DO THE REPUBLICANS IN THE legislature comprehend that the party may be held responsible for extravagant appropriations and consequent increase of state taxation?

DR. PARKURST HAS MADE HIS DEBUT in Chicago. His presence in the World's Fair city, however, is for purposes of speech-making and entertainment only.

IT MAY BE PERTINENT TO SUGGEST that the legislature has plenty of business to transact without wasting time on senseless and pointless memorials and resolutions.

ELECTORAL REFORM.

Many legislatures in different states will devote considerable attention this year toward devising measures intended to purify the suffrage and to safeguard the ballot.

Excluding for the moment the question of primary elections, which, however, should be protected in exactly the same measure as the elections themselves, electoral reform will have to extend in at least six different directions.

First, and most important, as to the integrity of the individual voter. The sole object of an election is to secure an expression of the will of the citizens.

Second, the opportunities for fraud in connection with the registration are still by far too many.

Third, the form of the ballot should be designated with more precision.

Fourth, as to the election procedure itself. There is not that strict accountability for all of the official ballots that is needed to insure the deposit in the boxes of only those that really belong there.

Fifth, as to the count. The count as it now proceeds is cumbersome, tedious and open to gross fraud.

Sixth, the responsibility for the safety of the ballots from the time they pass out of the hands of the election officials until the day of the official canvass is not sufficiently explicit.

These suggestions for electoral reform are made on the assumption that we are able to maintain the system of voting by ballot.
