

CIRCLES OF THE SWELLS

Pretty Cotillion Danced Under the Leadership of Mr. William Doane.

EARLY CLOSING GAINING GROUND

Miss Buck Gives One of the Pleasant Functions of the Week—New Ideas for Society Entertainments—Chat of Well-Known Men and Women.

At a recent wedding the five bridesmaids wore gowns of cream-colored silk crepon, with satin puffed sleeves and frilled flocks to match. Their Gainsborough hats were of black velvet, with black tips and mimosa flowers under the brim. Their bouquets were of mimosa and daffodils, with long trails of asparagus, ferns and daffodils.

At another wedding the same number of bridesmaids officiated, wearing pink crepon and satin gowns and short veils of pink chiffon, in lieu of hats or bonnets. They carried little of the valley and pink carnations.

A third very fashionable English wedding was graced by six bridesmaids in dresses of cream white and pink chintz brocade, with full bodices, having deep collars at the back of chinchilla; in front, rosettes of pink velvet, long, loose bracelets of white lace, and black satin sashes tied behind. Their hats were of pink chintz, with puffed black velvet crowns, the brims being striped with white stripes and adorned with long, loose loops of pink satin ribbon. They carried "Granny" muffs of pink satin and chinchilla, with a cluster of white violets on them.

Dancing after 1 o'clock is no more the fashion.

The early hour movement, it appears, is a reform that has come to stay. It has been adopted by the matrons, because their nervous pevers are wearing out, and by the debutantes, to preserve the full faculty of enjoyment.

In smaller towns, where dances are not of nightly occurrence, and the morning can be given over to sleep, the change in hours is not so necessary. But to a New York woman, says a Gothic writer, "what calls can give us time and enjoyment through the night, the reform is an essentially happy and vital one. It provides for her an amount of rest she would probably lack the determination to self-administer."

The ball was set rolling in this direction of shortening the season, when the cinderella parties were inaugurated, to provide amusement during the Lenten season. Then very small, informal dances were given, where every one left at the stroke of 12. The plan was voted a success by the host of young girls, who were to be the leaders.

It has long been a philosophic conclusion that to leave off before one is satisfied is the better part of wisdom. This Cinderella club found the maxim correct. The short hours increased their zest for the next affair, and from that day to this, they have the sense of having had a good time and no sense of weariness. They did not suffer from that despairing disease which the Germans succinctly express as "Katzenjammer."

Another change in society circles is the sinking into innocuous desuetude of the formal afternoon tea. With the exception of a very few such receptions given to introduce debutante daughters this winter, the custom has fallen into disuse.

Dropping in tea, however, in its primitive form, is rapidly becoming more and more popular. Each person who observes their day at home has this beverage for their callers. And the custom does not stop at the prescribed reception day, for it is the vogue to serve the cup that cheers to whom-ever chances in at the twilight hour during the week.

This has been more or less done for seasons. The change consists in that instead of the hostess making the tea on the table whose accessories are so familiar, a white capped maid or butler brings in the silver tray with a tray of tea and sugar to remain for the entertainment of the house to pour the liquid into the cups.

Neither are there salty almonds, or wafers, or olives in this repast, but thin slices of bread delicately buttered and good old-fashioned jam for sandwiches. It is possible to eat the whole meal chincasse to the bone and the table on which the service is placed is drawn close to its warmth.

This is another adoption from the English, but a pleasant, untrifled one.

By the way, our newly elected United States senator, John M. Thurston, is an ardent sportsman, and is well up in the lore of mountain, woods and stream. Of late years he has done but little shooting aside from an annual trip to the Rockies for big game, but has been devoted more to the pleasure of fishing. He is a good shot, and art he is an adept, and so is Mrs. Thurston. She handles a rod and reel with the dexterity of a master, and for that matter, is quite a shot with shotgun or rifle. She accompanys Mr. Thurston on all his hunting and shooting trips, and for him.

She is a splendid horsewoman, and rows a boat like a champion. In fact,

Mrs. Thurston is a very charming and a very superior woman, and will be an asset to the social circle at the capital.

We have another lady who is famous for her capabilities in the field or on the stream—Mrs. E. S. Dundy, daughter-in-law of Judge E. S. Dundy of the United States court. She can do about as good work over one of her husband's fine dogs on checkers as any veteran sportsman, and last winter at Sutherland, Fla., in a team target shoot, in which were a number of expert gentlemen wing shots, carried off the palm by killing 23 out of 25 birds. For this feat her husband shipped her a high grade 15-leather belt with buckles and the best shot at that resort. Mrs. Dundy is a magnificent rider, rower, and swimmer, and these accomplishments, together with her rare beauty and intellectual attainments, make her a popular person, indeed. Mr. and Mrs. Dundy and Miss May Dundy are now in Florida, vacationing. They will be absent until late in April.

The Keeler Cotillion.

For Miss Thrall, daughter of Mr. George Thrall, who was a resident of Omaha in the 70s, but now located in Detroit, Mrs. Charles K. Kelleher, of Sherman, put on Thursday evening, Miss Thrall is an exceedingly bright, intelligent and attractive young woman, who has a large circle of warm friends in this city, and her presence here is always followed by a number of functions in her honor.

The cotillion Thursday evening was led by Mr. Will Doane, who has made an enviable reputation as a resourceful director of the german. Fourteen couples danced, the two rooms adjoining the drawing room being used for the piano and organ music led by Mr. Charles H. Eltinge, in racing, the dance program including all of Souza's two steps and Labitish's waltzes. The favors were exceedingly dainty, made by Miss Thrall and Miss Phipps.

For the men and the Columbine hats for the girls made a fantastic and extremely pretty group, every one wearing his and her favors. One of the prettiest figures of the evening was the placing of six girls holding a large screen upon which was a cupid with drawn bow. There were ballet girls for the menswear, and some, most beautifully designed of tissue paper and the center of each flower became the face of some pretty girl, who was chosen by a partner from the other side of the screen. This was very effective, especially Valentine.

Valentine was well represented, there being hearts in profusion as decoration, while the card on each chair was a cupid with drawn bow.
