MAKING SUNDAY ATTRACTIVE

Dr. Byles' Efforts to Brighten Up the Sabbath for English Laboring Men.

"PLEASANT SUNDAY AFTERNOON" PLAN

Typical Meeting to Be Held Next Sunday at Y. M. C. A. Building-Sermon Yesterday Morning-What it is to Know God.

Omaha people had considerable opportunity yesterday to hear Rev. A. Holden Byles, auther of the "Pleasant Sunday Afternoon" movement in England. He preached morning and evening in the First Congregational church and addressed the men's meeting a the Young Men's Christian association rooms In the afternoon. At this meeting he discribed the work he has been doing for the laboring people in his own country, an account of which was printed in yesterday's Bee. Next Sunday at the Young Men's Christian assoclation rooms he will conduct a "Pleasant Sunday Afternoon" service.

Mr. Byles yesterday morning took a double text, Satan's promise to Adam, and John's promise to the first century Christians: "Your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as God's," in Genesis III, 5, and "It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but when He appeareth we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is," in the first epistle of John chapter iii, verse 2. Said the preacher in part:

God made man in His own image, to teach us that we may be like Him, but He mads Himself in the likeness of man, so that in the form of a man. He might work out for us the pattern of that divine likeness that we may bear. We may yet be far from the goal, but if we strive to work out this glorious salvation from self and sin He Himself will

Now, this is the whole meaning of religion Now, this is the whole meaning of religion, it is that it may help us to know God, to see God as He is, and thus to become like God ourselves. Whatever helps to this is true; whatever hinders is false. The whole meaning of our various church systems, in so far as they are true systems, the whole meaning of our rites and ceremonies, of our preachings and our prayer meetings, of our preach and theologies, is that we may help creeds and theologies, is that we may help ourselves and others to see God, and thus to become like Him. What a lot of arrogance and bitterness and uncharitableness would be done away with if this were the one sole ter which we applied in every religious, thec logical or ecclesiastical controversy.

"Religion never was designed to make our pleasures less." The only design of any religion that is true is that it may help us to know God, to see Him as He is and in the end to become like Him. Why do we think this is impossible? Is it not that we limit out outlook far more than God's word gives us any warrant for doing. What reason have we for supposing that that which we call death should suddenly produce a dead level of uniformity in character, in spiritual attainment, and especially in the spiritual knowledge of those who have passed beyond the grave? What may be the precise nature of the change that will take place when our lease of these things we call bodies shall have run out we don't know-what quickening of our spiritual faculties, what new conditions of existence, what clearer visions of God. what sudden impulse of our growth in His likeness. Of one thing we may be sure; death will neither be the stoppage of all growth nor the attain-ment of all perfection. Do we not hide this fact by the prominence we give to mere geographical, localized notions of heaven, as though the place to which we go were of more importance than the state into which we come? If we could put these geographnotions in the background and keep right in front of us this clear teaching of God's word, that we enter into eternal life in proportion to our knowledge of God, that we should then cease to regard what we call death as the stoppage or discontinuing of effort. Life here and life hereafter is one unbroken whole. It is this larger, grander view of life which alone can sustain any hope of any fulfillment of that wonderful promise, that we shall be like

Eternal life is to know God; we then be come like Him, and that is heaven. But what is it to know God? Some people never know any one really in this world, but there are those who do know each other with an intimacy that baffles dissection, and from our consciousness of the changes that have been wrought into us by those fellowships of life, of the higher, fuller, more abundant life into which they have lifted us, of the closer kinship and growing likeness to each other into which those fellowships have brought us, we may learn something of what is meant by knowing God. Our knowledge of God must come through our co-partnership with Gol, the partnership of sons engaged in the father's business. Our life must be hid with Christ, with Him in His sympathy with the wants and woe of humanity. Thus only shall we come to know Him, thus only shall we see Him a He is, and become partakers of His life.

VIEWS AND INTERVIEWS.

"If the bill which provides that convict made goods shall be branded passes the senate as it has passed the house," said M. D. Welch, a penitentiary contractor at Lincoln, yesterday, in the corridors of the Paxton, "it will give a black eye to the contract system and the sale of all goods made two bills authorizing the state to take charge session to consider them.

passage through the house of the number of years, having committees at Lincoln during the past three sessions. And If the state takes direct charge of the in-stitution its victory will be complete. Although I am a contractor, I think myself that it would be better policy for the penitentiary to be run by the state, but, by branding the goods made by the convicts, I do not see where the revenue for running the penitentiary will come from. "Under the present system the state is receiving 40 cents for the labor of each convict, and all the prisoners are guarded. clothed, fed, doctored and generally taken care of by the contractor. That was the contract which was made with Charley Mosher. He then sublet the labor of the convicts to others, retaining somewhere in the neighborhood of ninety, whom Dorgan has now. "The reports about the treatment of the prisoners in the penitentiary may or may not be true. Warden Beemer is an average warden, but it takes a better man than that to run a penitentiary as large as the one at Lincoln, although I think that Beemer is as good, if not better, than the wardens of the past. And another irouble is that the institution is too much mixed up with polities. You will not find one man out of 1,000 who has the qualifications for being a warden. It is a responsible position, and the man who holds it has to understand human nature thoroughly. He has to deal with the worst and at the same tin shrewdest men and men who understand human nature and will take advantage of any weakness in the man over them. As our penitentiary is run, some sheriff is picked out for warden who probably has not had any extended experience with criminals, and them. And when he has been in the post tion for two years and is gaining a little experience another administration displaces him with another man. What should be understands the duties of the position and look for good times again in Nebraska," said G. W. Mildred of Ord at the Mercer lasf night. "There has already enough rain fallen to permit seeding, and another good rain will bring the grain up in good shape. It would be much better if there was a system of irrigation in this state, better for the land that has a good subsoil and better for the land that has a poor subsoil. In the case of the latter too much rain or a drouth is equally damaging. Such land needs just so much water, neither more nor less. On the other hand, where the land has a good subsoil the farmers place too much dependence on the rain, whereas if they were irrigated there would always be a good crop. If there was a system of irri-gation in this state, however, there would be a great deal more work required to run Where now a man could take care of 160 acres, under irrigation he could take care of only forty, but more could be raised on the forly than on the 160. And under rrigation farmers of the state would always e assured of a good crop. "There has been no great suffering during the winter in my county, North Loup. There has been considerable relief distributed, but I think that if it had been necessary in my county we could have easily taken care of all the needy."

"Times are not at all bad in Kansas City. said Captain Wilson, a conductor of the Missouri Pacific, whose home is in that city, arranged for yesterday afternoon between two local pugs. > "I would like to see the bill passed through the legislature which provides that all hangings shall take place at the state peniten-tiary," said Sheriff Drexel a few days ago While I think that I could summon up enough nerve to send a man into eternity if I had to, I would rather not do it."

ECHOES FROM THE ANTE ROOM

Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, to Meet This Week.

REMARKABLE PROGRESS OF THE ORDER

No Business of Great Importance to Come Before the Body-Visitations of Sovereign Officers to the Lodges of the City.

Next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock the first meeting of the sovereign camp of the Woodmen of the World will convene in this city and remain in session for five days. It was four years ago last January that the order was organized in this city, with the following as the founders: J. C. Root, F. A. Falkenberg, J. T. Yates, F. F. Roose and Dr. W. O. Rodgers. Since that time the order has had a remarkable growth, having now almost 37,000 names on the roll. Of these 25,000 are in this jurisdiction, the sovereign, 10,000 in the Pacific Jurisdiction and 2,000 in the Canadian order. It is a matter of in the penitentiary. No merchant will want congratulation to the officers that the order buy goods branded; 'This has been made has increased more than any four orders in in the Nebraska penitentiary.' The effect of the country combined. In fact the founders such an act will be to make the labor of never anticipated such a growth and conseall the convicts worthless, for it will be im- quently only provided for twenty-five delepossible to lease it to any one. If the state gates to the sovereign camp, where for the takes charge of the penitentiary such an act will practically do away with the revenue sent seventy-five or more. For the last three sent seventy-five or more. For the last three needed to run the institution. The legisla- or four months the order has been receiving ure will not, however, pass either of the applications for membership at the rate of 25,000 a year.

It is not expected that any business o great importance will come up for considera-tion by the grand camp. It will receive the the passage through the house of the ton by the grand camp. AMUSEMENTS.

Barnes & Marvin's players began the second week of their engagement at the Empire theater yesterday, producing a once popular farce under the somewhat misleading title of "Wild Oats." While the company is not strong, the players are usually intelligent in their impersonations and they give a very satisfactory performance. As a repertoire company they are deserving of considerable praise, two or three of the people being quite worthy of individual mention. Both Mr. Barnes and Mr. Marvin are conscientious workers in their modest way, and receive good assistance from Miss Louise Reming, their leading lady. Little Edna Reming is a wonderfully precocious child actress and is deserving of all the kind things which are said in her favor.

"Two Old Cronles," in which Frank M. Wills, John Henshaw and May Ten Broeck made successes years ago, was the bill at Boyd's yesterday, but there were none of the said to be one of the old guard. A very bad actor by the name of John B. Wills is keeping alive the farce comedy by perpetuating the name of Wills. The entertainment, how-ever, was of a decidedly negative nature.
