DEPORTER SEELY ARRESTED. Found on his person and it was not thought that any incriminating evidence had been discovered in his room.

Chance Acquaintance to Whom He Had Confided Gave Him Away. IN IMPORTANT CAPTURE BY CHICAGO POLICE Prisoner Maintained a Stolid Indifference for Nearly Twenty-Four Hours, but Finally Admitted His Identity—Particulars of His Capture.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Central station officers have arrested a man at 496 LaSalle avenue whom they claim is Samuel C. Seely, wanted in New York for the embezzlement of $354,900 from the Shoe and Leather National Bank, which was reported to have been stolen by Seely in Chicago nine weeks ago.

That was last night, and the prisoner maintained the same attitude until noon today, when he confessed he was the man whom the police had suspected him to be. His confession came as a great relief to the police officers and detectives, who had persistently tried him with questions to make him give himself away, and had temporarily, however, given up the attempt, pending the arrival of a New York officer, on account of the prisoner's stolid refusal to admit that his name could by any possibility be anything but that of Frank Dale, as he had been known to his friends.

When the officers entered the prisoner's room to make the arrest one of them saluted him with: "Well, how do you get on today?" Seely, in a stolid, unresponsive manner, stood seemingly spellbound and unable to speak and his face became pale. After a moment he regained his senses and said there must be a mistake as his name was Frank Dale. He offered the detectives a card upon which that name was printed, and when they examined it they saw it was not Seely's, but that of a man who had made no resistance, however, and accompanied the officers to the central police station.

The police got very little satisfaction out of the prisoner's stolid refusal to admit that his name could by any possibility be anything but that of Frank Dale, as he had been known to his friends. When the officers entered the prisoner's room to make the arrest one of them saluted him with: "Well, how do you get on today?" HOW THEY GOT THE MONEY. Hotel Clerk Arrested and Convict Wanted

Warrants were issued yesterday afternoon in police court for the arrest of J. D. Nold and E. F. Gordon for passing a worthless check for $25 on Nicholas Yager. Nold was arrested last night, but Gordon is still at large, and the police think that he has left the city, as he has very good reasons for doing so.

Gordon was released from the county jail a few days ago on a suspension of sentence that was to last during good behavior. At the expiration of the suspension he was tried for burglary and sentenced to the penitentiary for six years. Up to the end of last September he was in the employ of Straight & Howe, commission merchants, at Eleventh and Howard streets. At that time the firm was robbed of $25. The money was taken out of the safe. A short time later another sum of money was taken from the safe. The combination of the safe was suspected, and the arrest of the suspicious man was made. On trial he was found guilty and sentenced, but sentence was suspended.

Gordon has been stopping at the Oxford hotel. Last Saturday afternoon he presented the check for $25 to Nicholas Yager, who refused to accept it unless it was endorsed. The two stepped over to the Oxford hotel and there Yager saw the man who had stolen the money. He recognized him as the man who had stolen the money. He recognized him as the man who had stolen the money. He recognized him as the man who had stolen the money.

My health has been so poor for heart trouble and general debility that at times I was a burden.
