Papers from Mrs. Notson Indicating that She Intended to Commit Suicide.

LOSING IN A BATTLE AGAINST ADVERSITY

Would Take the Children with Her-Asks Forgiveness for the Dreadfal Step About to Be Taken-John Rush the Administrator,

A package of papers has been found which goes to show that Mrs. Notson had determined to kill herself and her two little ones. These papers, together with the paid up life insurance policies and the deeds to her property, were turned over to the man intended to appoint as her ad-The relatives of the missing woman and immediate friends of the family were called into consultation that night to discuss the documents. In this package was a letter dated December 7, 1894, which began by saving:

"Before I leave the world, taking my children with me. I want to make a statement in justice to my friends." She then went on to state that one life insurance policy had become nonforfeitable and that wanted it collected and the proceeds used in paying her debts. She appointed John Rush of the Nebraska Savings bank as her administrator, and asked him to pay all her debts and then apply the remainder toward paying the mortgage on her mother's

WAS GLAD TO GO.

In this letter Mrs. Notson said that she was glad to leave this world, and that for the past three and one-half years she had struggled against adversity, as serious illness and other roverses had kept her in debt until she had wearled of the unequal struggle and she had wearled of the unequal struggle and had given up all hope. She said that she had made some serious mistakes last fall by leaving her school work to do work for a publishing house and engage in politics. She said that she had risked all that she had and had lost. Mrs. Noteon said that she had tried to manage well, but that since August 1, she had risked too much, had banked on uncertain-ties and had been left. She said that she could have discharged her indebtedness in four or five years, but that her creditors had shown no inclination to be lenient with her. She asked God to forgive her the dreadful step she was about to take, and said that she was weary of life and would take her darling children with her, rather than leave them to the mercies of a cold world. She thanked the friends who had helped her and hoped that no one would suffer because of her rash act. She asked forgiveness, and dated the letter at 8 o'clock Friday evening. The informant of The Bee said that all of the papers had been turned over to John Rush, who would follow out the woman's last wishes. He has her last will and testament, which she made several months ago. just before submitting to a dangerous surgical operation.

After learning of the contents of the let-ter, the relatives of Mrs. Notson doubled their efforts in dragging the river, and to-day the searching party will be largely rein-

The contents of the papers which have been turned over to Mr. Rush will be made public in a few days, but at present he will make no statement concerning them.

REWARD OFFERED FOR THE BODY. Mrs. Notson's father, C. B. Cook, arrived at home last evening about dark and was all worn out with his efforts to recover the bodies of his daughter and grandchildren. He said that during the past few days he had searched every foot of the river's bottom from Gibson to the mouth of the South Ominia setwor, and that he was going to con-tinue the search today. He is organizing a party to put in the next week searching along the river. Last night he had a number of placards printed offering $50 reward for the recovery of the bodies. He describes Mrs.
