Young Women's Christian Association.

The only social event of the past week in association circles was the reception to new members. The ladies of the First and Hanson Park Methodist churches served the refreshments, and very dainty and in keeping with their reputation were these refreshments. To the delight of those present Miss Botkin played, Mrs. Wickham sang, Miss Ella Bracken told many interesting things about her visit to the States, and Miss Lillie Steele detailed "An Interesting Experiment," which she had embodied in the form of a story.

Heater Every Year.

Time was when the "glorious climate of California" did not attract tourists. Year after year the tide of travel sets in stronger and stronger every fall and winter toward this favored region. There is no climate on earth so well adapted to the needs of the tourist, and the usual fine service on the Union Pacific system has this season been brought to a degree of perfection which leaves nothing to be desired.

TELEPHONE TOLLS REDUCED.

Considerable Cut Made in Rates in Omaha and Council Bluffs.

People in Omaha and Council Bluffs can shout "Hello, Central," much cheaper on the first day of April. Telephone rates will take a big drop on that date, and the reduction will apply to all telephones in business and residential service.

For some time past Casper E. Yost, president of the Nebraska Telephone company, has been making an effort to secure cheaper service for his patrons, although the Omaha service at the present rate is said to be less than that of Minneapolis and Chicago.

Mr. Yost did not receive much encouragement from the officials of the Bell company at Boston, although his local patrons heartily concurred in the suggestion, and urged him to make determined efforts to bring about himself as a big hearted benefactor of the public. Mr. Yost went east about ten days ago and returned yesterday with the intelligence that he was successful, and that talk would be cheap on telephone wires on and after April 1. The reduction will be 10 per cent. The rate in South Omaha was reduced recently, and will remain the same. Hereafter the rates in Omaha will be 48c per year for any telephone in residences within the city limits. The present system nets as high as $54 per year in some instances for this service. In business houses the present rate is $5 per month for any telephone within a half mile of the central office and 50 cents for each additional quarter of a mile. The new rate is $5 for all business telephones within a half mile of the central office. The additional service per mile will be $1.25 instead of $2.

In Council Bluffs the rates will be 48c per year for all business telephones, and 50c per year for residences within the city limits.

Mr. Yost says that the recent court decision and expiration of patents was largely instrumental in securing the reduction, and that Omaha is probably the first city to receive the benefit.

Business men generally around the Commercial club hall the reduced rates with much rejoicing. The salaries of the employees of the telephone exchange will not be cut, but Mr. Yost depends on an increased patronage to make up for the loss of revenue.

FIRST OF HESPELER SUITS.

Contests Over the Will Hogan—Other District Court Matters.

The first of the suits which were promised upon the filing of the will of the late Emily M. Hespeler about a week ago was commenced yesterday in the district court by the filing of a petition by Mrs. Regina Morrow, a sister of the deceased, asking to be awarded $4,000 out of the estate.

As was stated in The Bee at the time the will was filed, that instrument ignored all of the blood relatives of the deceased, and made Colonel George Hespeler, a stepson, the sole heir and administrator of the estate without bond.

The existence of the will was up to the morning of its arrival was not even suspected, for a careful search of Mrs. Hespeler's trunks and effects was made by her relatives soon after her death.

The will, however, had been found in Canada by the deceased before she left her home there, and its appearance was a cause of dismay to the relatives here. No end of suits were talked of, and Mrs. Regina Morrow set the ball rolling yesterday.

In her petition Mrs. Morrow alleges that on January 29, 1894, she commenced a suit for personal damages against the estate of her father, George Hespeler, and recovered a verdict of $4,000. Mrs. Hespeler's attorney the very next day filed a motion for a new trial, without, however, having notified the court of the filing of the motion, and on the day following argued the motion, and assured the court that the opposing attorneys had been notified, but that they did not care to contest the verdict in the exercise of discretion.

But then learned that such action was taken solely by reason of the fraud perpetrated upon the court by Mrs. Hespeler and her attorney, wherefore she asked $4,000 worth of Mrs. Hespeler's estate.

Olsen Allowed $100.

The suit against Max Meyer on account of the falling walls of his building on Eleventh and Farnam streets, which was destroyed by fire in 1889, has at last been terminated by the jurors in Judge Hopewell's court, before whom it was tried by a jury brought in by the district court for $100. The suit was brought by Charles H. Olsen, administrator of the estate of Edward Olsen, deceased. It was claimed that H. H. Olsen, who kept a gent's furnishing goods store next to the burned building, had a stock valued at $12,000, which was totally destroyed by the falling of the wall of the building; also that the good will of the business which Olsen was compelled to discontinue, was worth $100. The defense contended that it was an act of God which caused the wall, otherwise perfectly safe, to fall, or in other words, that an unusual and violent wind storm had caused the disaster, and Meyer could not justly be held responsible. The case was tried twice before, but the jury in each instance disagreed. While the verdict is not by any means satisfactory to Meyer, he will satisfy the judgment to rid himself of the annoyance of any further trials.

His Tardiness Cost Him Money.

Since the commencement of the trial of Balhaus Jetter, who is under indictment for selling liquors without a license at Fifty-fourth and Dodge streets, his attorneys have been in hot water over the eccentricities of the defendant. The defendant has not been able to impress upon the jury the importance of the case in hand, or the necessity of conforming to the etiquette of the court room.

When the case began the attorneys found that the defendant had disappeared, and after a search they found him quietly sitting in the crowd at the rear end of the court room. Yesterday when the case opened he was absent again, and this time his tardiness cost him just $500. Judge Scott declared forfeited. An order for his arrest was issued, but before it was served he calmly walked into court.

Wants the City to Foot the Bill.

William Griffith has entered suit in the district court against the city of Omaha for $350 damages. The alleged damage resulted from the grading of the alley between Chicago and Twentieth streets. The grade of the alley was fixed by an ordinance approved February 23, 1895, at ten feet below the surface of the plaintiff's property, which has a frontage of sixty feet on the alley mentioned. To enter his place he has had to construct steps and in addition he claims that the difficulty of access has depreciated the value of the land.

Policemen Enforce the Order.

The claim of the ex-sensational inspectors that they could not detect men who were hauling garbage without authority is contradicted by the records of the police court.

One week ago last Tuesday night the police have arrested about a dozen men for the offense. One case has been tried and the defendant found guilty and fined. The others will be heard soon.

EARLY SCHOOLS OF OMAHA

Hon. John Rush Tells of the Days When They Were Born.

FACTS CONCERNING PIONEER TEACHERS

Interesting Discourse Delivered Before Members of the Young Men's Institute—He Would Fly the Flag Over Every Institution of Learning.

At the session of the Young Men's Institute held last Thursday night, Hon. John Rush addressed the gathering, selecting for his subject, "Recollections of Early School Days in Omaha."

In an Omaha meeting the recollection of early days Mr. Rush said:

Soon after the passage of the "Kansas and Nebraska bill" the territories involved attracted the attention of immigrants from foreign countries, as well as from the Atlantic seaboard, so that in the spring of 1854, when a treaty had been agreed upon between the Indians and the government, quite a number of settlers from the older states crossed the Missouri river and came to Nebraska their future home. During the summer and fall of that year they continued to pour in, and before winter Omaha assumed the character and importance of a busy and ambitious town. Many of the pioneers lived in "dugouts" during the winter of 1854 and 1855, and the next year witnessed the commencement of the epoch of house building in this city, which has continued ever since.

The founding of new states and territories a very wise and liberal provision has been made for the maintenance of the common schools.

For many years in Nebraska, in every township of six miles square are set apart for this purpose. In Douglas county, for example, there are 1,200 acres of school land, and two-thirds of the township, or one-eighth, is school land. It follows that in Douglas county alone the state held just 16,000 acres for public education. Of course much of this land is now sold, as well as a great portion of the school land of other counties—sold in many cases at a price, I think, and the proceeds constitute what is known as the "permanent school fund." This fund has now reached several millions, and is, I understand, used in the purchase of other public securities. So long as this money is in the hands of honest, efficient officers it is all right, but its very existence is a temptation, and in many cases has doubled and quadrupled in value since sold to the state.

THE FIRST SCHOOL.

During the first four or five years of Omaha's history there were no public schools, because there were no funds to maintain them. But just as soon as the new settlers came, they began to think of the need of the education of their children.

In the fall of 1855 a select school was opened on Jackson street, just west of the present aggrue cracker factory. The teacher was a Mrs. Boyle. Her husband was an Irishman, but she was either Scotch or of Scotch descent. After her, Miss Kate Creighton taught. This lady was the sister of our esteemed fellow citizen, Mrs. Kate Creighton, who was the first teacher of the first public school in Omaha. This school was a very creditable one, as the lady possessed the attributes and refinement of a successful teacher. After Mrs. Creighton, Miss Adeline Gower taught for a year, and then the school was in the hands of a lady named Mrs. Goodell, who was the daughter of a prominent family in the old State house, which was located directly opposite, and west of the Herndon house, subsequently the Union Pacific headquarters.

In those primitive and primary institutions of learning were children many of whom have since become distinguished in the ranks of our state and nation. Miss Elizabeth Davis, afterward the charitable and universally respected Mrs. Herman Kountze, Miss Estelle Gaylor, besides such names as Ryan, McEnroe, Barry, Frenzer, Burkley, Perry, Snowden and others, were on the rolls.

The roll of honor of our city should be held and preserved for all time. For not only do they show the character of our patriotic pioneers, but they also show the progress of the city, and the growth of the school was a very creditable one, as the lady possessed the attributes and refinement of a successful teacher. After Mrs. Creighton, Miss Adeline Gower taught for a year, and then the school was in the hands of a lady named Mrs. Goodell, who was the daughter of a prominent family in the old State house, which was located directly opposite, and west of the Herndon house, subsequently the Union Pacific headquarters.
