interesting and of moment Robert Louis Balfour Stevenson was in 45th year, a Scotchman, bern in Edinburgh November 13, 1850, and proud of his nation ality, it need hardly be said. "The hannies ot on earth," he says in one of his books, "is to be born a Scotchman. You must pay for it in many ways, as for all other advan-tages on earth. You have to learn the paraphrases and the shorter catechism; you take to drink; your youth, so far as I can find out, is a time of louder war against society, of more outery and tears and turmoil, than if you were born, for instance, in England. But, somehow, life is warmer and closer, the hearth burns more redly, the lights of home shine softer on the rainy street, the very names endeared in verse and music cling nearer round our hearts. The author's father-Thomas Stevenson was for many years, and probably is still an inspector of lighthouses; and the author dedicates one of his volumes to him "by whose devices the great sea-lights in every quarter of the globe shine out more brightly.

At the time of his death, Mr. Stevenson ad half completed the writing of a new novel. One of his earliest works was an ac-count of his travels in California, but the work which established his reputation as a writer of fiction was "Treasure Island," pub-lished in 1883. Among the most popular of his works is "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde which was dramatized and played at the Lyceum in Lond n in 1888, and subsequently the United States. Among his other rks are "Kidnapped," "The New Arabian ghts," "The Black Arrow." Some time ago Mr. Stevenson, who was suffering from lung trouble, went to the S uth Pacific for his health. He became enraptured with the Samcan islands and decided to take up h's residence and spend the rest of his days there. He took a close interest in Samoan affairs, and has written many letters to the newspapers in favor of the natives as against the treaty powers under whose direction the government of the islands is conducted.

Many scenes of his boyhood are touched analy scenes of his boyhood are touched upon in his charming book, "Edinburgh: Pic-turesque N tes," He received a Cambridge education, studied law and was admitted to the bar, although he never practiced. His earliest work was published in Cornhill, Temple Bar, and other English magzines. Most of the familiar "Studies of Men and Books" appeared in the New Quarterly, Macmillan's and Cornhill, and the short stries that fol-low at the end of the "New Arabian Nights" first saw the light in Cornhill, Temple Bar and other monthlies. The origin of two of his books-perhaps the most popular ones-is interesting. The adventurous story, "Treasure Island," was zette written at the suggestion of a small boy, a protege of the author's who was continually asking why Mr. Stevenson did not write asking why Mr. Stevenson did not write something as interesting as "Robinson Crusse." "Treasure L-land" was accordingly written and certainly filled these require-ments. The chief incident in "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was dreamed by Mr. Stevenson over fitteen years ago. He saw Hyde rush into a mysterious recess, saw him take the drug and was awakened by the terror of what followed. The dream was too vivid to be forgotten, hut The dream was too vivid to be forgotten, but the gem of the story lay dormant for ten years, when it was elaborated into "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which was instantly recognized as a master piece in fiction.

Mr. Stevenson possessed the quality of freshness to a degree which makes it difficult to classify his genius. He was wholly off the beaten paths, says an American critic, and we shall have to trust to him to keep his own road.

A telegram announcing the Groi-ville woman's arrest was received here a few days ago and was the first intima-tion that Guibal's family had of the occur-rence. Guibal was kt one time principal of a college of languages in Ireland and met his wife there. He moved from Dublin to London, where he became a correspondent of the French paper, Le Temps. While there he was the intimate of such men as David Christie Murray, the flowelist; Henry Van Clement Scott, the dramatic critic; John L. Toole, the comedian, and other literary and dramatic lights. About this time Verbeck, the wizard, arrived in Lon-don from Paris, and Guibal acted as his in-terpreter. In that way he learned many of the tricks of the trade and soon ap-peared in a public capacity as a mind reader. He advertised for a young and beautiful woman, and Mile. Groiville came in response. After touring through Great Britain they came to America about three and a half years ago. Last summer Mrs. Guibal arrived here with her three children, and, although Guibal paid some attention to her, it was evident he had a predisposition for the fair assistant he had brought with him. When the news from Potosi was gently broke to Mrs. Guibal, she sald? "Well, I am net astonished, as she often said she would kill him if he left her for another woman." She decided for the present not to tell the children of the killing and arranged to place the matter in the hands of a Mexi-can consul. points to the fact that Groiville's hand has been uplifted against her former partner natural childishness of the Indians, and that they must be dealt with simply as children. Nevertheless, the Yankton Indians have thrown aside the traditions and habits of the past and have adopted the mode of living of their white neighbors. They are intelligent, as a rule, dress in the garb of civilization, and many of them have turned their energies to farming and stock raising. It is a difficult matter for any Indian, how-ever well civilized and progressive, to save his money. They are natural born spend-thrifts, and permit money to slip through their fingers in exchange for all sorts of useless articles. The result of the past cash payments to the Indian tribes by the g v-ernment has been that within a very short time the Indians have expended all their money and were penniless. Whether the Yankton tribe will reverse this rule remains to be seen. Should they do so there is no reason why they should not be in good cir-cumstances for generations to come. d'armes of Peking to give special protection

At the hour appointed they were together, and Cromwell and Hayden commenced to put the young man through a running cross-fire of questions. President J. D. Edmundson and Cashier C. R. Hannan of the bank were present during most of the interview. The conference had not been in progress more than fifteen minutes when Huntington rose from his chair, pulled a revolver and commenced firing at the representatives of the Fidelity company. The revolver he used was a 41 callber that

The two wounded men ran out of the attered bank, down First avenue and into the Grand hotel, blocd dripping from them at every step. They were taken to their rooms, 204 and 205, and Dr. Donald Macrae, jr., was summoned. He found that one of the bullets had taken effect in Cromwell's back just to the right of the spine at the waist line. It was found about four inches below the surface and extracted. The second bullet struck in the left side of his cheek, plowed its way around the right side of the neck, and came to a stop after just
