The building was valued at about $1,500. In it, so it is claimed, was about $700 worth of new carpet, which was totally destroyed. The fire was undoubtedly the work of incendiaries. Moore claims to have found back of the building a beer bottle partly filled with coal For some reason or other the alarm in to the fire department did not con straight, and before the uncertainty as to iere the fire was located had been cleared away the building was entirely in ashes.

D. KEAT ENQUIRES FOR POINTERS

One Vote and is Anxious to Have a Recount in Order to Have Another Chance.

J. D. Keat, who ran for the office of county attorney of Shelby county on the republican ticket in the last election, was in the city vesterday looking for pointers on the subject of election contests. Pottawattamie county has been blessed with a num ber of these luxuries lately, and he accordingly had no difficulty in getting all the pointers he wanted. The election was very close in Shelby county, and at first it was thought that the republicans had carried everything, in spite of the fact of the county being usually democratic by a large majority. But it was found that a mistake been made in adding up the columns, and the democrats had carried the day with majorities ranging from one to five or six. Mr Keat happens to be one of those favored with a minority of one, and he is therefore going to make a contest. He stated that he had learned of one voter who took out naturalization papers here without having shown his first papers. In making appli-cation for his second papers he said he had lost his first papers, and that fact was enforsed on the second papers as they were issued by the judge. Keat claims the records in Shelby county show that he took out his first papers in Shelby county just one year ago. As he voted the democratic ticket something interesting is looked for as a sequel. All the majorities were so small that the contest is likely to be pushed with a good deal of energy.

that a new ordinance fixing the harges of hack drivers at $1.50 for the first passenger and 50 cents for additional passengers to the School for the Deaf is being considered, the city officials are beginning to wonder whether it will be worth as much as the paper it is written on when it comes to trying to enforce it. There is no question as to the right of the city council to pass a law regulating charges within the city limits, but no law has as yet been found that would authorize it to exercise jurisdiction over the county outside. Nor do the statutes of Iowa authorize even the county supervisors to pass laws regulating back drivers in the county, so that the hope expressed Avenue G, near Twenty-ninth street, which council that perhaps the law might be put we will sell at a bargain if taken at once. into operation with the co-operation of the Bay window, good cellar, water in yard, large supervisors, seems to be without foundation. Abused by Her Stepchildren. Sarah J. Patten filed a petition in the office of the clerk of the district court yesterday asking for a divorce from Charles W. Patten, whose wife she has been for the past five years. They were married in Harrison ounty and moved to Keg Creek township this county, where they have been living ever since. Unfortunately, Patten had three boys by a former wife, and they, so the petitioner avers, were the cause of all the domestic trouble. They were of a mean disposition, and, encouraged by their father, they would strike her at their own sweet will and with whatever weapon happened to be handlest when the inspiration seized them. And when she objected to this sort of treatment they would circulate reports through the neighborhood derogatory to her character. She had heart disease, so that her domestic life was somewhat painful on the whole. Patten has property valued at about $1,603, and she asks the court to set aside $1,500 for her as alimony, in order that she and their child may not be without means of support. On her petition a writ of attachment was issued for the property in order that her husband not dispose of it until her case has been decided.

VANDERBILT AND NYE, They Are Farming in North Carolina After

Their Own Fashion.

"The people of the northwest ought to be very much interested in a project that young George Vanderbilt is making in my country," said Dr. A. M. Ballard of Asheville, N. C., to a reporter of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press. "Mr. Vanderbilt is going to do some experimenting on a very large scale in the cultivation and conservation of forests, and your people ought to be more in-Postponed Their Journey.

Bloomington Wood, a 17-year-old lad, and tract of country—upwards of half a million acres—and is going to devote the whole of it to the cultivation of forests and farms. His lands are generally wild and mountainous, and as they present every variety of allitude and will be cultivated according to philanthropy in view, and his plans, so far as they have developed, show that he ad-knowledges what his ancestor would not acknowledge—that the public will not acknowledge—that the public will not be danned. He therefore proposes to do what no can for the same public.

"His first step was the acquisition of this tract of land, and the second was the building of a railroad from Asheville to a place he calls Biltmore, about five miles south. Near this town of Bitmore he is building a most magnificent palace, and is employing about 700 workmen, whom he treats with every consideration, and whom he proposes shall form the nucleus of the population of the model city of Bilimore. This town is being built to represent a Swiss village, and t will cost an immense amount of money t carry out what appears to be the projector's plan for filling gorges and cutting away hills When his plans are complete he proposes to use a number of the chalets for the benefit of indigent New Yorkers who are affected with bronchial troubles and who haven't the means to secure treatment under proper conditions. The rest of the inhabitants will find a livelihood in carrying out Mr. Vander-bilt's plans for the planting of forests and the cultivation of experimental farms.

"The town will probably have some of the better features of Pullman, but will differ from it materially. In fact, the latter was founded and is run to make money for its founder, while the town of Biltmore to furnish its projector with means of getting rid of some of his wealth in a mannt that will best serve the interests of humanity I wonder that the project has not yet been exploited in the papers, but Mr. Van-derbilt is very much opposed to notoriety and is yet a very young man and he knows it, so that he has rather tried to keep his object hidden until such time as it is fully developed. His mother is interested in the project with him, and has already built at Asheville a building devoted to the improvement of the colored youth of the city. It is a sort of training school, and has some of the features of the polytechnic schools. It is maintained entirely by Mrs. Vanderbilt and George.

"Bill Nye is Mr. Vanderbilt's nearest "Bill Nye is Mr. Vanderbil's nearest neighbor. And speaking of him reminds me that he has been gaining fame on false pretenses. He doesn't live at Asheville, but on a farm about ten miles south in the mountains. He calls the place Buckshoal, and the man he bought it from goes down on his knees every night and thanks God that the sense of humor that is in the American people is so keen that it furnished Mr. Nye with the price to buy a farm if he wanted to. Nobody on earth farm if he wanted to. Nobody or but a man with Bill Nye's sense ridiculous would ever have bought Buck shoal. It's the funniest thing in the way of a farm ever imagined. But Nye has buil a nice house and put a whole lot of money into pulverizing rocks to make soil, and per haps he will have a farm there yet.

HAS A JAW MADE OF GOLD

Wonderful Surgical Operation Performed on a New York Physician.

Next to the pleasure of being known as silver-tongued orator comes that of having a gold jaw. Of that unusual possession a prominent physician of New York City boasts; yet according to the Herald he experiences no different feeling with it, so exactly is it adjusted, than any one else does with a commonplace, everyday jaw. Some time previous to its acquisition he suffered from a throat trouble, such as General Grant had, called epithelioma. Surgeons treated it by heroic measures. To reach the spot where the malignant growth lay, under the tongue and near the thorax, necessitated an operation wherein the lower jaw was entirely cut in two and a portion of it removed and important muscles were severed. Then the two parts of the lower jaw were laid back to allow the surgeon to work under the roots of the tongue. A peculiarity of the case at this juncture lay in the fact-that the muscles on each side of the mouth being independent of one another, the severed parts of the lower jaw could not work in unison. The masseter muscle, attached to the smaller remaining portion of the jaw, contracted in the process of healing, and the doctor, who had been a fine looking man before the operation, now went about with a misshapen face.

The masseter is one of the strongest muscles in the system, being the only one that does not act as a lover, but having a straight pull. Notice, in illustration of its power, how a boy who wishes to crack a nut puts it between the molars, and then pulls the masseter to crush ahead, or the playful puppy, who knows by instinct where his best grip is, struggling with a bone.

A dental surgeon now came to the rescue. It took a knowledge of the power of ma-chinery, an inventive faculty and the skill of a sculptor, in addition to the dentist's regular acumen. A Jackscrew with a ball and socket joint—exactly such as would be I to raise a locomotive, en miniature—had to be resorted and the jaw was jacked open, re-quiring a strain of several days, to compel the powerful masseter muscles to relax. This accomplished, a wedge was put in to keep that part of the mouth apart; then the jack-screw was used to force the larger segment of the severed jaw back to its original cir-cle, where it was held by a splint so devised as to be removable, till it had regained its normal condition, whereupon a gold law and teeth were modeled to fill the space and also bind the two sections of the jaw together. By the aid of the surgeon's knife the disease had been entirely removed, and, followed up by this remarkable feat of dentistry, the articulation and occlusion restored and mastication rendered as complete as before the operation. Previous to the dental work his food was pushed through the orifice between the upper and lower jaws. Another point of interest lies in the announcement that Gas cooking stoves for rent and for sale at and it is hoped in the course of a year or so to find the jaw working independent of the
