Denies that He Murdered Maud Rubel or Ever Knew the Girl.

DR. BROWN GAVE HIM HER JEWELRY

Says that His Alleged Confessions Were Wrung Out of Him-His Treatment by the Police-Name Forged to a Statement.

Sam Payne told the jury that is trying his case in the criminal court that he did not murder Maud Rubel; that he did not know her; had never seen her except after ahe had been killed; that the confessions which he was alleged to have made to the police were not made by him, and that his signature to the confession offered in court signature. The prisoner told his story was a forestry. The prisoner told his story know her; had never seen her except after was a forgery. The prisoner told his story in a connected manner, with perfect self-seat. He was afraid that some one might see the prisoner and take a shot at him through the car window. He did not want Sam to be shot and did not care about being terrific overstock of real fine clothing, such Sam to be shot and did not care about being shot himself, and so he took the precaution. Andrew Petersen, a tinner, testified that on Sunday afternoon, the day of the supposed murder, he had seen a white man give a colored man a bundle at the McHugh building. The white man was a middle-aged gentleman, dressed like a professional man. Ed Knott, the flag man at the Tenth street crossing, under the viaduct, was called. He swore that on Sunday night or Monday morning a coupe drove down Tenth street and past his place. The vehicle was driven up to the south entrance of the McHugh building and remained there for shout ten minutes, and was then driven east on Leavenworth street. He noticed the outlit, as it was very unusual for a carriage or any other kind of a vehicle to be found on that part of kind of a vehicle to be found on that part of the street, as there was no way to get to the depot under the viaduct and nothing but freight and garbage wagons were usually seen in that part of the territory under his

SAM TELLS HIS STORY.

Then the defendant's attorneys called Sam Payne to the witness stand, and there was a craning of necks and a movement for good positions from which the testimony of the accused could be heard. Sam took the oath and told of his life in Omaha and of the places where he had worked. When he was asked why he had left Omaha on the morning of June 2 the state objected, and some discussion followed as to what the witness would be allowed to state on the stand. Judge Scott finally took the matter in his own hands and stated with some asperity that the accused should be allowed to tell his story in his own way without any interruptions from either the state or the defendant's attorneys, and Payne proceeded He said that he was working at the Drexel hotel on the night of June I, when a reporter called on him and asked him if he knew Maud Rubel. He replied that he did not. The reporter then asked if he knew Dr. Brown, and he said he did not. The reporter then said that the police were after him for the murder of the girl, and were going to get him. Payne then went on with his work until 5 o'clock the next morning, when he left the hotel and walked down the prin cipal streets to the depot at Tenth street, took the railroad track to Gibson, caught a freight and then went to Creston, where he commenced work the next day on a dining car, running between Creston and Platts-

Payne opened the bundle and found the clothing, rings and slippers. He went home and had breakfast and then went to church with his mother. He then went to Sugar Lump Clark's place and gave her the clothing and told her it had been given to him by an actress at the hotel. Lump said the clothing was good. BULLDOZED BY MOSTYN.

Returning to the time of his arrest Payne said that he was taken to Mostyn's office, and Mostyn said: "Weil, Sam, I have been working up th's case for two or three weeks and I know you killed Maud Rubel." Payne declared he had done nothing of the kind. "He wrote a statement," said Payne, "and told me to sign it. I signed it, and then he read it to me. I told him it was not true. I was locked up again, and then Chief Seavey came down to the jail and said to Mostyn, 'Take this d—d nigger down to that building and tee what you can find or learn.' He immediately pointed out Dr. Brown, After that Mostyn went to Payne and asked him to say to Mr. Day that he did not know Dr. Brown, and had never seen him. He said he had asked for his mother, had asked to see Sheriff Drexel and had asked for an attorney, but that all his requests had been denied. He swore that the story he for an attorney, but that all his requests had been denied. He swore that the story he told the newspaper reporters had been fixed up for him by Captain Mostyn, and that he did not like to tell the reporters that he had been intimate with the girl, but the captain told him he must make the statement. He told him he must make the statement. He swere that during one of the conversations with Mostyn the captain had taken a revolver from his desk and laid it under the prisoner's nose. He was hadly scared, and told the story fixed up for him by the police. He plead guilty in Judge Berka's court because Captain Mostyn had told him to do so, and had stood at his elbow when he was arraigned to plead. He had sent a letter from Lincoln to Mr. Day, but had not received any attenon. He had talked with Kaley at Lincoln. "Did not Mr. Kaley come down there and

Thomas Duffey Found to Have Been Working a Charity Ball Hoax.

CELTIC-AMERICAN LEAGUE A COVER

Indications that Omaha People Have Been Bilked Out of Two Hundred Dollars -Candidates Plucked Easily and with Good Profit.

Thomas P. Duffey was arrested Monday night for being very drunk. On searching him. however, things were found in his possession that may warrant placing the more serious charge of fraud against his name. He had a batch of tickets which purported to be admission tickets to a ball that was to have been held on November 24 at Washington hall. Upon investigation it was discovered possession and many evidences of sincerity.

His testimony created something of a sensation in court.

When the case was called yesterday Sheriff Drexel was placed upon the stand by the defense of the stand belonger of the stand by the defense of the stand belonger of the stand by the defense of the stand belonger of the standard of that no such ball had taken place, nor had list for the relief of the inhabitants of Ireland. If he has collected all that has been subscribed he has obtained a neat sun of money. One subscription was $15, and nearly 100 parties had purchased from one to five tickets. The ball was supposed to have been given by the Celtic-American league.

A thorough investigation by The Be-proves conclusively that there is no such or ganization in Omaha. Nearly all of the prominent Irishmen in the city were called upon and shown one of the tickets. Not one of them knew of the existence of such an organization. The Morning Bee of August 11 ntained a short notice to the effect that the Celtic-American league held a meeting the evening previous and considered reports from Lincoln, Grand Island, Beatrice, and several other towns. This communication was signed by M. F. Carroll as secretary, and was sent notice. These clippings from the newspapers were pasted to the head of a subscription list and Duffey started out on the trail of

In order to throw purchasers of tickets off their guard, should they make any inquiries, a man giving the name of James Ryan called on James Larson, the manager of Washington hall, and engaged the hall for a ball, to be given by the Celtic-American league on the evening of September 24. Before this date arrived the same man called on Mr. Larson and stated that for certain reasons the ball would have to be postponed until October 25. The books of the manager show an entry to that effect, but no ball was given. Not a person appeared, and after keeping the lights burning for an hour the hall was darkened. No advance money was paid by "Ryan." It now develops that Ryan and Duffey are one and the same person. Election was coming on, and Duffey saw a chance to eatch the candidates. So he started again with his subscription list, headed as before with clippings from the papers. Every candidate in the city was visited, and nearly every one purchased two tickets. Many persons well known for their charity also purchased tickets. Duffey is supposed to have collected about $200-possibly Council Bluffs was also worked to some ex-
