pigeon shoot came off yesterday afternoon on the Bemis Park Gun club grounds

The J. C. Read-George Nicolai 100-live pigeon shoot came off yesterday afternoon on the Bemis Park Gun club grounds across the river, in the presence of 500 spec-tators. The match was for $100 a side, 100 birds to each man, thirty yards rise, fifty yards boundary, American association rules. Mr. Read shot a 12-guage Greener, 3½ drahms of E. C. powder, 1½ ounces of shot, while Mr. Nicolai shot a 12-guage L. C. Smith, same charge. Ted Ackerman, the well known sportsman of Stanton, acted as ref-eree, while Gussie Spiece of Columbus off-ciated as trap puller, and Billy Brewer as official scorer. The birds, while an ordinary good lot, were easy, Mr. Read bagging eighteen out of his first block of twenty-five, and Mr. Nicolai twenty. This gave the Sutton con-tingent a vast renewal of courage and they staked their simoleons like drunken sailors. The day was perfect, barring the intense cold; not a breath of air was stirring, and everything combined to the advantage of the contestants. Notwithstanding this fact, the Omaha man shot like a shoemaker, kill-ing his hard birds and going all wrong on the incomers and the birds that should have been killed with a base ball bat. The con-sequence was that the agriculturists carried away a nice little bunch of metropolitan coin. Nicolai was as cool and collected as an leeberg, while the plumber was restive and nervous, and at no stage of the race did himself credit. The result was the local man was not able to get at himself until his chances were rated at about twenty to one. In the second block of twenty-five the boy from the sand hills did himself until his chances were jubliant in the extreme. In the third block Read recouped a triffe by killing twenty-two out of his twenty-five high system of the man with the lead pipe predilections only got down fifteen. This made the match a cinch, and the Nicolai followers were jubliant in the extreme. In the third block Read recouped a triffe by killing twenty-two to the Sutton man's twenty, and this he repeated in the last block before going to the scaffold he reluctantly forgave them, however, having somewhat weakened. The death warrant was read at weakened. The death warrant was read at 1:30. He listened in silence. He be-queathed his body to his sister, Mrs. Boomer, of Lexington, Mo. His wife, daughter and sister arrived last night. He gave a lead pencil, his only possession, to his daughter, Cumberland's crime was particularly revolt-ing because of the character of his victims. James and Jasper Robertson, father and son, were two as inoffensive men as the community contained, and their willful and malicious murder placed the perpetrator of it beyond the pale of human sympathy. James and Jasper Robertson disappeared from their home some time about September 27, 1889. Previous to this time about they had disposed of their home and other be longings and had announced their determina-tion of removing to the farther west. Hence when their absence was noticed, it was taken for granted they had grne without any further or formal announcement.⁴ About three weeks later Cumberland also disappeared, no atten-tion being given to⁸ hfs 'departure. No sus-being given to his departure. No sus-picion of their murder was aroused until early in 1890, when R. P. Foss, who was the Rcb-ertsons' attorney, and into whose hands some money came when they sold their little home in north Harlan, began to make inquiry. He wrote to relatives in Montgemery county, and finally to a son of James Robertson in Wyo-ming, and in both instances received a reply to the effect that the men had not been with them, nor was anything known of their where.

Carl Burborn, an ex-jeweler, is accused of obtaining goods under false pretenses. According to the story told by S. Friedman a second-hand store keeper, Burhorn took : watch from him some time ago for the purpose of organizing a raffle for it. Time passed on and Friedman found the watch a missing quantity. He made an investiga-tion, and claims to have found that Burhorn took a short cut by selling himself all the lottery tickets, awarding himself the watch and pocketing the money. He swore out a warrant for Burborn's arrest yesterday, and Burborn is now in jail. The watch is said to be worth $22.

At 9 o'clock, when the grand march started, the hall was filled with maskers. Some very fine masks were noticed, also several makz-ops that were quite comical. At 10:30, when the order was given for unmasking, there was considerable scrambling for the dress-ing room, but before any one reached the room the doors were barred so that all were compelled to unmask in public or have their masks "gently" taken off.
