manchuria campaign General Yamagata has taken fifty-five field cannon, with 20,000 rounds of ammunition and 1,500 rifles, with 2,500,000 rounds. Genera Yamagata has lost no time in announcing to the inhabitants of the newly occupied territory that they have nothing to fear from Japanese if they pursue their occupa tions peacefully and abstain from interfer ence with the movements of soldiers. COLOGNE. Nov. 20.—The trial of Herr Kleser, editor of the West German Allegmine Zeitung, on the charge of libeling Marschall von Bleberstein, imperial secretary of state for foreign affairs, by asserting that the latter wrote an article in the Kladderatch reflecting upon certain government officials, including Baron Kiderlen-Waechter, at that time chief of the press department of the foreign office, and Herr von Holstein, also an official of the foreign office, opened today. Von Kiderlen-Waechter, it will be remembered, fought a duel in this connection with Dr. Polstoff, editor of the Kladderatch, and thereby ruined editor of the Kladderatch, and thereby ruined his political prospects just about as he war being appointed minister to Hamburg. The Kladderatch early last year was engaged in publishing a series of attacks upon the for-eign office, and this led to resentment upon the part of a certain military clique, who prompted Baron von Kiderlen-Waechter to challenge the editor of the paper. Among the things which the Kladderatch attempted to prove was that Von Klderlen-Waechter and Von Holstein really nurtured the ilifeeling between Prince Bismarck and Em-peror William.
