To the Sporting Editor of The Bee: A well trained dog is not only a far better and more useful companion, but the act of training, while bringing out the intelligence in a dog, improves his looks. This may some time to do it. This is a point over which many owners go wrong. They are in too much of a hurry to increase the reportoire of their dog's performance, and begin a new lesson before the preceding one is half learned. Do not attempt the second trick before the first is thoroughly mastered and practiced. Be sure and control your temper. This is the true secret to success. Some people begin by shouting out commands to him, and, without thinking that the poor animal cannot understand what is said to him thrash him for not doing what and gently, get the dog to love you, and to understand that you want him to learn, and he will do his best to do so. If there is a natural love for the business the lesson will be easier to both. I have seen very ugly

The meeting at Parmelee's gun store Wednesday evening in the interests of Nebraska's game and fish was a most encouraging one. While a large majority of the sportsmen who have been clamoring for just such a meeting were not present, the quality of those who were in attendance made up in a measure for this discrepancy. Among stubbornly fought and the vanquished had the familiar faces were those of George A. Hoagland, that veteran of the hammerless, Challenge cup for four oars, the Silver Gob-lets for pair oars and the Diamond Challenge McFarlane, A. C. Claffin, J. B. Melkle, Louis urday evening last. The standing: Montmorency, Frank S. Parmelee, S. G. V. Griswold and others. W. P. McFarlane was called to the chair, while S. G. V. Griswold was chosen secretary. Mr. McFarlane in a few well chosen words stated the object of the meeting, the preservation, propagation and protection of Nebraska's game and fish, and the devising of ways and means to bring about this desirable end. The question was intelligently and thoroughly discussed, every gentleman present participating, and as a reult the meeting was one of great interest and profit to all concerned. After a two hours talk, on a motion by W. H. S. Hughes, a committee consisting of Messrs. J. B. Melkle, B. E. B. Kennedy, Fred Montmorency and S. G. V. Griswold was appointed American universities that have ever sent to draft a new game law, based upon the crews to Henley. The visit of the Cornell paid game warden basis, with instructions to submit the same to a meeting of the state sportsmen, to be held at Parmelee's store Saturday night next. On motion of Mr. Peters the gentlemen present were ap-pointed a committee of the whole on attendance for the coming meeting, and all sportsmen and gunners interested in this vital and momentous question are respectfully urged to be present on this occasion.

Ans.-January 12, 1888. SMART CYCLING.

Where and How Fashionable Women Learn to Ride the Wheel.

A good-looking and respectable young colored man, Ike Johnston, who is the recognized cycling authority of New York City, makes some interesting assertions concerning women on the wheel.

It will be remembered that Johnston was leader of the "400" at Newport last summer in all that related to the gentle art of wheeling. As he taught the fashionable set there how to manage their machines, his opin-ions are entitled to unusual consideration. Now, Johnston says that petticoats in no way interfere with swift, safe and graceful cycling. He does not believe in bloomers or bifurcated skirts. He pronounced the conventional costume "all right," simply requesting his pupils to wear plain walking dresses when learning to ride. He teaches in two big academies, where smart women are to be found every morning struggling with the problems of mounting, guiding and pedaling according to correct rules. There is never a knickerbocker to be seen about the place. Popular pictures showing girls and matrons in trousers are a libel upon the genuine so-clety woman. She has never for an instant contemplated such garb, and would scorn to be seen without her wide French skirt-un-trimmed, it is true, but with a silk petticoat beneath—and ready at a moment's notice to step down and out upon Broadway.

The idea that a bicycle is to revolutionize female attire is an utterly exploded idea. Unless women of wealth and position agree to adopt a dress reform there is not the smallest chance of its winning success. Just at first these recognized sartorial leaders were un-certain as to what the cycle might demand of hem; but having mastered the wheel the unhesitatingly pronounce "reform" as both ungraceful and unnecessary.

Another thing Ike Johnston affirms is that tumbles and falls when learning to ride are solely the fault of indolent instructors. He says there is no necessity of a single bruise if the teacher is willing to do his duty; and, moreover, that the women one sees coming croppers on public thoroughfares are those who refuse to take the necessary lessons.

Johnston is himself a born instructor, and it is worth one's while to see the infinite pains he takes with his pupils. He first makes the novice buckle around her broad canvas belt that has a sort of handle at one side; this bar he grasps firmly after helping his pupil on the machine and sets off trotting at her side. The gait is slow at first, but as the lady becomes accustomed to the motion he quickens his pace, and steadying her in the saddle all the time is soon off at a smart run. Johnston often covers three miles in a single lesson, and until his pupil is expert he refuses to trust her alone. When he finds the new rider is beginning to learn how to distribute her weight he ties a rope to the handle bar and gives his instruction at a dis-tance, but all the while moving beside the

It requires just five lessons of an hour each o win one's credentials as an expert bicyclist with knowledge of how to mount, distribute he weight and to keep the wheels flying without straining down upon the pedals. Execut at sunrise in the park one seldom sees a fashionable woman on her wheel in sees a fashionable woman on her wheel in New York City. As a rule they avoid all publicity, and depend upon country lanes and high reads for cycling. The clubs new form-ing propose to wheel in a ring, after the methods of the smart bicycling clubs, where musi-cal drills, ten and gossip will add to the amusement of meeting.
