"RAIN WATER MAKER."

That already so many people have voluntarily come forward and testified to the merits of "Rain Water Maker" shows conclusively that the public is appreciating the efforts made by Mr. Kirk to produce an entirely harmless preparation that should lessen the drudgery of wash-day and the wear and tear of clothes heretofore subject to the usual manner of washing.

One lady reports that after washing with Kirk's "Rain Water Maker" her have you publish my name; I do not shall do all in my power to get all my friends to use 'Rain Water Maker.' Charge of Murder Disturbs the Pleasures of a Second Marriage.

Mrs. Darling Accuses Her Former Daugh ter-in-Law with Conspiring to Kill Her Husband in Order to Marry Dr. Spranger.

NEW YORK, April 19.-Mrs. Flora Adams Darling, a writer of war letters and one of the founders of the Daughters of the Revolution, is seeking the indictment of Dr. Francis be died February 13, 1894, at Mount Clemens, Mich., from what his mother claims to have been slow poisoning. He was a musical composer and a poet of some renown. Shortly after his marriage to Beatrice May Klingle in Washington in 1885 he fell out of a window hands were as soft and smooth as a Washington in 1885 he fell out of a window child's. She said; "No, I do not care to and broke several bones of his body. Dr. Spranger, then a recent graduate of a westthink my husband would like it, but I era college, was called in to attend him. For many weeks the young man lay in plaster of paris casts and it is now alleged that during this time the doctor fell in love with his patient's wife.

July 4, 1892, the younger Mrs. Darling received news of the death of her father in Washington. This left her an estate of more than $1,000,000. Mr. and Mrs. Darling went stopped at the Ebbitt house in that city, While there the young man became violently fil after drinking a glass of milk. Mrs. Darling, the mother, now claims that the milk contained poison. After the funeral of Mr. Klingle, Mr. and Mrs. Darling returned to Detroit and from that time on it is said the husband became an invalid. Dr. Spranger, who was in constant attendance, ascribed the illness to Bright's disease. November 25 1892, while in a bad condition physically Darling came to this city and visited his aunt, Mrs. Duval. His health continued to improve and he gained twenty-five pounds Mrs. Darling joined her husband in New York January 4, 1893, and, it is said, brought with her medicines prescribed by Dr. Spranger. After a short time the son began to grow ill again, and when his wife returned home March 1 he was again in a precarious condition. Darling returned to Michigan on June 2 of that year to live with his mother at Mount Clemens. There he was attended by Dr. Richard Lockner, who said the young man had been under the influence of violent drugs, which had destroyed the tissues of the body, and that his death was only a question of time. The patient died February 13, 1894, but previous to his death he made a statement that his wife and Dr. Spranger had systematically poisoned him and that he would die from the effects of the drugs given him.

The body was cremated without a postnortem examination at the request of the patient, who maintained that he did not want his body to fall into the hands of his wife. Mrs. Darling, the mother, had realized, as she claims, that her son had been mur-dered and took the matter before District Attorney Frazier of Detroit, who said that the suspicions, while well founded, were not strong enough to warrant the arrest of the doctor and her daughter-in-law. The motive, according to the dead man's mother, has now been established through the public mar-riage of Dr. Spranger to Mrs. Darling in Baltimore in March of this year. Dr. Spranger and his wife are now in southern Spranger and his wife are now in southern California, enjoying their honeymoon.

As soon as the marriage was announced John Quincy Adams, a brother of the dead man's mother, residing in this city, took the case before District Attorney Fellows. He submitted proof, as he claims, that poison was administered to the son by his wife while they were stopping in this city in the early part of 1893. District Attorney Fellows assigned the case to Assignate Attorney lows assigned the case to Assistant Attorney George C. Battle, who is making a thorough examination of all the circumstances sur-rounding the death of young Darling.

DETROIT, Mich., April 19.-Inquiry has en made among a few well known citizens of Detroit, who are friends of the parties mentioned, regarding the truth of Mrs. Darling's allegation. Walter B. Campbell, president of the Detroit and Windsor Ferry company, states Mrs. Spranger is a lady above reproach; that she had contemplated divorce proceedings long before Mr. Darling died on count of his alleged intemperate habits. r. Spranger has several relatives here who are physicians and the family is an emi-nently respected one. Mrs. Darling's charges are generally discredited here.

BREAKS IN ON A HONEYMOON DR. MARBLE ON ENGLISH. Too Little Attention Given to it in the Public Schools.

At the regular meeting of the Omaha teachers in the city hall yesterday afternoon Superintendent Marble read his address on 'The Study of English," which elicited so nuch favorable comment when it was heard on a previous occasion. The essay was abridged to some extent in order to leave ime for an open discussion of the question by the teachers. The ideas presented showed the result of a life-long study on the sub-ject. In the beginning Dr. Marble cited the results of an investigation by the faculty of Harvard college, which indicated that a large proportion of the pupils who had graduated at the grammar schools and partially completed their college course were generally deficient in their mastery of the English language. The imperfect results were not always the fault of the schools, but it must be admitted that our educational system tion, is seeking the indictment of Dr. Francis

The speaker declared that words were too often used with little regard to their meaning, and expressions that were novel or striking were chosen, without regard to their correctness. In the schools the teach ers were watching so closely for the glimme of the thought that they failed to give suffi-cient attention to the manner in which the thought should be expressed. In the translation of languages or the demonstration of a problem in geometry they were apt to simply aim to inculcate the principle with-out an effort to clothe their explanations in the best English. This custom was sure to lead to erroneous habits of expression, as the study of language had its foundation in oral training. Those who learned to speak correctly would be likely to write correctly. to Washington to attend the funeral and and those who cultivated the habit of correct stopped at the Ebbitt house in that city, speaking at all times would find the best language in their mouths on occasions when they were anxious to acquit themselves with

Dr. Marble called attention to the imortance of cultivating the habit of correct speaking in children. A child of 5 years had a vocabulary of from 1,200 to 1,500 words. It was the duty of his teacher to teach him to reveal himself in his thought, and to delight in the revelation. Then teach him to connect oral thought with written language and he would then learn to look behind the language for the thought which it concealed.
