Burglars Get Securely Through with an Extensive Job at South Omaha,

Ecveral Registered Letters in the Booty Obtained-Theft Not Discovered Until Morning and the Police Are Totally in the Dark as to the Case.

Safeblowers robbed the postoffice safe of $250 in cash, a lot of registered letters and about 2,000 2-cent postage stamps Sunday

The postoffice closed at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and all of the money, registered letters and stamps were placed in the office safe and locked up.

About 8 o'clock in the evening Postmaster McMillan went into the office to write some letters, and remained there a short time When he left everything was all right.

Entrance was effected by drilling into the lock of the rear basement door. The vault where the reserve supply of stamps is kep is in the basement. A stairway leads from the cellar to the office proper, and there is a good lock on the door. This door was evidently opened with a pick lock. Once in the corridor of the office, it was an easy matter for the thieves to scale the railing and reach the apartment where the safe stands. The safe is about twelve feet from the front windows, and is in plain sight. A lamp is kept burning there all tht. Neither the watchman nor the regu-officer on the beat saw anybody about

It was an ideal night for a robbery be-cause the rain kept people off the streets. A hole as large as a lead pencil was bored in the top of the combination lock, just above the knob. The tumblers were turned until the safe was unlocked. The wooden drawers, where registered letters money orders and cash were kept, were take out and carried away. All the stamps in the safe were also taken. The outer door of the vault in the basement was opened in th same way, but the knobs on the inner doors were knocked off with a sledge hammer. In this vault was $3,500 worth of stumps thieves tumbled these bundles about, but did not take any.

After emptying the safe in the office the burglars locked it and silently departed. Assistant Postmaster John La Course was first person about yesterday morn ing. In passing the safe, La Course noticed something glisten on the floor stooped to see what There was a little pile of steel shavings di rectly under the lock, then the assistan examined the combination, and saw that ar attempt had been made to open the safe attempt had been made to open the safe As the lock would not work, Mr. McMillar sent to Omaha for an expert to come down and open the strong box. Until the deers were opened the postmaster did not know whether he had been robbed or not. It took the expert only a few minutes to pick the lock and open the safe doors. There was nothing inside except a couple of books. Chief Brennan was notified and looked th ground over thoroughly. He said it was the prettiest piece of work of the kind he had ever seen. Not a clew was left by the rob-

Postmaster McMillan has checked up the office and has ascertained the exact loss Stamps to the amount of $1,299.91 were taken; cash, $256; checks, $700; all of the paid money orders and registered mail or hand. McMillan is preparing to have watch man boxes like those used in the packing houses put in. ART IN THE WOMAN'S CLUB.

The department of art, under the abl leadership of Mrs. W. H. Keysor, had charge of the literary portion of the program of th Woman's club yesterday afternoon. The bus iness was not important, and was soon disposed of, being chiefly a motion to urge the Nebraska legislature to pass a bill making golden rod the state emblem, which was supported by Rev. Andrews and others. Mrs. Keysor then took the chair and announced that the first thing would be a select reading from Browning. Mrs. M. L. Hull read the beautiful selection in a most charming man-ner, and was followed by a trio, Mrs. Wil-helm, Miss Roeder and Mrs. Kennedy, accompanied by Mrs. A. S. Stiger. The singing well received that the ladies re ded to an encore in a graceful manner. Mrs. Henry Estabrook read a bright report of a visit to the Chicago Art institute, and urged the need and possibility of such an institution in Omaha.

Mrs. E. A. Leavenworth had for a theme "Art and Morality." She took the ground that while second to morality, art was one of its prime factors. She said appreciation and Its prime factors. She said appreciation and reverence for the human body is one of the first elements in morality, and any one who objects to the nude in art is not very well developed morally. The artist who drapes developed morally. The artist who drapes his figures attempts to hide his mediocrity by claiming to be moral.

Mrs. J. J. Dickey recited "Countess Laura." It is not too much to say that a finer recitation has never been delivered in the club, nor could any critic find flaws in the work done by Mrs. Dickey.

The event of the afternoon was the presen-Sistine Madonna from the department to the sentation speech, in which she said that the Madonna was not for one sect or one tim but for all times and all men. It can r more grow old than the flowers and trees can tiresome in their beauty every The engraving was on the platform and is the second picture of which the club has been the recipient this year. The president, Mrs. Ford, responded.

thanking the department and saying that the ideal of the president of Wellesley college of the highest form of womanhood was the highest form of womanhood was expressed by a copy of that picture, that each mother realizes the divinity of all this child by her own children, and that as we admire and appreciate the picture, so shall we raise our ideal of perfect womanhood.

RAISE IN CASH AND STAMPS ticed the odor of gas in the corridors and on tracing it up it was found to be issuing from the room occupied by Stoitenberg. The door was forced open and the dead man was discovered lying on the floor beside the bed One of the gas jets was turned on, but as the transom was open, there was not much gas in the room. The employes of the hotel say that there did not appear to be enough gas in the room to kill a man. The body was immediately placed in the care of

was tired of his manner of life, and appeared to have thoughts of killing himself. He had been out of work for the last two months, and as he had never heretofore had any difficulty in getting a position it made him very despondent. He had been in hard straits and had frequently asked for assistince from his friends. He had also been brinking hard. It is thought by some of drinking hard. It is thought by some of his friends that his despondency drove him

He visited the hotel Sunday night at about 10 o'clock. After sitting around for a white he asked for one of the cheapest rooms in the house, saying that he did not have money enough to pay for a better one. He paid for the room in advance and then retired. He had stopped at the hotel on several occa-sions, although he had usually lived at the Areade hotel until he lost his position. Stoltenberg had lived in this city during the greater part of the past twelve years. He was one of the best printers in the city, but he had often lost his position on account or drink. He had worked on all the papers that had been published in the city during the time of his residence here, his last position being with the World-Herald. home was in Davenport, Ia., where he had a stepfather, a mother and two sisters living. These have been notified of his death by the Typographical union, of which he was a member. He had also a married sister living in Kansas City. Nothing will be done with the body until word is received from his relatives. The inquest will be held to-

Before coming to this city, and while living in Davenport, Stoltenberg studied law and practiced for a time. He is also said to have studied for the priesthood. He was a man of about 40 years of age and unmar-ried. He had many friends, being a very pleasant fellow. He was a very hard drinker, usually going drunk for weeks at a time. At one time he took the Keeley cure.

HE SHOULD NOT LEAVE PRISON ALONE

Wishes that Some Obscure, Unbefriended Convict Go Out with Him to Show that the Law is No Respecter of Persons.

A strenuous effort was made before Judge he coroner.

It is a question whether Stoltenberg's official signature to an application to Government of the successful Moore was convicted, it is stated, under very peculiar circumstances at the last September term. The then county attorney, J. W. Kaley, secured an admission of guilt from him, on the strength of which he was sentenced for three years for larceny of the proceeds of a check. It claimed that Moore, who about 22 years of age, was hoodwinked into making the confession; that he acted without the advice of attorneys, and had his friends known of the charge which was being preferred against him they could have effectually secured his release. He had been employed with a grecery firm on Fifteenth street as a trusted clerk. On September 6 a check for $41.85 was entrusted to him, the proceeds of which he misappropriated while it was the property of his employers, William Curran and John Daniels. The plea of uniform good character and the fact that Moore, who comes of an ex-cellent family in the east, was so completely overcome by the charge that he refused to even consult an attorney, evidencing a de-sire to simply get himself out of the world, was urged upon the court's attention.

Judge Scott took up the cue at this point and gave a talk on the propriety of each man "keeping a balance on the right side of the ledger." He refused to assist in getting a pardon, but wound up by making the proposition that if on January 1, when his term of office expires, the friends of the young man appear with another application for Moore, along with an additional one for some obscure and unknown young man out of the numerous throng behind the Lincoln bars, that the two will be at once signed by him This will be done "to show that the s no respecter of persons." Moore's friends were so nonplussed by the proposition that they have not made up their minds whether to accept it or refuse to search the penitentiary for a young man of the descrip-

The city of South Omaha has agreed in pen court to pay $1,500 for neglecting to fill certain deep gullies on Thirteenth street near the intersection with Missouri avenue. Isaac M. Thorndike was one of the latest parties to learn sensibly of their location in that section. On the night of July 24, 1894, he was driving along in the dark, trusting to his steed to pick a way among the weeds and hidden pitfalls. Instead of doing this his horse plunged buggy and driver down a precipitous bank located directly in the cen-ter of the thoroughfare, landing Thorndike on the back of his head and severely shaking up his system. He at once took to his bed, being a man of 43 years of age and unused to such tumbles. In the meantime his attorneys began a suit for $15,000 damages for the failure of the city to keep lights to indicate the location of the washouts or to re pair the road. The action proceeded for some time, but by a vote of the city council,
