DISCUSSING SCARLET FEVER.

Board of Health Finds a Case in One of the Hospitals. There was a special meeting of the Board of Health yesterday to consider the question of quarantining a case of scarlet fever that has broken out at the lying-in horpital at Twenty-second and Clark streets. In the opinion of the commissioner of health the circumstances were such that the immediate removal of the patient was im-perative. Among the inmates of the estab-lishment is a washerwoman, who does the laundry work in consideration for room and board for herself and her 2-year-old child. A day or two ago the child was taken sick and the illness proved to be a case of scarlet fever. At the present time there are half a dozen female patients in the hospital and the commissioner says that in their condi-tion the exposure to the disease would be dangerous in the extreme.

the meeting of the board Dr. explained the circumstances and asked the board for the necessary authority to remove the child from the establishment. After some discussion this was granted, providing the expense should not exceed $40. The child will probably be placed in some family where there are no children and where they will be willing to care for her for a reasonable compensation.

Little for Their Labors. Between the hours of 12 o'clock night and 6:30 yesterday Hans Wiggers' saloon, 1512 Dodgo street, was burglarized. The rob-bers appear to have effected an entrance by drilling between fifty and sixty holes in the panels of the back door. They must have had the assistance of a small boy, as the doorway is protected by a strong, padlocked iron gate, the apertures of which would only admit of an extremely diminutive person, and the lock was not forced, nor was the gate damaged in any way. The burglars, being unable to locate the cash, although there was about $40 on the premises, made up their minds to make the best of a bad bargain and console themthe best of a bad bargain and console them-selves with free and copious libations of beer and whisky, and also have a good smoke, as they consumed a considerable quantity of lager, besides appropriating 190 fine Havanas and a bottle of Hans' best old Bourbon whisky. It must have taken the festive burg-lars at least half an hour to gone out the lars at least half an hour to gours out the opening in the wooden door, and if any men took part in the Bacchana" an orgy they never got into the salmon. The supposition is that a boy performed the amateur bar tender act and handed out the drinks and smokes to his companions.

Goods Secured for Charity's Sake Disposed of for Liquor.

Andrew Knudson was arrested last night on the charge of being drunk. He took particular delight, after he was taken to the police station, in relating how he had been working the county commissioners for some time for groceries and provisions. He stated that he would occasionally go to the commissioners and represent to them that he had a wife and three children who were in destitute circumstances and ask that he be given some assistance as he had been unable obtain work and that it was necessary in order to keep his family from starving that he should have some immediate as-sistance. His pitiful story was usually believed and an order would be forthcoming for the necessaries of life. After he received the goods the order called for he would go to some saloon and sell them for whatever he could get, and with the proceeds he would

These he took to a salcon on Sixth street and sold for $1, which he spent for liquor enough to make him drunk. Officer Barnes happened along about this time and sent him to jail.

On being questioned as to whether he had wife and family he acknowledged that had not, but claimed to have been married at one time, but had since separated frim his

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES APPEAL.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 18 .- To the Editor of poor of our city. This association has been doing its very utmost during this winter to poor of our city. This association has been doing its very utmost during this winter to supply work to the unemployed and in aiding the deserving poor families, without calling for special assistance from our benevolent citizens, but we are now compelled to do so. Our treasury is empty and upwards of $590 is required to clear our indebtedness to the end of last month. From September 1 to December 31 we had double the number of applications from families that we had in the same period last year, and since the new year the number is daily increasing. The cry from the majority of the applicants is: "Give us work; we don't want charity." We have been able, to a limited extent, to supply that work and will continue to do so for a week or two longer. Many widows and deserted wives with young children and others in broken health, and strangers from the drouth-stricken districts are daily making application for all kinds of material assistance, and it is with very painful feelings that we are obliged to allow them to go away without help from us, our only recourse being to refer them to the county commissioners, whither many of them express a great distinction to go. We would be loath to utter any word calculated to stay the kindly hands that are stretched to our suffering brethren in the western counties, but we should not neglect the claims of the suffering poor who are around us, and whose claims at this season of the year press heavily upon us and should not be foftotten.

press heavily upon us and should not be forgotten.

We hope the public will receive the ladies and gentlemen who have kindly consented to make "a house to house visitation" on behalf of the Associated Charities, and will extend to them whatever aid may be in their power in the way of money, clothing, shoes, bedding, provisions and fuel. Our wagon will call wherever required. Our telephone number is 1,646, membership fees $5, and subscriptions received at the head office, 807 Howard street.

Thanks from Chappell.

County Treasurer Irey has received a letter in response to the box of clothing that the employes of his office sent to Chappell about a week ago. The letter is full of gratitude, which is touching on account of its deep and apparent sincerity. Chappell is in the western portion of the state, and the letter states that as yet the state relief committee has not done anything to relieve suffering in that neighborhood. Neither is much expected apparently, as the writer says that the relief committee usually comes to the end of its string when it is through giving assistance to the central portion of the state, and does not go farther. As an indication of how the people in that part of the country feel in regard to the notoriety given to their distress, the following paragraph from the letter will show:

"I, for one, who have an interest in the state and who have all on earth in Nebraska, am very sorry that she has been advertised so recklessly and unmercifully all over the United States." Other portions of the letter are in the same strain. about a week ago. The letter is full of

CALUMET BAKING POWDER CO., Chicago.

And Shakespeare played Falstaff! History tells us that it was one of Bard's best characterizations and that the audiences at Black Friar's enjoyed the delightful humor of the role quite as much as modern audiences have laughed over the best comic character in all the drama. But in its scenic investiture which was accorded "Henry IV" last night by the Warde-James company of players, the fine trappings of war, the sains of the court and the perfection of ensemble, the produc-tion deserves to be classed with the best of Henry Irving's stage pictures, although the English of Shakespeare could have been vastly improved. There was a noticeable disposition on the part of some of the actors to speak the English of the sixteenth century with a down east twang, while others, who were Henry's staunchest friends, gave an Irish flavor to the lines, which was hardly in consonance with the characters ex-ploited. But so generally excellent was the performance that one could easily forget these little idiocyncrasies in the general fulness of the picture presented.

Falstaff was the central figure, played with consummate ability by Mr. Louis James, who seems in his round of parts more liberally dowered than was his late associate, Mr.

Lawrence Barrett. Semetimes even this vet-eran actor who loves to play Shakespeare's parts lapsed into indifference as to his roadng, sometimes playing Faistaff perpunctorily, but withal the present generation has not seen so excellent a Falstaff as presented last night. Old timers recalled Ben De Bar and McCauley in the same charcter, but it is doubtful if these excellent players ever made so much of this enimitable rogue as does Louis James. The benchmarkly said to the content of the second of Louis James. The inexhaustible acting capabilities of the part, which before all else Harrall, vice president; L. F. Brainard, secrenust impress any thoughtful actor, gives rise to the belief that the great dramatist wrote with apparent intimate knowledge of modern stage requirements, a fact which seems well nigh incredible when one reflects on the un-doubted crudity of things theatric in his day. Falstaff, according to an eighteenth century critic, is a man at once young and old, enterprising and fat, a dupe and a wit, harmless and wicked, weak in principle and resolute by content of the c resolute by constitution, cowardly in appearance and brave in reality, a knave without malice, a liar without deceit, and a knight gentleman and a soldier without decene dignity or honor. Such Mr. James makes the roysterer of the Boar's Head tayern and the friend and intimate of the prince of Wales. His jokes permeate as he 'lards the lean earth" as he walks along, and the chaacter lies "three fingers deep upon the ribs. All men enjoy Falstaff, so did Shakespeare and Mr. Louis James has not done so generally excellent work in twenty years, if ever, than his portrayal of Sir John Falstaff, From a stage point of view the makeup of Mr. James is very like the pictures one sees of Hackett, who was one of the greatest of Falstaffs of all time. And maybe through the recurring cycles some of the business of the master himself is preserved in the intellectual study which Louis James gave last night, though he let down sometimes and very often seemed a bit loose in his Shakespeare. Mr. Warde makes a rollicking, asy-going, devil-may-care Prince Hal, but the senior member of the firm of stars is no at his best as the prince. He needs stronger meat upon which to feed than the boy who thought of nothing than to have a roystering time with his drinking friends when Hot spur was raising loud alarums upon field and the battle of Shrewsbury was ap-proaching fast. Mr. Warde looks the part however, and if he would only get over the unhappy method he uses in reading the pure English of Will of Avon he would be accounted a much better actor. This is no ald in a sense of criticism, but purely in the nterest of an actor who has done much for the modern drama, who has illumined it with fine ability and strong personality. His meeting with Hotspur on the field at Shrewsbury was a finely wrought out piece of act ing, Mr. Warde having excellent support in Mr. Lindsley, who played young Percy, sur-The Bee: Urgent and immediate help is needed for the unemployed and deserving the king with dignity. What comedy "Henry IV" is, how thoroughly hearty, rollicking, brilliant and aban-doned. It gives an insight into the low life of that remote past which appeals theater-goer, and Falstaff in Louis James production is a revelation and such actors worthy of the best encouragement, for they are keeping alive the Shakespearean dramas in fine contrast to the cap-o-bells, denom inated farce, of today.

"Yon Yonson" has become a standard attraction. It will be seen at Boyd's theater on tomorrow (Sunday) evening only, with Mr. Gus Heege, its author and the originator of Swedish dialect on the stage, in the title role. Few American plays have met with the success achieved by this picturesque comedy, which gives such a graphic picture of life among the hardy lumbermen of the northwest. Its popularity seems to be of an enduring character, for it has been before the public for four years, and like that of Jefferson's Rip, promises to continue in-definitely. As a more or less accurate presentation of a striking Swedish-American character set amid scenes of the great lumber regions of the northwest, it will doubtless attract all classes of playerors ford of second attract all classes of playgoers fond of nov-elty. Mr. Heege made his studies of char-acter and scenery from actual personal observation during three months in the logging camps in upper Wisconsin and Minnesota Every character in the play has its prottype in this strange northwestern life.
