C., to report the wedding. I learned from the telegraph operator that he had never handled large batches of correspondence. When I told him that I would want to file 2,000 or may be 2,500 words on the evening of the wedding, and that the other correspondents would want to do the same, he nearly fainted. I helped him out and did myself a good turn at the same time by writing my description of the country, the appearance of the bride, her wedding dress, and a description of the bridesmaids, early in the after-noon. The bride's parents and friends aided me greatly. I also wrote a good description of the church that afternoon; and, as all weddings are alike, I wrote a good description of the ceremony, including the music by the organist. The operator sent all of this along before 6 o'clock, and I then merely waited for the conclusion of the ceremony, in order to get a train and leave the place. There occurred that evening a good joke on Mr. Dunnell of the New York Times. Just before Dunnell reached the telegraph office with his copy E. J. Edwards, who then represented the New York Sun, handed in his story, and the operator began sending it. Mr. Dunnell had to wait his turn. Edwards went off to commune with his old friend and intimate enemy, Bacchus, and the telegraph operator was unable to find him when he needed him to explain his hieroglyphics, All delays were exasperating to Mr. Dunnell, and he therefore was obliged to sit there and his paper. Mr. Dunnell is never profane, but he came very near swearing that evening in Congressman John Allen of Mississippi, ac-

He was no more fond of Sunday school and the church than he was of leaving his play in the fields and go-ing to day school, and he was nearly 10 years of age when he first attended the country Presbyterian church with his parents one Sunday at the conclusion of the week of Communion services were held that Little John was unfamiliar with the way he should conduct himself. He says: "It was a long sermon that morning, and at the conclusion I was pretty well worn out and tired. The sermon was over at last, however, and the elders of the Presbyterian church were distributing the bread and wine. Not knowing that such things were only for members of the church. I partook heartily of both articles, much to the trepidation of my father and mother. Still I did not understand Still I did not understand for what purpose these things were done, and boylike, I received the peculiar impression partaken of after long sermons. But it appears that in engressing the bill the provision was omitted and as it was signed by the presiding officer of both house and senate and the president, the bill became a law without the provision. When the surveyor general of the states came to make contracts it was found there were no surveyors who would engage to survey the lands described in the omitted provision at the regular rates. Complaints were made, and upon investigation it was found to be purely a clerical error. It is understood that steps will be taken to have the error corrected in the urgency deficiency bill, which will pass probably before the holiday recess,

DO NOT WANT A NEW TRIAL.

Two young fellows who were in the criminal division of the district court escaped terms in the pesitentiary yesterday, and there is not a question of their guilt in the minds of the court or the lawyers connected with the case.

Some time ago William Milburn and Frank Jones were arrested, charged with burglary. They were accused of having broken into a caboose in the railroad yards and of having stolen about a dozen suits of clothes and other property of the train men. Part of the clothing and a revolver belonging to one of the train men were found in the possession of the prisoners, and it looked like a clear case against them. Pat O. Hawes was supposed to be counsel for one of the prisoners tempt lodged by Judge Scott. The case finally went to trial, and the jury in its wisdom acquitted the accused of the charge of burglary and found them guilty of petit larceny, fixing the value of the stolen goods at

When the verdict was returned Judge Scott criticised the action of the jury severely and stated that the verdict was not in accordance with the evidence, and that if the defense would move for a new trial the verdict would be set aside. But the defense was not looking for a new trial. The intimation of the court fell on heedless ears. and the attorney for the prisoners cooly an-nounced that he was ready to allow the accused to take their medicine under the finding of the jury. While you are a cripple and entitled to sympathy," said the court in passing sen-tence," you are an all round chicken thief.

Milburn was sent up for two years. Hetzel Keeps the Stock.

After a trial lasting ten days a jury in Judge Keysor's court returned a verdict yesterday afternoon in the case of Frank J. Hetzel confirming Mr. Hetzel's claim to the grocery stock at the corner of Twenty-fourth and Cuming streets. The case has been a long and badly tangled one. In 1892 the creditors of Levi Hetzel jumped upon him and closed up two or three stores he was running. Rood and Leonard of Perty, Ia., bought the stock at Twenty-fourth and Cuming and sold it to Frank J. Hetzel. The creditors of Levi Hetzel replevined the stock, alleging fraud in the sale.

The case was tried before Judge Scott and a verdict rendered for Hetzel. Judge Scott set the verdict aside on the facts and a new trial was ordered. The jury disagreed and the third trial of the case was completed on Friday, the jury returning a verdict yester-day for Mr. Hetzel. The amount involved was about $10,000.

Not Ready to Pass.

Attorney E. F. Morearty was in the criminal court yesterday, expecting a decision on his motion for a new trial. He was convicted on the charge of forgery, and asked for a new trial on the ground that one of the jurors was insane, or at least not mentally qualified to serve as a juror. Judge Scott stated that he had been unable to examine the case, owing to his trial of the Sam Payne case, but would pass upon the motion for a new trial early in the we k.

waved frantically, endeavoring to attract the attention of the firemen. Fireman Rafferty of engine No. 2 had by this time reached the roof of the burning building and was attracted to the side of the building by Rabourg's wild thrieks. Rafferty took in the situation at a glance. He procured a short piece of rope and dropped it to Rabourg. The latter, realizing that this was his only means of escape, clutched the slender strand and was drawn up to the roof by the sheer strength of the fireman. From the roof he was taken down the ladder in safety.

The rear of the house was partially de-stroyed, involving the loss of a few thou-
