The ladies of St. Francis Xavier's Catholic church gave a social last evening for the benefit of the poor. A program of recitations and musical selections was presented and enjoyed by a good-sized audience.

Amy Holt, a young lady who was attending a dance at the Woodmen's in the Merriam block Thursday night, was suddenly attacked with hysteria and had to be removed. She was taken to a hospital for treatment.

Victor Peatelin, who has been making bold bluffs lately that no policeman in Council Bluffs was smart enough to get him, turned up at the city jail yesterday with the charge of being drunk. He will be held against him. He is still behind the bars.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Meyers entertained a number of their friends last evening at their Broadway residence. Among the guests were Mrs. and Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. and Mrs. George S. Davis, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Gray, Miss Little Armour and Dr. F. T. Seyler.

The praise and thanksgiving service by the Epworth Sunday school was well rendered before a large and appreciative audience. The pastor was greatly encouraged by the words of praise and thanksgiving, as well as the generous thank offering of the congregation.

The DeLong Industrial is increasing in interest with each passing day. Before long will have to abandon the present temporary quarters at 161 Broadway and secure a larger place. Mr. DeLong always invites visitors. Those who visit the factory this afternoon at 2:30 will feel that the time is well spent.

The students at the Council Bluffs Medical college enjoyed Thanksgiving in the way of a social gathering. The supply of colossal proportions and following it up with speeches, songs and other amusements. The faculty were not exempt, but some of them dropped in nevertheless to enjoy the entertainment provided as much as any of the younger men.

Dr. W. L. Treynor is suffering from the effects of a bad fall. Late Thursday evening he was walking on some grass that was wet and slippery. He fell, and in trying to save himself, struck his hand on the ground with the force of a mallet. The bone in the hand is broken. He will be entirely disabled for some time to come, and as his right is the afflicted member, he suffers severely.

St. Andrew's society had its annual celebration of St. Andrew's day last evening at the Knights of Pythias hall in the Merriam block. Like all the entertainments given by this society, the formal was thoroughly enjoyed by the winds and everybody tried to have a good time, with the result that everybody succeeded. An elegant supper was followed by dancing, there being a program of eighteen numbers, to orchestral music.

Miss Lottie Armour, who has made her home for some time with M. P. Rohrer on Vine street, is to be married at the Paxton hotel in Omaha this afternoon to Mr. James Ward, a traveling man from Sioux City. Miss Armour is the daughter of the late Phil Armour, who, perhaps, was as wide and favorably known as any man who ever lived in Council Bluffs. She has a host of friends who will extend congratulations and best wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bierwirth gave a dinner party Thursday at which were present: Mr. and Mrs. Bierwirth, Mr. and Mrs. Clara Swickard of Omaha, Mr. and Mrs. Urmyer, Carl and Harry Urmyer, P. J. Wolf, Mrs. Boylen and Mrs. Grace D'Urre. The evening was high and the dancing was in full swing. The menu was a la mode, and the like. Mrs. Swickard taking first prize and Mr. Wolf second. Mrs. Urmyer and Mr. Wolf and Tom and Jerry left in a very graceful manner.

John Coyle was tried before Justice Field yesterday on the charge of assaulting and battering Charles Goldapp and found guilty after a very few minutes' deliberation on the part of the jury. The attorneys for the defense formally withdrew from the proceedings as they were not interested in the case, growing out of the alleged drinking of whisky by some of the jury at the expense of the defendant.

District Court News.

The trial of the case of Anna Swaney against Guanelle & Mitchell was resumed yesterday morning in the district court. C. R. Mitchell, one of the defendants, was put upon the stand, and swore that he had not been warned of the charges against the bank, whose caving in caused Swaney's death, as some of the witnesses for the plaintiff had testified. The case was given to the jury about 3:30 o'clock yesterday.

The $2,000 damage suit of Peter C. Miller against F. R. Beck & Co. for the wrongful suing of a writ of attachment, occupied the latter portion of the day, and will probably require most of today to finish it.

Dora Hesley has commenced a suit against Fred Hesley on account of the latter's failure to pay the nation tax required by the metier law. She leased the property in question in the town of Minden last February, but instead of keeping the liquor tax paid up to date, she allowed it to accumulate. She wants him removed from the premises.

J. G. Huber sued out a writ of injunction to restrain John and James Huber, 600 bushels of corn which he raised on the farm he leased from Huber. Two notes, aggregating $450 were given, covering the amount of the tax. The plaintiff claims that the defendant has sold a part of the farm product, and will sell the rest unless prevented by the court.

Encourage Them.

The Infirmary Philharmonic and Dramatic club, one of the best amateur organizations in the west, will hold their annual banquet on Thursday, December 6, in a neat new English drama, entitled, "Placer Gold." This will be one of the best efforts of the club, and is undoubtedly their best. The "standing room only" sign. It is given for the benefit of St. Bernard's hospital, and the young people should be encouraged for the purpose of making the play a worthy object. Fill the house and you will never regret having spent 50 cents for so good an entertainment and so worthy a cause.

A Square Too.

And a square deal too together by Mrs. M. and Mrs. J. A. Jones. The new square toe shoes delight the ladies.

Washerwomen use Domestic soap.

Pupils Didn't Appreciate It.

There was supposed to be school in all the schools of the city yesterday, but there is considerable room for doubt as to whether the youngsters derived much benefit from their wrestling with cube root and partial differential equations. The time in a good many years that they had not been allowed to spend the day after Thanksgiving in recuperating. The school board decided that there was no use in putting the children to no teaching on that day, nor in shutting up shop and depriving the children of the pleasure of a day's vacation. The arrangement did not meet with the approbation of either teachers or pupils. Several of the teachers told their pupils that they would not be marked down if they did not attend, although they would be perfectly welcome if they chose to come. It is needless to say that attendance was not very large in those rooms, but the teachers went through the motions and drew their pay notwithstanding. In other rooms a good many of the children assumed the responsibility themselves of staying away, so that the attendance was very small throughout. It is evident that there was no use in putting the children to the point of having school on the day after Thanksgiving.

Hughes was Young Remembered.

Oscar Hughes, a young teamster, has not been seen about Council Bluffs for the past twelve months, but he was seen yesterday, and now he is enjoying a palatial apartment in the city jail, while the book says he works in a livery. A year ago an old man named James Middleton left his trunk at the house of Hughes' stepfather on Avenue C, not having any other place to keep it. One night young Hughes went through it, picked out a watch, two chains, revolver, and ring that he thought suited his particular style of being a thief. A warrant was sworn out for his arrest, but it was not served until yesterday. Hughes admitted taking the stuff, but he is unable to throw any light upon the subject of its present whereabouts.

FEMINE GOSPEL.

While it is considered very vulgar to bleach one's hair, or dye it conspicuously yellow, there is a certain shade of reddish-brown which is considered by the most fastidious of the pros and cons of which they discuss with the utmost frankness. Some of the experiences that were told were very funny. One lady, through a dreadful mistake, had been found that she had dyed her hair a bright purple, and the only consolation she received from her husband was "serve you right for doing such an idiotic thing."

As she was arranging her locks one day she caught a dress maker who was doing a woman-fashion, in her mouth while putting up her back hair. She was horrified to find that her entire upper lip was covered with a deep brown stain, and she was obliged to wear a youth's moustache, a stain which she tried in vain to eradicate, and which finally had to be left until time wore off the obstinate disfigurement.

"It is customary to say that nature cannot err, and that she understands her coloring arrangements so well that we are often to prove upon her combinations," remarked a lively dame belonging to the smartest set at a fashionable luncheon the other day. The question of how much is legitimate in the way of altering existing personal conditions was under discussion. "This is all nonsense," in his opinion, remarked another. "It is one of those old, cut-and-dried, first-class things that are relegated to the past. Why, if she is infallible, should she not have given me Mrs. Cox's hair, a dark wavy hair, which is so variable, looks better in a red or yellow wig, and a red-haired beauty is quite ravissante in a black one. I don't in the least mind saying that I have had a better hair than yours, and I think I have finally succeeded in concluding with complacency."

It is becoming something of a question as to what the room here in the city is called. The really smart woman hasn't a "parlor" in her house; she has a "drawing room" or "reception room," a parlor pure and simple. In her house, on occasion, though she prefers to call them her parlors, and she has a "drawing room" or "reception room," a parlor pure and simple. In her house, on occasion, though she prefers to call them her parlors, and she has a "drawing room" or "reception room," a parlor pure and simple.

A woman traveling in Japan a year ago spent a night at an isolated little inn in the mountains. When she reached the inn she placed the landlord, or master of the house, for the place hardly seemed an accredited host, showed some reluctance to accommodate the travelers. "But you are a foreigner," he said, "and I have heard that you are a very good person. When the condition was stated it created consternation, and a request that he should allow him the privilege of assisting at the dinner of her morning toilet which had to do with the putting on of her corset. The man had, however, had never before encountered a foreign woman, and felt that the opportunity of his life had come to appease an inordinate curiosity in the matter. He was not a native of the American woman consented to pay this very odd price for the housing of herself and friends and the next morning the inspection was duly permitted. The Japanese host was the most deferential, but also most minute in the examination, walking around her several times, with many deprecating smiles, finally approaching gingerly and touching the bodice of bone and drilling. She was evidently greatly amazed and decidedly shocked. Her own corset was not so stiff, and after his guest had finished her toilet and appeared in the breakfast room, his eyes followed her as she went to the press of fascinated interest, which was varied from time to time by a shake of the head and a solemn look of deprecation, as if he should say, "It is true, indeed, but oh, how dreadful!"

Shot Himself Twice and Slashed His Wrist. LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30.—J. K. Koch, a young German recently arrived from St. Paul, made a desperate attempt at suicide on Rosa street in view of a number of passers-by. Drawing a revolver from his trunk, he fired three times, two bullets lodging in his skull and one in his left side. As he continued to live, Koch then produced a razor, with which he slashed his wrist. He was taken to the receiving hospital, where, to the general surprise, his recovery is predicted.

Not in the Steel Rail Pool. DENVER, Nov. 30.—General Manager Keeler of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, which has large steel works at Pueblo, denied today that his company had joined the steel rail pool, as has been reported. He said he did not know whether the price of rails was likely to be further reduced or not.

DOCTORS FOR THE ARMY

Places Open for Young Physicians in the Army and the Navy.

THE WORK NOT AT ALL KILLING

High Pay and Liberal Allowance for Lodging, Fuel, Lights and Travel—Applications for Situations—Doctors on the Warship.

Eighteen of the most desirable places in the army and navy are at present vacant and open to young men in civil life who desire employment. Political influence has nothing whatever to do with the appointments; the most meritorious applicants will be selected without regard for any other consideration. Diplomats from recognized medical colleges must be exhibited by candidates for these positions. The positions are: 1. Physician, Uncle Sam's service. There are ten vacancies in the army and eight in the navy. These situations are obtainable by passing a good examination merely. The successful applicant at once receives his commission. In the navy his sea pay from the start is $1,700 a year. At the end of three years he becomes a passed assistant surgeon and draws $2,000 per annum. After two years' service he has earned his promotion and is raised to $2,200. Having gone through the grade mentioned he becomes a surgeon, and his regular pay is $3,000. He is also entitled to a gratuity of twenty years of service it reaches $4,200. A position of this kind, says the Philadelphia Times, is really much more desirable than any other in the army or navy. The pay is decidedly better and there is comparatively little work to do. The doctor on board of a ship of war has no other work than to attend to the health of officers and crew. The sanitary regulations of the vessel are under his charge. When she goes into port it is his duty to give orders for the cleaning of the ship. Under his direction is the ship's dispensary, but the medicines are put up by an apothecary on board.

HOW TO GET THERE. The proper course to pursue in trying to get one of these places is to write to the secretary of the navy for permission to appear before the naval examining board. This board is held at the navy department, and his age, birthplace and residence, also enclosing letters vouching for his good habits and moral character. He must be of sound mind and body, and at least 21 years old. Having passed the examination, he is commissioned as assistant surgeon and is ordered to the naval laboratory at New York. There he stays four months, during which he is instructed in the duties of his office.

Having become familiar with the special requirements of a physician in the navy he is ordered to a receiving ship for six months. Then he is ordered to a hospital ship, and spends a couple of years at sea. Three years after the date of his admission to the service he is examined for promotion to the grade of assistant surgeon. There are ninety assistants on the list. On reaching the top of this list he must wait until he is called before he can become a full-fledged surgeon. There are fifty surgeons.

After passing through the grade of surgeon, he becomes a medical inspector. He then occupies the dignified position of physician of a fleet, usually with headquarters on board of the flagship. Having two assistants, he is assigned to do any work which may be required, save in an extraordinary emergency. There are fifteen such inspectors. Finally he is promoted to the grade of surgeon. There are fifteen medical directors in the service. Ordinarily they are superintendents of hospitals, and their duties are merely medical in character.
