NEEDY AT HOME AND ABROAD REMEMBERED

Sunday School Exercises Last Evening in the Omaha Churches-Children Learned a New Lesson Well-In the Churches Today.

The Sunday school rooms of the First Methodist church were tastily decorated for the Christmas entertainment last night. The decorations consisted of evergreen and holly, gracefully draped from chandeliers, and large mottoes, worked with evergreen, were displayed upon the walls, and a beautifully decorated Christmas tree was arranged in the southeast corner of the room.

One of the most enjoyable features of the entertainment was the announcement of the several Sunday school teachers of the donations their individual classes had made for the benefit of the poor people who would be unable to enjoy a Christmas dinner otherwise. As the teachers announced their contributions to the poor they were received by rounds of applause from the large audience in attendance. enations of all kinds of provisions were made and left at the church for distribu-tion this morning among the poor of the city, and all that remains uncalled for will be sent to the Old Ladles' home and to the Associated charities for distribution.

The entertainment given last night was one of the best of its kind ever given in the church. Those taking part in the en-Walter Staley, Santa Claus; Master

At the close of the entertainment a package of candy and nuts was given to each of the Sunday school scholars. AT BETH-EDEN BAPTIST.

A merry Christmas eve was had at Beth-Eden Baptist church last night. It was a Christmas celebration somewhat out of the ordinary because, instead of receiving, the children gave, and their bright faces reflected the goodness of their hearts as the little boys and girls piled up good, sub-stantial food and clothing for the benefit of other little boys and girls who will not have a happy Christmas. It was decided by Superintendent Lansing and the teachers of the Sunday school of this church that there was too much suffering among the destitute of Nebraska to have a public presentation of costly presents, so it was arranged that each Sunday school scholar should bring a package of something useful which is to be given to the Nebraska Re-lief commission, to be sent to the needy poor. The children were formed in line and then marched into the church past the pulpit. As they came forward bundles of food, such as chickens, turkeys, flour, meal, beans, rice, sugar, tea, coffee, etc., were piled up until there was a huge dray load, and then the children followed out a brief literary and musical program, in which ment of the scholars took part.

On the rostrum was a mountain scene with a little home, in which was an old fashioned fireplace. In the background was Santa Claus (R. E. Sundarland) and his reinand two Brownie assistants (Charley Drexel and Donald Douglas). Santa Claus disappeared, but was soon seen coming down the big chimney. He remarked that the place did not seem like it was last year. There were evidences of poverty. He read a touch-ing letter from the little girl who lived there and proceeded to fill boxes, tables and stock-ings with good things until the spectators broke forth in enthusiastic applause. Brownie assistants were kept busy as beavers all the while, and then all disappeared, while the family came in and offered up thanks for the bounteous treat. It was a happy lesson, well taught, and after it was all over the bricks composing the fireplace (boxes of candy and nuts) were distributed among the scholars as mementoes of their self-denial The infant class sang "Angels in Their Glory" and two classes recited the dialogue "Birthday of Our King," Fred S. Abel sang the solo "Star of Bethlehem," and the whole audience sang a Christmas carol of thanks to Him on high

When Santa Claus visited the Sunday school of the Frist Presbyterian church last night he found nearly all the members of the school, together with their fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and other relatives, nearly 300 people, awaiting his arrival. The been adorned with evergreens in his honor, and on the platform a chimney of red bricks last year, both in the volume of business had been erected for his convenience. Before the fireplace an old grandmother, represented The holiday trade has been much larger than walls, ceiling and columns of the room had

While she was sitting there and before the arrival of Santa Claus three naughty children, in the persons of Anna Pugh, Daisy Markell and Donald Kennedy, all little tots, came in to pay her a Anna Pugh, Daisy Markell and Donald Kennedy, all little tots, came in to pay her a visit. After a very prettily spoken conversation by the children and the grandmother the little ones were put to bed in two cribs. Then Santa Claus, alias J. B. Christian, appeared on the scene. A dialogue ensued between the grandmother and Santa Claus, in which Santa tried to make love to grandmother, and incidentally mentioned that the chimney was made of fairy bricks, and he chimney was made of fairy bricks, and he had the power to take them down. He wanted grandma's permission to tear the chimney down, because he wanted to give the bricks to the good children of the First Presbyterian church. By a few flattering allusions to grandma's prettiness he obtained the permission, and while he was the permission, and while he was pulling down the bricks Braton Sarson rendered well a recitation, which told the audience that a recitation, which told the audience that the bricks were for them. They were passed around, and when they were opened they were found to contain good candy. Pretty soon children, their fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and other relatives were munching. At the conclusion of the entertainment the room was given over to the children, who had a good time all by themselves.

At the Knox Presbyterian church at Nine eenth and Ohio streets there was no Christmas tree last night, although there were exorcises which afforded the members of the Sunday school any amount of pleasure. In the rear of the pulpit there had been built the representation of an old fashioned fireplace and a huge chimney extending through the window. Down this chimney and out of the fireplace came Saint Nicholas, wearing a white beard and clothed in furs from the sole of his feet to the crown of his head. After the old gentleman had frisked about the platform, to the great delight of the chil-dren, he gathered up a couple of baskets of oppoorn and candy, which had been prepared or the visit, and marched down through the body of the church, dealing out his presents with the greatest of generosity, after which he took his departure for the frigid land of the north. Later in the evening there was a literary entertainment, with select readings, music and recitations.

ONLY A FEW COMPLAIN.

Holiday Trade Keeping the Merchants of the City Busy. Everybody spends money for Christmas whether everybody has money or not. This fact has been fully established in Omaha during the past two weeks. Never before in the recent history of Omaha has the Christmas trade been livelier, the demand for holiday goods more urgent and the volume of sales greater than in the past ten days. Sixteenth street has fairly swarmed with crowds of shoppers. Commencing with a week ago the retail streets have presented an unusually animated appearance and the crowds increased with each succeeding day and even-ing. By Friday afternoon the streets were almost impassable and on Saturday it was simply a crush from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until after 10 at night. On Saturday afternoon Chief of Police Seavey found it necessary to station a police officer at the ntersection of Sixteenth and Douglas, around which the big crowds naturally gravitated, to prevent people from being run down by the hundreds of carriages passing back and forth Delivery wagons have been running on an eighteen-hour schedule and clerks, cashiers nd cash boys have be The big rush closed last night and the results are already apparent. The consensus of a large number of interviews obtained by The Bee yesterday is to the effect that the has been fully as good as last year and in nany lines better. The trade has exceeded even the expectations of the most sanguine. But ne man of the many who talked to the reporter was heard to complain, and he is a man who has never been known to advertishis business since he came to Omaha. Mr. Brandels of the Boston store stated that the volume of trade had been as great this year as last. If anything it was larger. "The crowds of buyers," he said, "have been greater than ever and they have bought more goods, but they have bought cheaper ones. The mildness of the weather has naturally prevented an extensive trade in heavy articles. The scarcity of money has likewise prevented people from buying the more ex-pensive line of goods, but they have bought more of the cheaper lines and our trade has been more than satisfactory to us. I'm satisfled from the reports I have received that Omaha's trade this year, since the holiday season set in, has been fully better than any city in the Missouri Valley.'' Mr. William Hayden of the firm of Hayden we expected. In fact, in may of our lines we believed we had laid in stocks that would last us fully two years. They are cleaned out. We have never experienced such a jam in our store as we had last Saturday night. It is true that people are buying cheaper goods, but our business convinces us that while the quality of goods sold is under the average of last year the quantity is much

Robert Raffen, manager of Falconer's: "We are selling more goods this year, but of cheaper grade. The cash receipts have been fully as large as last year. Upon the whole the trade has been more than satisfactory considering the times and the weather. While times are hard and money scarce, I believe he continued mild weather has done more to prevent the general trade from largely ex to prevent the general trade from largely ex-ceeding last year's than any other factor."

A. Mandelberg, dealer in diamonds, etc., said that he had been selling no large goods, but had sold three times as many goods of a less expensive character as last year. He has had all the trade he could well accommodate with the room at his disposal and the cash receipts have been as targe as last year, but it has required three times as much work to sell the goods.

Mr. Lauman of the firm of Gatch & Lauman said: "Our holiday trade in cut glass-ware, fine china, etc., has come up to our most sanguine expectations. We have had a steady trade and the aggregate has been much larger than for many previous years. In years hast our trade has generally closed on Saturday nights, but today we are doing a larger business than at any time since the season opened."

Chase & Eddy have had a large trade, not only in the cheaper line of books, but in the more expensive. "Our line of editions de luxe," said Mr. Chase, "has already been closed out completely."

more expensive. "Our sine of editions de luxe." said Mr. Chase, "has already been closed out completely. We had calls for twelve sets of one edition this forenoon after all had been sold. We are simply cleaned out of everything in the holiday line. Of course we have nothing to complain of because we have had a large trade."

A. Hospe, jr., has enjoyed an unusually large trade in art works, etc. "Our sales have been of larger volume, but the quality has been less expensive. Our sales have been grade Grover street, which would involve

Dr. Satterfield Resists Footpads and Receives a Bullet in the Arm.

MR. SMITH KNOCKED DOWN AND ROBBED

Neither of the Men Is Seriously Injured-Highwaymen Thought to Be Two Prisoners Recently Released on a Suspended Sentence.

Last evening shortly after 6 o'clock Dr. Cornelius Satterfield was held up near the corner of Nineteenth and Mason streets. As he was going south on Nineteenth street he met two men, who ordered him to hold up his hands. He hesitated to do so for a moment, and each shoved a revolver in his face. As he threw up his hands he attempted to knock the revolvers up, and the highwaymen took a shot at him. One of the bullets struck him in the forearm, but did not hit the bone. He went to his drug store, at 720 South Sixteenth street, where his wound was dressed. The highwaymen obtained nothing from him.

About half an hour later F. C. Smith met two men at the corner of Twenty-second and Howard streets, and did not come out of the encounter as fortunately as Dr. Satterfield. The highwaymen are supposed to the same pair, as the descriptions tally well. Without saying a word, one of them struck Mr. Smith on the head with a revolver, knocking him down. The blow, however, did not render him unconscious. Then the men went through his pockets, and obtained tained a considerable amount of change and a gold watch. Mr. Smith was not badly injured, and was taken to his home, at 2215

Howard street. From the descriptions given, the police think that the highwaymen are two man who were in jail a few days ago for begging on the street. At their trial they were given ninety days, but the sentence was suspended on condition that they got out of town.

A Phantom Carriage. Mr. J. H. Evans of this city has introduced to Omaha a decided novelty in the carriage line. It is in the shape of an elegant brougham, modeled on exquisite lines and upin morocco and satin. But the one pre-eminent feature of the vehicle is the rubber tire, with which its wheels are equipped. These rubber tires, the first ever ed on a carriage in Omaha or the state of Nebraska, render the vehicle absolutely noiseless. In it the rider enjoys absolute comfort, there being no jolting in crossing street railway tracks or other obstructions. The click of the horses' hoofs is the only evidence of sound produced while the carriage is traversing the streets. It seems to the acms of elegance and comfort in the carriage line. The vehicle is furnished by the well known Drummond Carriage company of this city, and will be on exhibition at their show room at Eighteenth and Har-ney streets for one week, where it should be visited by all interested.

These tires can be placed on any carriage n four days' time. Christmas and New Years Excursions, Everywhere on the Northwestern lines within 200 miles for one and one-third fare. Go Dec. 22, 23, 24, 25, 31, Jan. 1. Come back City office 1401 Farnam st.

Like the famous general, they marched up hill and then marched back again, and ended by doing nothing. Hascall was on hand to defend his proposition, and improved the opportunity to abuse City Attorney Connell, the newspapers and every one else who had presumed to point out the real intent of the ordinance. Judge Lake thought, however, that the board had nothing to say about it, and on his recommendation an adjournment was taken without action. Judge Lake held that the board could simply suggest measures to the council, and would have to abide by its action. It had not recommended the proposition in its present form, and it should leave the responsibility with the city council, where it belonged. The most it could do was to point out to the mayor and council the obnexious provision, but it was not to be expected that this would be telling it more than it already knew. more than it already knew.

He remained all night and the fire occurred during his ab-sence. The loss will amount to $1,500, and is said to be covered by insurance.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. Stuart Robson and a very evenly balanced company began their engagement at Boyd's theater last evening in the old but still enjoyable comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer." The numerous attractions of Christmas eve were visible in more empty seats than the merit of the performance deserved. but the audience was not limited in approbation as in numbers.

Mr. Robson's interpretation of the character of Tony Lumpkins has changed in no perceptible respect since his previous appearance in Omerica. Omaha. The devil-may-care eccentricities of that mischief-making individual seem be perfectly suited to his inimitable dra and careless humor, and, as usual, he ceived fully his share of appreciation.

Mrs. Robson as Miss Hardcastle very effectively supported the star, and her portrayal of the emotions of that autocrati young woman under the impulse of the blind god's dart was extremely satisfetory. She has the discretion not to make either too much or too little of the part, and the fidelity with which she assumes what is natural and no more constitutes the chief charm of her performance. Mr. Henry Bergman assumed the role of the much mystified lover with decided success, and he was capably seconded by Mr. John Webster, jr., who took the part of Hastings. The character of Miss Neville was fairly well done by Miss Camille Campbell, who makes a sweet voice and a pretty figure atone for a rather plain face. Mr. William Yerance offered a very satisfactory representation of Squire Hardcastle and the minor parts were in capable hands.
